The PLL chip in the radio has inputs for 9/19 override. It could be done, but you'll need some CMOS chips and some "inginooitee" to swap in the CH23 inputs and override your channel selector switch.

LMAO!!!
Anyone notice how I made George change his nic no less than 8 times in one day by mentioning how he tries to by pass kill files.
Yes, it is possible to make an old man jump.

There's an even more insidious reason for changing screen names: They don't leave a trail of their TROLLing! Notice how they always refer to us as trolls and send newbies to the archive to look us up? Can't do that with Georgie-girl unless you keep track of all his NICs, and that's just not worth the effort.

Georgie-girl is easy to ignore, however; he never posts anything of value, just a few snipes from time to time, which is a shame since he could be a source of good information and be helpful in cleaning up the airwaves if he chose to do so. At least he doesn't spend all his time posting perverted sexual innuendo like DouGay does.

I submit that the aforementioned Rule applies equally to every single AMATEUR transceiver ever imported or sold in the United States. They are notoriously simple to wideband; just clip a wire or two, or remove (or add) a diode or two. Therefore, all ham radios are also illegal under FCC Rules and Regulations.

It's not an effort, you just click tools, message rules, blocked senders list, paste and your done.
Doug and George's posts are almost identical in content, nothing but accusations, foul language, harassing troll fodder.

See here Cranus the Anus, reality is you make excuses to keep these radio on the market cuz you want them in keyclown hands, jizzbag. Now lube up your gaping sphincter, Dweebo's at yer door.

NO!! Each service has different rules. Amateur Radio is governed by Part 97; CB is under Part 95. The 'exports' are being marketed as "10 Meter" ham rigs. Because the have "bands" of 'channels', those "bands" cover OTHER than the 40 CB frequencies, and have MORE than the 4 watts allowed for CB, such "export" radios do not meet the requirements for EITHER service. It still is legal for a franchised dealer to import and sell APPROVED transceivers according to the rules of Part 97. Not both. FCC approved radios will have a certification sticker on the back or side of said radios; the exports do not.

As for building unalterable radios, it would be terrifically expensive to do that because there are some radios that can be certified in other services. A number of Icom, Kenwood, and Yaesu radios can be used for certain applications. The military has used some of them in the past. Civil Air Patrol and other gov't agencies are able to do so because, again, the rules apply differently to differ-ent Services. I hope it would not come to that (but it could)--making the radios difficult to modify--but we have CBers to thank for the banning of amplifiers for 24-30 MHZ back in 1978. Folks want to flaunt their own agenda (and to hell to whomever it hurts) and often cause hardship to innocents. That is kind of what is happening now with the "export" radio thing; folks are bound and determined to break the rules, so something will likely happen that will cause trouble for other CBers and hams alike. Gee, that's all I need to have a $900 ham radio I used to be able able to use with FEMA, USAF/CAP, and SHARES cause me to have to spend $2000 for a special motorola to do the same job. Yeah, thanks!! If people would just stay OUT of the adjacent bands, it wouldn't be an issue, but NOOOOOO, they want theirs and ours TOO!! Ain't gonna happen! Look for of the same dealer busts to increase soon.

Yea, i've been noticing more and more old movies that at one time had certain words or phrases either blanked out or replaced by more "family oriented" ones (I prefer not to be insulted myself and just head about a quarter of a second of diead air, it's less condescending) are now just letting the words go by.

New shows are taking advantage, too. I don't write the names down of shows that use these words, as i have better things to do, but for quite while you can hear
the phrase "kick ass", "pissed off", etc.

geez, does it really matter? It's the same word... if the FCC is going to stoop to THAT low of a level to let certain words "slide" now, why not just do away with all censoring all at once?

it'll degenerate one day to the type of television they have in europe and australia, where I hear just about anything goes.

Right after talking to Texas on 11 meters, I caught up to a buddy on 2 meters and told him of the conditions. He also could hear beacons from Texas on 10.

If 10 is dead, it's only because no one is trying.

Yes even at the bottom of the sunspot cycle, the flux can often be just high enough for 10 to open up for a while each day. Also sporadic E can occur at any time day or night regardless of where we are in the sunspot cycle. So it is worthwhile to check it out. Call CQ and see if you get a response. A lot of people may be just too shy to call it themselves but are just waiting to answer a call.

Check the beacons but even if you can't hear the beacons, there may still be limited openings to certain areas just not to the source of the beacons.

If you are implying that people, who hold ham licenses, should be somehow held to a higher moral standard than the "common man", then that would be faulty logic. A ham license is only a "permit" to use radio, it is not a "badge of morality".

I didn't say, since it's irrelevant (according to Georgie-girl), and we all know you don't have one. But that doesn't answer the question asked: You claim to be a BE at a commercial station. What station?

According to ARNewsline, they are going after more than

ENFORCEMENT: AMATEUR TOLD TO KEEP HAM GEAR OFF CB

The FCC has written to James Perryman, KC8KOU, of Toledo Ohio. This, regarding continued complaints involving his alleged operation of non type accepted radio gear on the 11 meter band. Again, the FCC's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W:

Duckworth: "The letter went on to say that the operation of non-certified equipment on CB frequencies, such as Amateur equipment and linear amplifiers will result in a monetary forfeiture in the $7500 to $10,000 area, as well as the in-reim seizure of all non-certified equipment in cooperation with the United States Attorney in his jurisdiction."

Pay attention, Clyde: If everything I say is a lie, and I said that I'm not "George", therefore I -must- be "George". So unless you are prepared to prove that I -am- "George", you -must- concede that not everything I say is a lie. So did I lie when I said that I'm not "George"?

Well now I don't think St. Twistedhed would approve of such behavior, ignoring the "golden rule" by begging me for personal information when you are unwilling to provide an answer for a question that has been dangling in your face since you first trolled this group. Shame, Clyde, shame. But I suppose I could respond in kind: i.e, where I work is irrelevant; or, if you're so smart, figure it out yourself. Take your pick.

It does prove when a group effort is made to complain about a problem to the FCC that action will sooner or later be taken. It took some years for the Ham community asking the FCC to get rig of the unlicensed 10m operators but they are finally moving on the issue.

> At best, it will get rid of the "off the shelf"

It will go a LONG WAY to eliminate the ignorant users, i.e. those who buy a radio with "extra" channels all ready in them, from the across-the-counter-dealers. This would be mostly your typical truck-stop CB chop-shop.

> Only some serious field enforcement will make an impact on the use.

Check the truck drivers at the weight stations.
Find a non FCC aproved CB radio, and no Ham ticket, give them a big fine and take the radio on the spot. The truckers will get the word out, to the general CB user population, that the ax is coming down on the use of non FCC aproved radios on 11m.

Why do you whine about it so much, if you are not mentioned on it?
You moan about it, yet post links and keep mentioning it - drawing more attention to it.

Oh, and you still have not shown any proof. Oops, was your reply supposed to make us forget the issue of proof?

Why are you whining so much about it... where are you mentioned on the site,

Why would someone, who is not even mentioned on a site, make such a big deal of it and draw attention to it, as you do?

Is there only one George in the whole World?
The person on here says that he is NOT George... so it cannot be him.
Also, it shows someone called "Georgie" - not George.
But, it still does not seem to call anyone "Gay" - maybe the person was born with those components, I have heard about such cases.

Anyhow, he is not "pro-legal" any more than you are... trolls are a different subject.
Frank, Jerry, and Kieth are clearly "pro-legal" - where does it call them "gay"?

That's a very big "if"... considering you have nothing but your accusations - with no proof.
You wouldn't know the truth if it jumped up and bit you.

Try looking up the word in an English dictionary. If you still do not see it, take some English lessons.
Apart from that, you make plenty of other sexual references on this group.
Just look at the message I am replying to, you just cannot help yourself - you cannot get "gay", "foggoty" thoughts out of your mind.

More references to rear ends - you cannot help but think of mens arseholes.

Avoiding a real answer as usual. You use the term "Keyclown" on anyone you feel like - it is therefore totally meaningless.

Some time back, I saw a car parked up with an even larger telescopic... I had first spotted the antenna poking out over the houses, but didn't know where it was mounted until I got to the corner and saw the car.

The antenna was operated electronically, from a control inside the vehicle. When down, the antenna tip was about 1 Foot from the car roof - about 5.5 Feet from the floor to the antenna tip. Extended, it reached over 20 Feet high.
It was mounted inside the car, bolted to the floor and extended up through the roof.

When I say car, I refer to a British car... much smaller than the type of beast you may imagine. All it needed was a good wind, and I am sure that the vehicle would have been on it's side.
I must start carrying a camera about, for those rare times when I see something amazing, funny, or just plain stupid.

DouGay has no argumentative skills; that's why he always resorts to lame fourth-grade sexual talk. A true measure of his intelligence quotient.

Poor little DouGay; he has to resort to "ghost talking" even in a newsgroup! When anyone responds to DouGay's repeated perverted sexual innuendos he starts crying. You better go join the other admitted liars Aanal Aaron, Georgie-girl, and Frank in HYPOCRITE corner.

I post the truth, Doug. That's the difference: You don't know what the truth is, and when someone posts it your only reply is your usual sexual drivel.

You're powerless to "rid the newsgroup" of anyone, although you could do everyone a favor and "rid the newsgroup" of yourself. Hold your head up high and blow your brains out. We're all rooting for you.

So you've spoken with an "FCC Engineer." They don't monitor and they don't issue citations. All they do is maintenance and research. Speak with someone who's job it is to monitor, only they can give you a good opinion.
What you've done is no more than ask the mechanic who works on a police vehicle if he would issue a speeding ticket. Asking an "FCC Engineer" if he would issue a citation for interference is no difference, he doesn't have the authority and probably doesn't know the regulations concerning interference.

Ummm, Jerry: Wouldn't that cause even MORE interference? Most amateur xcvrs operate at 100 watts or more, rather than the 4w AM or 12w PEP permitted under Part 95, and they xmit everywhere; including 10 meters, of course. And they certainly can be retrofitted with Roger Beeps and echo boxes, et al, yes?

So you're saying that > some < radios should be banned outright, while others are OK to modify? How will this keep "intruders" out of the 10m band?

I submit that it would change nothing, and would not benefit you at all in your crusade to keep the intruders out of the ham bands (specifically 10 meters). In reality, it could make the perceived problem worse!

I never said that, that's a cut from some else's comments. But intentional interference and interference by negligence carry the same penalty. Both are quite obvious.

Now you are taking the discussion down an irrelevant direction.
Interference with a shortwave station's "second harmonic" which won't be there is irrelevant to intentional interference to a QSO in progress. If it was illegal to interfere with such stations then 40 meters would have to be closed down.

So, let's stay on subject, and the subject is that it is illegal to interfere with the illegal stations on 10-meters, period.

We could start down all kinds of "what if" threads and none of them would have anything to do with whether or not it is illegal to interfere with illegal stations on 10-meters. Besides an SW station "second harmonic" won't be heard that far away unless there is a serious malfunction at that station. Any engineer worth his salt would see the malfunction and repair it immediately.

You guys are grasping at straws now so I guess there are no more rational arguments left, eh?

See here DouGay, the reality is that you are full of excrement right up to your ears and the rest is toilet paper. You simply aren't intelligent enough to understand that any serious CBer or freebander can MUCH MORE EASILY modify a ham transceiver (which sells for about the same price as a tricked out export radio) to get where he or she wants to go, which can (and will) cause even MORE interference.

What I post is facts. What you post is at best wishful thinking and at worst outright lies. And you're proud of the fact; you even brag about being a liar!

Nope, difference is that "illegal transmissions" are intentional. "Birdies" and hash are not. They are covered by Part 15, illegal transmissions are not.

...and a licensed driver must carry his license with him. He is not required by law to display it. The only difference is in the rules. But to use your analogy, if a LICENSED HAM does not identify at the perscribed intervals is it illegal to interfere with him? How do you know that he's not licensed? I hate to do fall into the "what if" category, but to use this one, what if some of those "illegal signals" on the 10-meter ham band are LICENSED ham operators who are not identifying. There is no way for you to know. This would make them licensed to be there, right? Of course they would be violating the rules by not identifying and by using an unauthorized mode but they still would be licensed. There, I did it, a "what if."

So, ok. Let's change it from am "unlicensed driver" to a car with no license plates. Now everyone can see that it is illegal so, according to your reasoning, it would "not exist" so running it off the road would be ok just like running illegal signals off because they do not exist.

But it's ok to interfere with signals just because you think they shouldn't be there. The only difference is the degree, principle is the same.

Not in Texas. If you run someone off the road it is YOUR fault, unless you have a catestrophic failure in your vehicle causing it to go out of control, but then you are still liable for damages because you didn't properly maintain your vehicle.

It all depends on your location. If you go down to the valley it's closer to 70%.

There has been a big push in Texas to have uninsured motorists not receive insurance payments from insured motorists but it always get defeated.

In Texas if I am in an accident with an unlicensed or uninsured driver (both illegal) I am just as liable as if he was licensed and insured. There have been moves to change that but they have always failed.

Only if you disgree with the original premmise. Only the degree is different, principle is the same.'

There's a big difference. For one the police have the authoritity to stop those who have broken the law. They must do so with the minimum force necessary. If a bad guy is running from the cops and is endangering the public the cops have the right and the authority to stop them by whatever means NECESSARY and PRUDENT. If that means creating a road block, shooting out the tires, placing spike strips or doing the pit manuvor (yes I do know what that is) then they have the right and authority given to them BY LAW. Of course they don't have the right to fire a grenade into his car to stop him, that would not be NECESSARY or PRUDENT.

However, you as a civilian do not have the right or authority to set up a road block, shoot out someone's tires, place spike strips or do the pit manuvor.

You also do not have the right or authority to interfere with any signals, legal or illegal. If you think that you do then you are making up your own laws or are taking the law into your own hands. Both are illegal.

Then let's keep this relevant: If ham A hears a harmonic of ham B from a lower band (which DOES happen, and is the reason the FCC allocated the amateur bands on their own harmonics), is ham A breaking the law by transmitting over that signal?

>So, let's stay on subject, and the subject is that it is illegal to Wrong. The subject is if it's illegal for an amateur to interfere with an illegal signal. You say it is, because the letter of the law says "any" signal. You have just been presented with an example where an amateur would be interfering with a signal. Under -your- interpretation of the law, should that amateur be cited?

Whoa, Kevin! You said "ANY" signal -- the law makes -no- distinction whether the signal must be intentional or not! Therefore, interference with that signal

No, "birdies" and "hash" are not covered by Part 15.

Not true. Claiming proof is somehow arrived via a nonexistent intangible is ludicrous.
taking it further, how does one exclude "each and every" case of the millions and millions around the world who talk to God and already know he exists? You can't "see" the wind or the humidity or the temperature and a host of other endless examples. More people believe in an omnipotent, supreme "being" than not, leaving you in the minority once again and not sharing the view of the majority and belief of most. Your past claims of not believing in God should have been arrived at via your process of elimination you profess, but it appears you merely allowed your personal biases to sway your opinion and cloud your judgement instead of arriving at it in the pseudo-scientific process of elimination you falsely profess. If you were made to hold to your own claims, you would have to exclude, with proof, each and every claim in practically every culture around the world of their divine belief that they indeed are in touch with God or a supreme being. You have not done so, which gives a superb example of your double-speak.

The only limitations is that they follow the rules for power and signal quality and mode. That's it. If I want to buy a surplus AM broadcast transmitter and modifiy it for 160 meters I can do this (done that.) If I want to buy surplus military radios and convert them to ham frequencies I can do that too. If I want to buy a surplus police transmitter and modify it for ham bands I can do that (haven't done that).

I only have to be sure that it operatates with proper signal purity, in the proper mode, on the proper frequencies and with the proper amount of power. "Police radio stations" cannot do that. They must use equipment specifically designed and approved for their operation, just like CB radios.

> > They transmit ONLY on specific > >frequencies, no others.

No, we are given bands, not frequencies (except fo 60 meters). There's a big difference. When I was a Novice I was required to use crystals for transmit but I could still transmit on any frequency within my bands. If I wanted to have a crystal for every 10kc in the Novice bands I could do that. I actually only had about ten different frequencies.

> > They don't have to worry about interfering with > >other stations because there are none on THEIR frequencies.

There are "shared frequencies" that are used for inter-agency communications. They are used for nothing else. For instance if the Wilson County Sheriff wants to speak with the Floresville Police Department there is a "shared frequency" that is used specifically for that purpose. Normal police/sheriff communications don't go on that frequency.

I think I just said that. I gave several frequencies above that are used by the Floresville Police Department. They may transmit on those specific frequencies. Yes, hams have bands; there's a difference. I have a choice of frequencies, within a band. Yes these agencies have a "choice" but the choice is very limited. Yes, interference still does happen but the FCC has allocated frequencies so that interference only happens during times of trop-skip or weather inversions.

No, the laws are different -- specifically. Part 97.101d specifically forbids malicious interference of any kind. The laws governing "police radios" do not have that provision because the FCC allocated frequencies are such that interference doesn't happen except on very rare occasions. In such cases the interference is not malicious. These agencies have the maturity to avoid the interference, something that is apparently lacking here. Back to the "why do they call it Children's Band." Now we know.

No, it's not the same. Run a car off the road and the damage is not only physical, but often permanent. It also violates basic human rights and endangers the safety of you, the other driver, anyone else in either vehicle, and even other drivers. That's a HUGE difference, Kevin, and that's why it's a very poor analogy.

Only if the failure was caused by improper maintenance. There can be other circumstances, such as if a deer jumps out into the road, or if you were one of the poor bastards that bought a Ford with Firestone tires, or maybe you have a seizure or a heart attack. Many times people run others off the road and the cops don't even cite the driver because it was obviously an unpreventable accident. And I'm sure that happens even in Texas.

Jerry,
If you decide to test your AM 500 watts or 1500 watts SSB on 28.085 that makes you the illegal station. You should check the rules again.

No, you did say any signal or any communication didn't you?

Those rules and regs were written when we didn't have the problem that exists today. The F.C.C's position on illegal signals on 10 meters, is to treat them like they don't exist.

The Good Lord

Okay, now things are getting personal. It seems not only bushite soldiers murder our innocent families for no rational reason but to serve as enemies of God under the antiChrist, they now need to blindly forget about protecting the sacrificed family they almost know best as their stupid own. Who gives a fuck if bush wants to rob American tax payers a say in paying block grants to fix things they criminally break? See? This is why bush can't declare the money spent should be a loan, for then, someone might be held accountable. Billions have been already stolen from the UN's escrow account, while the central Iraq bank, has those heading it, likely directly involved in it's alleged current robbery. How else could the plan made prior succeed? Ha ha. It's almost like they imprison themselves on purpose for our benefit. ALL Americans are too weak as stupid they keep selling US. Now then, when's the fictional God King fellow, gonna make our entrance disguised as a simple man of few means, trying to get his show biz break in the international media under the fantastically named Johnny Wizard bill?

We, as, humanity, must make bush accountable for the criminal waging of our rights as Life. "Why blow up anything in Iraq", ask a mindless as DU poisoned bushite soldier participating in death squads to murder women and children? Our war crime perpetrators we need to raise our guns in defense to, are: buford blount, tommy franks, rumsfeld, bush, Condoleeza, and likely mueller. Remember: The FBI informed US that bush's business partner, (THE UNARRESTED) General Ahmad mastered 200,000 DOLLARS to give Atta, The 9/11 Mastermind, then, worked with Condoleeza to devolop the 9/11 Afghanistan plan. A TOP SECRET Presidential Directive reported on by MSNBC's Jim Miklaszewski. A DOCUMENTED plan of not following the criminal leads to arrest the actual perpetrators, to secure criminal invasion against the American flag waving, Taliban. Dated two days before 9/11 came down, and confessed to MSNBC in March by the White house, after deliberation, as fully implemented. Evil is just the deceived disguised, and there's really not much to fear of really like whatever. Evil is dumb. Always has been. Humanity, through our public media, often glorifies humanities worst malcontents, as have deft skills of persuasion, instead of our failed ability to simply challenge criminal transgressions like those

TRULY perpetrated by the bush demon for instance. Or how about a soldiers word, not found as capable, but for form letters to try and trick the family back home with bush lies crying. Have you heard the true death count?
Who wouldn't defend their family from any irrational proud bushite soldier, who as cowards, would murder the practically defenseless and hungry, innocent and God loving, like our family as our brother at Guantanamo, while as traitors, fight to protect those responsible for murdering thousands of New Yorkers? No instead of protecting America, they spread radio-active toxic waste on themselves, while fighting to persecute people not guilty of any criminal offences. How weak and stupid, can the almost fictional antiChrist really take a dying America down counting for?

The ungodly bush demon demanded that evidence wasn't required to arrest the 9/11 culprits, that he decided instead, as planned before hand, with rumsfeld, would war our undefended families to toll further criminal sacrifices. Perhaps millions. Get bush for me please.

Johnny Wizard

It all seems pointless to his wife. ``Why is he there?'' Graham asked Brown, lips trembling.

First of all, the point here is not that 170,000 items were stolen from the Iraq museum, or that most American corporate media records the losses, as only those that were stolen from the lobby; it is that AMERICAN PLANNING was underminded by the demon bush "cabal".

The telephone exchange for example was blown up with several bunker busters (DU weapons containing hundreds of pounds of toxic waste to harm
all of Humanity) for no reason but bush's evil to steal life from God and Nature. (The Iraqi military had hydrogen generators, and can use walky talkies instead of payphones.) Why blow up whatever in Iraq to murder our families for demon bush to cash US out as traitor I ask You?

Second, microscopic DU is a TOXIC heavy metal, as poisonious to human beings, and as light as the wind. Also, being radio-active, a single particle breathed into the lungs, can mutate DNA. Similarly to outside background radiation can externally, but at 1900 times the level, internally.

You missed the point: Both services have limitations, and both services have protections. The differences in the protections are NOT because of the different limitations, but because one is for amateurs and the other for emergency services.

Bands have an unlimited number of frequencies -within the limits- of the band. There are also a large number of PSP freqs for a LE agency to use, but that number is not unlimited. So both have frequency limitations.

Absolutely correct. But does that prevent the possibility of interference? No. I live right next to the Idaho border, and the LERN freq is sometimes used. And yes, they do talk over each other from time to time. Also, Spokane has several programs working through the COPS programs that use commercial frequencies shared by local businesses. While those freqs are not PSP channels, they are used by LE (which, BTW, is -not- limited to PSP freqs).

I don't think I have never seen an FM radio receive interference via skip. FM just doesn't work that way. Whichever signal is dominant is the one the radio receives, and I don't think any skip is going to override all the towers and repeaters used by most LE agencies.

On the contrary, there have been several instances where some idiot thought it would be cool to step on local LE signals.

LE agencies require licensing, which is missing from the Citizen's Band. They are held accountable to the FCC, their departments and to the public. That's the difference.

From the USC:

TITLE 47 > CHAPTER 5 > SUBCHAPTER III > Part I > Sec. 333.
Sec. 333. - Willful or malicious interference

No person shall willfully or maliciously interfere with or cause interference to any radio communications of any station licensed or authorized by or under this chapter or operated by the United States Government

Now are you still holding on to your interpretation that "all" in CFR 97.101 means both legal -and- illegal signals?

I just had a phone call from Riley Hollingsowrth, he stated that Illegal stations on 10 meters have no rights. That it is perfectly legal to transmit on top of them.

You want the truth? YOU CANT HANDLE THE TRUTH. We live in a world

Who's gonna do it? You? Twistedhed? I have a greater responsibility Good grief you are dense. The person I spoke to did do monitoring. He told me he was well aware of the problem with illegal stations on 10 meters, he had monitored many of them and he would never site a ham for transmitting over the illegal signals. The people who do monitoring are "FCC Engineers".

He knows he will not find such a case because there has never been such a case. The FCC will not issue so much as a warning to a ham operator for transmitting over an illegal signal.

And so should everyone else. It's not a problem except to a few who probably came from the freeband and have a hardon for those that still use it, and may happen to stray into hammiedom. It's a non-issue. Sure, it happens occasionally, but not to the extent that some would like the rest of the world to believe. Furthermore, most hams couldn't give a rat's ass if 10 meters was no longer a ham band. It's useless for the most part...openings are unreliable most times, except at sunspot peaks, and even then they are not nearly as consistent as 20, 40, and 80 meters. Like I said, "most hams". Not the group here that don't even have privileges there.

Good idea, The questions I ask Riley Hollingsworth were about 10 meters.

The F.C.C's interpretation is "any signal or communication" to be any legal signal or communication, or legitimate emergency communication.

Your interpretation is any signal or communication.

Sorry, you lose, its totally legal (by F.C.C interpretation) to transmit on the same frequency as an illegal transmission since they do not exist.

Now you can do the "yeah butt" thing while you grasp at straws trying to prove your more correct with your interpretation than the F.C.C.'s is.

One, single, large antenna on a properly grounded mount will work better then any attempt at co-phase on any vehicle not 8.5 feet wide.

At 27 MHz, any antenna shorter then 5 feet is a waste of time.

Not true. There are antennas at five feet that will match or even If they aren't licensed, they aren't authorized. QRM to unlicensed or unauthorized xmsns are not illegal. Obviously you're ignorant or you'd know that.

Yes but the question remains why would a Brummie like you flee the uk cb group, set up web pages making fun of americans, troll rec radio cb, etc? You must be running away from something. Maybe take Twirted's

OK, we will hold you to that. You will never refer to anyone as "george" again since you admit he told you the truth about him not being george.

Still, making web pages that depict nude rec radio cbers is kind of scary. Even for a brummie.

Okay guys I know next to nothing about mounting an antenna so bear with me...A single stainless steel 102" antenna mounted in the middle

He WAS called, Jerry. He was asked point blank, "Is there any exception to when a licensed station may be permittted to deliberately interfere with another signal (even if said signal is deemed illegal in the US?) You won't like the answer he gave me, so call him yourself. THIS was the original gist of the argument, present it to him as such, without your biases mentioning legal or illegal. You won't like the answer. Hint: You should not dare make a single transmission..that was his FIRST piece of advice.

Again, unless the ham B has seriously defective equipment (no final tank coils, etc.) this won't happen. I've NEVER heard what I could determine as a "second harmonic" on an adjacent band and I doubt that you have either.
You are grasping at straws that are irrelevent to the original point.

Again, you are grasping at straws. But, to humor you, if I heard a signal that was apparently in a QSO how am I to know that it is the second harmonic? Rarely do hams announce their calling frequency. How often have you heard "CQ CQ CQ, this is the Big 29, W5XXX calling on 14.290...." It doesn't happen, so if you hear a signal you cannot assume it's a "second harmonic" and interfere.

Have you personally called and spoken with FCC officials about this or are your "facts" hearsay that you've heard someone else who has spoken with someone else who's daughter in law has spoken with someone who was a janitor who read something that was thrown away from Hollingworth's office at the FCC? Unless you have PERSONALLY received this information from the FCC, in writing, then yours is nothing more than an opinion and carries no weight. I have FCC rules at my disposal and commentary on those rules that do state that it is illegal to interfere with those signals. Pick up a copy of The FCC Rule Book, it's a great reference for such things. It contains rules and commentaries. If these commentaries were not correct the FCC would not allow it to be published.

This may shock and dismay some people, but I agree with you Frank. A 102" stainless steel (or fiberglass) whip properly mounted will beat shortened and loaded antennas any day.

Best location would be dead center on the roof, but with a cab-over camper you can't do that permanently, although you could use a mag-mount antenna and place it on top of the camper when you have it onboard.

Yes they are. Look at the bottom of your router and/or shortwave radio or television, it is covered by Part 15. Part 15 interference has never been considered either a signal or communication. No squirming needed.

If you design your equipment to produce birdies or hash then other rules apply. Part 97 forbids this. I'll say it again, birdies and hash (or other transmitter artifacts) have never been considered as communications or signals.

"Communications" is defined as the transmission of information from one station to another.

"Signal" has been defined as RF radiation from a transmitter that is intentional but has no intended receiver. Beacons are examples of this. Birdies and hash do not fall into either of those categories and I would hardly consider attempting to talk over them as interference.

...and the protections are different. For you as a civilian to interfere with a government service it is always YOUR fault and never the other way around. That's the difference. That was the original argument that brought government services into the mix. Someone, maybe you, brought up the "what if" about a civilian interfering with a government radio service and whether or not it was illegal for the service to transmit over you. Yes, it is legal, their rules are different. For one it is a public safety issue. If they had to stop transmitting just because you showed up on their assigned frequency vital communication may not get out. So get real.

I never said that it prevents interference, what I said was that it is designed to avoid interference. I doubt that what you are saying is entirely true since it is the FCC that allocates these frequencies. It would be very foolish of the FCC to allocate frequencies, even from two different states, where there would be the likelyhood that they would interfere on a regular basis. I suppose that they do make mistakes and it does happen but I also suppose that, once the error is detected, that the allocations of one or both are changed.

You are correct on one point, FM usually picks the more dominate signal but if they are both close in power then neither will be audible. But now you are showing your ignorance. FM skip happens all the time with our 146.34/94 repeater in San Antonio. There is also a 34/94 repeater in Austin that is 80 miles away. It used to happen this time of year almost every morning. Moble stations in Austin could key the repeater in San Antonio. We had to place an attenuator on the "open" input and place a tone control on the more sensitive receiver. Austin did the same but used a different tone. Mobles in Austin now usually don't key the repeater but you can still hear them on the input. The mode of the transmitter does not cause or prevent skip.

This is one of the reasons for the newer trunking systems. "Skip" doesn't interfere with them because there are so many channels that the system can route the traffic through a clear channel. If the incoming skip doesn't have the right encoding or "hardware address," to use a networking term, it won't be allowed in. The older UHF systems used squalk signals or digital sqeek to key the system. If a signal came in from out of the area with the wrong code it was ignored. Interference does occur in the government services but technology exists to avoid it and ignore it. Quite often I hear the Victory Police Department which is almost 90 miles away. They have some of the same channels as the Floresville Police Department. They don't interfere with each other because of the encoding techniques the do "skip in" and are perfectly readable to an open receiver.

You are comparing apples and oranges again. If that "idiot" interferes with the police radio or ham radio repeater it is intentional and malicious and illegal.
Government radio operators do not maliciously interfere with each other like some ham operators do. That's what I mean by the interference between government radios is not malicious.

You are exactly correct. We see what happens with there is a "lack of accountability." It is there but the FCC doesn't enforce it.

I mounted mine dead-center on the roo-guard and tie it back. That way I can still use it with my camper, and it doesn't snag on the brush like it does when it's mounted on the rear bumper and tied forward.

Then, according to you, Part 97 contradicts, or does it specify by saying "any communication or signal."

It is perfectly ok and it happens quite often. One part of a statute is less specific or restrictive than another. You have "proved" nothing.

You didn't specify that he did monitoring, you simply claimed that he was an engineer. No, the "engineers" do not do the monitoring.

Go to fcc.gov, do a search for Riley Hollingsworth or Norman Goldstein. Their numbers are listed and they answer their own phones.

Don't tell me that it doesn't happen because it happens all the time. Pick a signal (preferably local for the sake of demonstration) on a lower band, then tune to it's second or third harmonic. Keep doing that and I'll bet you that you will find more than a couple harmonic signals in less than an hour. If you can't then you either aren't looking or you don't know how to multiply. And if you don't know how to divide then you will never be able to tell if a signal is a harmonic from a lower frequency. And BTW, don't confuse harmonics with superhet images, which can be eliminated by knowing your IF freq and using simple addition/subtraction.

I didn't say that skip doesn't happen, just that it rarely interferes. But I didn't think I needed to be more specific and say that I have never heard interference from skip on PSP FM radios, because that is what were were talking about, right? Most PSP radios are squelched to prevent a false break, even from the infrequent skip (and sometimes even from their own base). But you spend some time on your scanner, log the skip on the PSP channels, then post it, okay?

VERY GOOD! Now, go back and read your previous posts.

I assume you mean both government and PSP stations, and for the most part you are correct. Amateurs are expected to behave like amateurs, and professionals are expected to behave like professionals.

Lack of enforcement -is- lack of accountability. Laws are meaningless unless they are enforced.

Wrong again. Part 15 covers every radio frequency device, hence the title:
"Radio frequency devices". It covers intentional radiators AS WELL AS unintentional and incidental radiators. Cordless phones, medical devices, hearing aids, remote controls, etc, are all covered under Part 15. Even the 1750m band exists only because of Part 15. What Part 15 does NOT allow is excessive interference from any device capable of causing it to any device (or station) that has legal protection from interference. That's why the unintention and incidental emission levels are so low on emergency freqs like 2182 KHz.

To adopt your own argument, how can you tell that those "birdies" and "hash" are not intentionally radiated signals? Many types of igital communications sound like "hash", and many types of remote controls sound like "birdies". So you don't know if that noise is a communication signal or not.

This has been shown before. Get off your fat ass and do an actual test. You will find that a Stainless Steel 102" whip can be marginally beat. You can not realize this by reading a book! Get off your ass.

P.S. A 1/4 wave whip of thicker more conductive material can't be beat by a shorter antenna, but my comment was about the common 102" SS whip.

A repost of a ACTUAL test:

The antennas:

108" SS whip
7 foot Firestik
5'4" X- Terminator double coil

The conditions of this test follow:

1. All connected to Hustler Quick disconnects
2. All used at 1.5 : 1 match or better
3. All tested with a constant tone, constant power transmitter
4. All used on a three magnet mount on the roof of a truck
5. All tested from a parked vehicle that never moved during each test
6. All tested within a very brief time period of each other (15 sec.)
7. All used a stationary Kenwood 940 receiver.
8. The 940 used a vertical beam free and clear of obstacles.
9. A video camera and a 31" television was used to display a (31" S- METER) and record the results.

Thirteen mile free and clear of obstacles.

108" SS 5.2 s-units
Firestik 5.3 s-units
X-Term 5.4 s-units

Thirteen mile in the middle of the woods test

108" SS 3.3 s-units
Firestik 3.7 s-units
X-Term 3.9 s-units

Twenty four mile free and clear of obstacles.
108" SS .25 s-units
Firestik 1.3 s-units

X-Term 1.5 s-units

Oh I see those shiny loading coils must really increase the gain of the antenna huh.

I never explained why one antenna outperforms another. I just posted the numbers. You can draw your own explanation.

The coil antenna is very ugly. I would opt for a antenna with slightly less antenna gain but with a more pleasant gain for the eyes. Ultimate antenna gain isn't everything.

You obviously haven't been around ham radio very long. With todays plug and play equipment, harmonics are rarely a problem, but in the days when many hams homebrewed equipment, you could often hear the harmonic of some homebrew transmitter. Improper tuning of some commercial built transmitters could cause them to produce a harmonic. Many a ham got a warning from the FCC for such. That is why the ham bands were set up to be harmonically related, so that harmonics were not as likely to interfer with other services.

Oh sure I supose the 31" S- METER really proves the accuracy of the test better than using Smith charts LOL.

How do you calculate antenna gain with a smith chart?

Using Mmana to simulate antennas;

The difference between a 5' and a 8' copper antenna is 0.3 dB

The difference between a 8' copper and 8' stainless steel antenna is 0.6 dB

(by the book) a 5' copper antenna will beat a 8' stainless antenna.

Why yes it does. It uses a actual voltage in a actual receiver to give the best representation of a actual antenna in a actual situation.

A smith chart CAN NOT compare real antennas in this type of hair splitting detail. A all parameter inclusive 31" S-meter can.

It is important to note that the S-meter need not be accurate. It just needs to be consistent enough to give higher or lower readings.
It accomplishes this and gives a accurate gain order ranking of the antennas tested.

You hit the nail on the head.

Many/most just assume that a 1/4 wave antenna will beat a shorter antenna. They look no further. They read the theory and take the theory as the way things work in the real world. Simple theory isn't always realized in the real world. A quarter wave will only beat a shorter antenna if all the antenna variables are the same except for the length.

In the real world our 1/4 wave antenna is a thin SS whip. It can not beat a inch thick 1/4 wave copper antenna. It can't even beat some properly designed 5 foot antennas.

Your test doesn't mean crap, and I'll tell you why. For starters, your -first-test (that you failed to mention) using -two- receivers came up with inconsistent results for five different antennas tested on the transmitter:

>Tentec: F, 3.1 s units
> E, 3.05
> A, 3

This tells me that something is -definately- wrong with your testing procedure.

>The conditions of this test follow:
>1. All connected to Hustler Quick disconnects

That could be an issue if one or more of the connectors were not clean, assuming they didn't use the same connector;

>2. All used at 1.5 : 1 match or better

The match for each antenna was not listed, and I can only assume that they were different. Regardless, what was the forward power with each antenna, and why was that not listed?

>3. All tested with a constant tone, constant power transmitter

Using....? An audio signal generator and a TRC-453? Was the radio modded? What was the modulation percentage?

>4. All used on a three magnet mount on the roof of a truck

Now there's a BIG problem -- improper grounding!

>5. All tested from a parked vehicle that never moved during each test

How did the radio get power? Cigarette lighter? Six feet of 00-guage superflex? Was the engine running? If not, was the battery voltage checked before and after the tests?

>6. All tested within a very brief time period of each other (15 sec.)

Save for the all-too-uncommon microburst, how is that significant?

>7. All used a stationary Kenwood 940 receiver.

Why didn't you use two receivers for the second test?

>8. The 940 used a vertical beam free and clear of obstacles.

Beam, schmeam. What was the resonant frequency of the antenna for the receiver? What kind of match was on the receiver? Were all antennas tuned and tested on the same freq?

>9. A video camera and a 31" television was used to display
> a (31" S- METER) and record the results.
>Thirteen mile free and clear of obstacles.

At 13 miles, another issue you will have is radiation angle. I don't suppose you measured that either, did you? Do you know why that is important? Because you don't state the HAAT of the antenna for either the transmitter or the receiver, nor do you state whether the 13/24 miles was flat. If you just wanted to get a relative signal strength reading without the confound of HAAT, why did you stroll 13 miles instead of only half a mile or so? All you needed to do was clear the near-field, which most engineers consider to be six wavelengths for HF (or 66 meters, a far cry from 13 miles where a lot can happen inbetween).

There are WAY too many issues with your test, and any or all of them could have been a factor in your inconsistent readings. Looking back an those threads, it appears that you already knew that, too.

My "fat ass" has done this test more than once, more than twice.... If, in fact, you do a PROPER test, eliminating ALL reasonable confounds and recording ALL the data, you WILL find that the 9 foot whip just can't be beat, as my "fat ass" has proven more than a DOZEN times before while teaching students how to map an antenna field (which, BTW, was a lab demo for a number of different issues, not just antenna types and field strength measurements).

Here's your assignment for tomorrow, Tnom:

Compare the resistive losses due to skin effect for a 1/4 wave vertical (27 MHz) made of both stainless steel and solid silver wire of the same diameter. And I'm going to help you out by reminding you to integrate the current distribution on the antenna, and I'll even let you pick an arbitrary diameter and disregard the taper. Show your work (and don't skip steps).

My point exactly, it's extremely rare and you must have an extremely strong primary to be able to hear a "second harmonic."
Been a ham since the 70's.

Yes it did yield a inconsistency but the inconsistency was brought about by very close results judged by real people. Something you should expect in the real world. The second test (31" S-meter) was like a slow motion replay. It gave me the ability to take more of the human factor out.

Regardless of the inconsistency it was still shown that a 1/4 wave SS antenna could be beat by a shorter antenna. This was consistent with BOTH receivers.

Everything was done on the same frequency. It doesn't matter what

What you say is true but it does not make the interference caused by these devices either communications or signals by definition.

I know the difference between hash and a "digital signal." Also remote controls don't produce signals on the ham bands and since it is illegal to have "remote controlled" rigs unless you are a repeater or a space station your argument is meaningless. Remote controls don't sound like "birdies" anyway. It's quite obvious that data is being sent. You are grasping at straws again.

No, you put forth the hypothetical situation of a civilan keying up on a police frequency. It was you who asked if it would be illegal for the police to "interfere" with the illegal signal. I am simply saying that the rules are different for the government radio system and it is always the fault of the illegal station and the government station, in a legal sense, cannot interfere or be sited for interference.

oh? " I don't think I have never seen an FM radio receive interference via skip. FM just doesn't work that way. "

FM does skip, FM radios do receive FM signals via skip. Interference does happen and it occasionally does cause problems.
You're grasping again (ie changing the conditions of your point)

The definitive measurement is the one that goes directly to the source.

A S-meter is gets closer to the source than any polar plot.

Late breaking news...sort of.

I received a note from Hollingworth's office:
"While we neither condone or encourage amateur operators to interfere with these illegal stations it is unlikely that the amateur operator would be sited for interference."

Now is that a political answer or what? It is the official position of the ARRL Amateur Auxiliary to send notices to stations causing interference.
Will anything be done? Don't know.

From personal experience, the longer antenna -seems- to work better. Maybe it's the more broadbanded part, maybe it's the power handling capability without frying a load coil, or both.

What sucks is the tree pruning, with the long one.

To answer the OP, forget the twin talkers, they're too close

What "human factor"? Are these 'humans' incapable of reading a meter? How much judgment does it take to look at the meter, see that the little needle is pointing to xx.x, then write it down?

WTF is a "SWR null"? You used a bridge? If you did and they all "nulled", why didn't you say so instead of saying that they all matched at 1.5:1 or better?

A transmitter with swang and no limiter. Gee, what a suprise. Once again, what was the modulation percentage? And knowing the radio is modified for swang, how was the modulation percentage measured?

>>>4. All used on a three magnet mount on the roof of a truck

Yes... inadequately. With improper grounding at the base of the antenna, where does part of your signal go (ESPECIALLY with mag-mounts)? Right off the coax! So you weren't testing just antennas, you were testing antenna/radiating-coax antenna systems.

You didn't say how the radio was powered. Was it measured at the radio during transmit? If you used a cig lighter, you can drop a volt or two on key-up. If the radio wasn't properly grounded, that will affect how much power goes out the antenna just as much as SWR. And by 'properly grounded' I mean RF ground, not DC ground. Well?

have (and still do) use several different mobile antennas on several different vehicles, and the 9' whip beats them all hands down.

I have, and I don't have to post fudged numbers to prove it. Anyone can just get on the air and find out for themselves.

Hardly. There's a ham down the road that does a lot of radio experiments, but very little talk. Like I said in another post, there's a lot more to amateur radio than DX and skip.

I'd love to do that, might be a good winter project.

1730. cobra 29 echo/talkback dilema

hi all i had a parts radio,,galaxy 33hml so i took the echo board and installed it in my cobra 29 ltd st installation went smoothly but upon powering it up to test
i had the pa/cb switch in the pa position i had my talkback speaker attached as well with a wire in both ext speaker and pa jack's well,,i keyed up,,a few times then realised my mistake upon switching to cb talkback,,at full volume is bareley audable so i tested the radio anyways and it talked great lots of good reports loud and clear and good on the echo figured maybe i killed talkback speaker when i keyed up in pa mode have been wanting talkback mod in radio for some time so for lack of my local radio shack having a pot 47-100 ohms i went with a 25 ohm rheostat to try well,,talkback is loud,,but can also be adjusted to comfortable level but many complaints,,im too quiet now is it possable due to the lower resistance i used that more of "my"audio is going to support talkback,,than transmit i am thinking of adding a 47 ohm resistor with the 25 ohm rheostat giving me adjustable talkback from 47-72 ohms right within the popular suggested range or is it possable that keying up in pa mode with talkback speaker plugged in could damage radio sorry so long winded but less details may not have gave egnough info thanks in advance

don

Sure a polar plot would be fine, plot a 8' stainless antenna and a 5' copper antenna and post the results.

Depends on what kind of tube you are looking for. The station gets their big tubes directly from the manufacturer. For standard consumer tubes, I don't like buying them mail-order because they cost too much, and many times are used (low emission) and the pins are just buffed up to make them look new. I highly recommend getting a tube tester and start hoarding them from wherever you can find them, usually at garage sales and thrift shops. A couple months ago I went to a yard sale and got an old reel-2-reel that they just gave away because it was old and ugly. Inside were a half-dozen Telefunken 12AX7s and several other goodies. The tubes are out there, you just have to know how they are packaged.

Then we would have more numbers to compare with Tnom's. And winter would be an excellent time to do it because of the ground conditions (you get snow, don't you?).

I do lots of testing too from HF through 200THz, so what. I've been testing DSP for 24GHz EME. Do I ID? Yes.

that's right train, especially when they have people like the one's mentioned in this dicey article copied below. man i sure wouldn't want to be associated with people that break the law and stuff like that.......harde har, har, har.....

From the ARRL Letter, October 17, 2003

The FCC says an Indiana amateur has agreed to relinquish his Amateur Radio operator license for two years as a result of allegations that he interfered with local police department radio transmissions. FCC Special
Counsel Riley Hollingsworth outlined the terms of the agreement in a September 23 letter to Technician licensee Justin L. Whaley, KC9DCP, of Columbia City. According to the letter, the FCC notified Whaley last March that close-proximity direction finding evidence indicated that the licensee had interfered with the operation of the Columbia City Police Department radio system early this year.

The agreement--which Whaley had not yet signed as of this week--calls on him to resolve the enforcement issues he faces by relinquishing his Amateur Radio operator license for two years. Whaley also must agree not to maintain an amateur station nor to use anyone else's station.
Hollingsworth said that since Whaley shut down his station last March 28, the agreement would remain in effect until March 28, 2005.
Hollingsworth requested that Whaley sign the letter and return it to the FCC along with his Amateur Radio license.

The FCC meanwhile is seeking additional information from three other licensees who allegedly used ham gear to transmit on police or emergency frequencies.

Hollingsworth wrote General-class licensee Tom L. Christman, KB2NAV, of Albany, New York, on September 22 regarding a complaint from the Albany County Sheriff's Department's Office of Professional Standards. The FCC asked Christman, a sheriff's department maintenance worker, to respond to allegations that he used his ham radio transceiver to make transmissions on sheriff's department frequencies last December "without a legitimate purpose." The sheriff's department has requested that the FCC suspend or revoke Christman's amateur license.

Hollingsworth also wrote two North Carolina Technician-class amateurs--Daniel E. Buchanan, KF4LNE, of Montreat, and Joseph S. "Shannon" Hutchins, KG4SXD, of Swannanoa--concerning complaints from the Black Mountain Police Department alleging that both had transmitted on police frequencies last February. The transmissions apparently were made using a handheld transceiver while Buchanan and Hutchins were in the same vehicle.

Documents from the Asheville/Buncombe County District Attorney's Office assert that the Black Mountain police channel had experienced "numerous transmissions" earlier this year on a police frequency (156.01 MHz) "including verbal profanity and racial slurs." A police officer who questioned Buchanan and Hutchins said they admitted transmitting on police frequencies. They later voluntarily signed statements to that effect in which each blamed the other for making the racial slur.

The District Attorney's Office statement said that one transmission last February 8, while police were attempting to respond to an auto accident involving multiple injuries, "prevented officers from communication with dispatch or each other."

Hollingsworth this month also heard from amateurs in the Los Angeles area that some repeater owners are shutting down their machines due to alleged ongoing interference from Jack Gerritsen, formerly KG6IRO. The FCC Wireless Telecommunications Bureau set aside Gerritsen's license in 2001 a few days after granting it after learning that he'd been convicted the previous year on state charges of interfering with Los Angeles Police Department radio transmissions.

Imprisoned, paroled and imprisoned again after breaking parole for allegedly having and operating radio equipment without a license, Gerritsen was released early due to jail overcrowding.

Hollingsworth said the FCC continues to work the case, but he expressed frustration that Gerritsen was let out of prison again with no conditions or restrictions "even regarding radio, which is what he was in there for in the first place."

OOOPS!

Now he's backing down a bit. The thing is that your "auxilliary" is with ARRL. They don't determine, nor enforce the laws. The auxiliary could send pink slips until they're blue in the face, and it has carries no weight at all.
What Riley said is the same thing as quoted above and IS the real law. Legitimate, licensed stations cannot interfere with outlaw stations, or will the they accrue any sanctions for doing so. So, if I wanna run CW right over the top of one those drivers, I am free to do so. If I bother another licensed station, then I might get cited if someone complained. But when I hear RTTY and CW all over 28.085, then I know what they are doing. LOL!

How about a 100W ultra-linear output transformer (Acrosound TO-350 or equivalent)?

Even if he doesn't, he should be able to recognize Tnom's subjectification of a supposedly objective experiment, his inattention to detail, the lack of critical information, and his failure (unwillingness?) to disclose his previous test and it's contradictory results. That, in my book, is sufficient to conclude that Tnom's tests are bogus. In fact, the results of the second test are almost -toogood, skewed out of proportion with reality -- almost like he was reading the S-meter backwards -- and extrapolation of those results suggest that the rubber ducky is the most efficient antenna design, second only to the theoretical dummy load! It doesn't take an engineer to see that much.

Well now that's kinda stupid. Why crush them on your forehead when it's easier to step on them or use the can crusher on the side of the camper?

Tell me this. If the numbers were fudged why would I leave the inconsistent results as is.

The only thing that is fudged is your mind. You fudge your thinking and have ruled out ever being wrong.

He does not dispute what I say so why would I tell him to test the antennas. He pointed out with a different method (Mmana) that Stainless Steel is not the best conductor. He even posted numbers.
What have you posted Frank? Where are your numbers? Where is your test?

The tests (all three of them) confirmed that a SS 108" can be beat.

Good. Then you have properly documented the results.

A proper test could only be done with much attention to detail.
All this would require a detailed account of every variable.
Attempts would be made to keep the variables the same between the different antennas. If done successfully the test would reveal useful numbers.

I'm waiting for the test conditions and your results. You do have numbers don't you? What antennas did you test.?

i installed a cobra 25ltd its been peaked & tuned , i think 28 wtts anyway had the swr's set , the tech that set them said i need 20 to 25 feet of coax to complete the wave . is there truth to this or was he just trying to get me to purchase more cable and if this is true will it mess up my swr's on my system now?
last question , anyone know what else , besides a liner , i can do to increase my power & range
thanks donny aka rockin-rabbit

Umm, don't think so Dick. Most of the time campers are made of fiberglass. While a whip mounted where you said will perform, sometimes most people don't want to drive around knocking tree limbs down, hitting low bridges, unable to go into garages & multi level parking lots.
That's why the suggestion for a shorter antenna, like a Wilson mag mount or some other side or mirror location for the antenna. If he mounts a 102 on the back bumper, a Wilson or a shorter antenna mounted in a higher, better location will out perform it.

Explain that dumbass, the same receive antenna was used for all the tests. The SWR or resonant frequency doesn't matter as long as its not changed during the tests.

Let me phrase it in a way that your simple mind would understand;

Do you think the receive antenna knew which antenna was transmitting and some how changed its parameters?

TVs can be used as clandestine xmitters so don't worry, they'll be included in reg requirement as will all AC & DC broadcast radios.

You would think that if the AKC were really concerned about illegal CB illegal 10 meter transmissions. Guess they are too busy watching E-bay and pushing their Gay agenda?

that was back during a time when wrestling was full of real honest to erick, the professor.....i remember the first time i saw rick ruined the career of my homeboy johnny valentine.....but things are well it seems like a lot of people get in the service to get educational benefits and swallow that swill from the recruiters without thinking this thing through.....yes you could get your ass killed numbnutts.....war is hell.....and you may not make it.....i wonder if the recruiters told them that shit when they went down to join up....?? used to, you didn't have a choice.....when you were told to come on down, you had to or they would come looking for you...but now...it is all volunteer, which to me has good points and bad points...i think a citizen army is better because it brings out the best and the worst our country has to offer and it also brings out the thinkers as well so that is why the pinheads in washington like it better when they have a mva, that way they are easier to control.....one day they maybe turned on you.....that is what is scarey about it.....and the question is: would they shoot another american if ordered to do so.....???? and you know what?? a lot of them said yes.....

Are you "he?" I said that HE must ID during his "testing" just as any other

Now here's a dodge! You claimed that you never said that FM doesn't skip.
I pull out your quote and you say it's out of context. Trapped like a pig and squirming your way out.

Truth: FM does skip.
Truth: USUALLY it is the case that one FM signal or the other will "win out" but not always. If you listened to your local 2-meter repeater you'd know that.

I have several. Yaesu FT-890/at Yaesu FT-290/r
Yaesu FT-490/r
ICOM IC-910h
ICOM IC-208

Plus many others but those are primarily the FM rigs except for the FT-890 which I use for 10-meter FM.

I have heard "no win" situations using all of those rigs. Listen to one of your local 2-meter FM nets (if you have them) and tell me if you NEVER hear no-win situations on your repeater. If you have two stations with approximately the same signal strength the receiver will not be able to lock on either

No, it's your imagination. I didn't back down a bit. The ARRL aux is an officially sanctioned organization that gathers evidence in an official capacity that the FCC will use in a case against an amateur. Our evidence carries the same weight as an FCC observer. Note, the email I received did not say that it is legal for hams to interfere it only says that the FCC will probably not pursue complaints. A ham can still be sited for not following "good amateur practice" which is sited in Part 97.101a.

First of all I have a hard time thinking the rig can do 28 watts, that's BS get a good wattmeter. Also most tweaking and peaking is just a way to fuck up a radio, makes them sound like shit, and for a bad tech to make a fast buck. Use whatever length to get to the antenna. That story has been going around since CB started.

Many times they don't. That's why I tell people to buy or build a simple field strength meter and tune the antenna with that. Then get a cheap SWR meter to keep inline just to indicate any antenna failures.

>Are you "he?" I said that HE must ID during his "testing" just as any other >ham. I never said that you didn't ID.

For crying out loud, PAY ATTENTION, KEVIN! My reply was, with emphasis added to get past your communication deficit, "Did I say that >-HE-< didn't ID?" And no, I am not "he", I am "me". In fact, I do my own experiments in electronics and that is how I met "he". Now "he" and I are pretty good friends and are doing Part 15 experiments with high-speed data communication on UHF, which, BTW, sounds like "hash", and is therefore a "signal".

Now it seems that you are no longer arguing to defend your opinion, but just to argue. If so, you are about to be plonked.

1) Any length will do if it's a properly grounded antenna.
2) There is only one SWR, Standing Wave Ratio.
3) Now that the radio has been peaked to max smoke, you can't use a linear with that radio because it will sound terrible.
4) Any sideband radio is a better quality radio than a Cobra 25.
5) A radio wave at 27.185 MHz (ch 19) is around 34 feet long.
6) Signals in the coax travel at 66 to 78 % of the speed of light. This is the velocity factor. Signals travel at 95% on the antenna itself. This shortens the required coax for a wavelength.
7) Half-wave multiples of coax mimic the SWR on the other end.

And the same weight it carries if an individual ham complains. If I hear another ham using filthy language, or not IDing, I can send in the same complaint; gets done every day.

Note, the email I received did > not say that it is legal for hams to interfere it only says that the FCC > will probably not pursue complaints.

Hmmmmm. I wonder why. Perhaps it is because a legal station cannot cause "interference" from an illegal station which has no business being there in the first place. There is NO legitimacy in trying to confer some sort of protection upon illegal stations, which, BTW, is absurd, and the law in its reading or intent is meant to apply to a LEGAL station deliberately QRMing another LEGAL station; in a nutshell, it what I have been saying all along.
And if means that, as long as I do not maliciously cause interference to licensed stations, I have the right to use the frequencies for which I am authorized and if it happens to "interfere" with one of those truckers, well, TOUGH!
He has no right to operate on frequencies not authorized to him. And that should be the end of this argument.

A ham can still be sited for not > following "good amateur practice" which is sited in Part 97.101a.
> Kevin, WB5RUE

He most certainly can, and that covers a host of "sins" (such as a gettting into arguments, not following technical standards---like the HI SSB stuff that went on recently).
It was not illegal in the strictest sense, but it was not 'good amateur practice.

I have noticed when a CBer has a radio modified the replies in this group,are that's illegal, can't do that, Band the imports radios, ect,ect. Mostly from Hams.
Then go to a Ham news group, and allot of the questions is how to MOD a radio to go out of band. Dam I wonder why they want to do that?
Maybe to talk to the CBers ?

Jizzboy it is you that has popped yer cork. You need a cloak to cover your ass cuz it's flapping in the breeze. You blame Leland Scott for everything you have a raging hardon for Leland and the archives prove the fact that you are obsessed with him.

How it started, the jock strap you got in the mail, that was Doug, not,Leland but you blamed practicaly the whole NG for it at one time or another.

Next you were invited to come into the rec.amaetur.policy room to ask an FCC attorney a question, and you refused. You followed by posting threats as 1mangayboy and forging Leland Scott in the policy newsgroup.

later you went off your nut about the YOU ASK W sig that was proven not to be Lelalnd at all, yet you still believe it was him.

You blamed Leland for the "respect for freebanders" forge which was actually Tim Nebo and not Leland.

Then the AKC punked you by putting your name to a bunch of for sale items you went nuts and started posting Leland's phone number on the web.

When you saw the twistedhed humor website you got nuts again and blamed Leland who was on vacation at the time.

Oh and the radio intruder watch in Tampa Bay that happened and actually recorded a wav file of you on freeband, that was not Leland involved at all.

So as you see you are our puppet, our play toy, and Leland is laughing his ass off at you.

No, now go back and read what you originally wrote, and what Tnom wrote that you responded too. It doesn't matter what frequency the receive antenna is resonant at as long as you don't change anything with the receive antenna during the test. The receive antenna could care less what frequency the transmit antenna is resonant at.

So you trying to everyone that anytime some changes their tuning on their antenna, everyone else has to retune their antenna to receive them properly?

Your a joke, and so are your ideas.

>No, your the one that pointed it out.....

No, I'm the one that pointed it out a long time ago. And there are several reasons why it happens, but the most significant is because nothing in a mobile installation is perfectly grounded. The RF ground in a vehicle is the vehicle itself, and at the frequency of interest (27 MHz), it rarely shows the nice low impedance needed for a good ground plane, or 1/4 wave resonance to work as a counterpoise. So your meter might show a perfect 1:1 match, but the meter will be wrong because it, too, is referenced to the same imperfect ground. The -only-way to be sure you are getting the most signal from your antenna is to actually measure the signal, and you do that with a field strength meter. You can see the difference for yourself by doing your own test. Assuming you don't have a dummy load for an antenna, you will see that the best match does not necessarily mean the best field strength.

I thought this topic was already hashed out a long time ago.....

In normal installations, the length of your coax does NOT matter. This comes up many times,but the way to set an antenna is by lengthening the radiating element (whip); shorter for higher frequencies, longer for lower freqs.
"tuning" coax or cutting it to certain lengths is just a bunch of hooey and a placebo for lazy CB shops who would rather sell more coax than set the antenna to resonance-- which is something many of them don't know how to do anyway. This, incidently, applies to ANY band of frequencies, not just 27 MHZ.

Yep. And if he sold you that 28 watt radio he suckered you there, too.

>and if this is true will it mess up my swr's on my system now?

After you get your money back on that radio and get a good one, make sure you have a good RF ground at the antenna (no mag-mounts), a good RF ground at the radio (bolt the bracket directly to some metal), and the length of your coax won't make a bit of difference. What -will- make a difference is if you use coax with a foam dielectric (as opposed to solid). Foam coax will go bad within months or less in a mobile installation.

>last question , anyone know what else , besides a liner , i can do to >increase my power & range

Get a better antenna. If you need even more, get a license. It's easy to get a license these days. Cost's just a few bucks. You have to take a test, but the questions and answers are publically available to study and/or memorize. It doesn't get any easier than that.

It has to do with the radiation resistance of the antenna, suggest you get some books on antenna theroy and read about it.

How dense...or is it argumentive can one be? Let me clarify.

The receive beams gamma was adjusted for a best match around the CB ssb channels. A typical way to set up a antenna.

The transmitting antennas where all set for the best (nulled) SWR at the same CB ssb channels. All the antennas achieved a 1.5 to 1 or better match at the SWR null. A typical way to adjust a antenna.

Even if I replaced the resonant beam with a coathanger the S-meter would still yield the same gain ranking of the antennas.

Buckeye:

Well, I guess it comes down to the perspective of the individual, and how volatile or reactive they are.

Of course, it also may have to do with what is being modified. Most CB rigs are mass market, lowest possible cost units that are intended to be used up and thrown away, so they don't typically make good candidates for modification. Most Ham rigs, on the other hand, are built to much higher standards, and are intended to provide years of trouble free service in a much more regulated type of operational requirements.

Generally speaking, as an Amateur Extra Class Ham, I generally don't care all that much about what most CBers do to the CB band, however, some of the mods done on CB rigs are worse than crude, and cause unnecessary splatter within the CB band and way beyond... The typical "mod" to maximize the output of a CB class radio for higher output does tend to make them put out more power, however, at the expense of higher bandwidth and excessive splatter (power directed out of normal frequency limits that affects adjacent or other channels or even greatly different frequencies). In the interest of an "academic exercise" I would prefer that someone that just HAS to have higher output on the CB bands would junk the CB rig and get a decent used Ham rig and use it on CB. There would be much less interference than most modified CB rigs. Of course, thinking as more of a purist, nobody should operate beyond their license class or outside of allocated limits (frequency, bandwidth, or power), period. This includes both CB and Ham operators. One of the biggest problems is that higher power alone doesn't really make all that much difference in most instances. The propagation conditions make a much bigger difference, and on Ham bands, I've talked with people several thousand miles away with less than 5 watts SSB, which is considerably less than the SSB output of the typical CB rig.

One of the biggest problems is that the CB arena is essentially unregulated, since nobody is required to have even a "registration license", so you get a lot of the riff-raff on the CB bands, and even a few of these tend to make the rest of the respectable CB people look pretty bad. When the CBer down the street mods his radio for higher output, then hooks it up to a bootleg "pill" linear with no filtering whatsoever, it's not surprising that it interferes with television sets for blocks around. Unfortunately, it takes awhile for enforcement to get around to doing anything about it in most jurisdictions, and meanwhile, anyone with an antenna is painted with the same brush, even if they are operating within legal limits and creating no problems whatsoever. When a Ham moves in or wants to put up an antenna, the public tends to think he's another trouble making CBer... For this sort of reason, there tends to be a considerable amount of animosity between some

Hams and most CB people. Generally, most CBers get branded as illiterate, obnoxious and law breaking because of the actions of a relative few "bad apples". Of course, there are also a few of the same ilk in the Ham ranks, but they typically are taken care of in the legal system (though this often seems to take an excessive amount of time to occur). In addition, the ham bands are more "self regulating" because hams are required to provide their station identifier (call sign) when beginning a contact and periodically during a contact. With the proliferation of on-line and CD based call books that allow near instant lookup of a call sign, many hams already know the station location and name of the other guy before they even answer the call. This tends to help limit the influx if illegal operators on the ham bands. In addition, you'll find the language used on ham bands is usually quite different than you'd hear on CB. Much more polite and constrained in most instances. Anyone uttering profane language is just not answered... Not so on the CB bands, where many think they can drop a carrier over anyone they don't like, or if they shout louder or more profane they will be the "winner". It just tends to increase the noise level and frustration of everyone. IN a nutshell, CB and Ham radio are different worlds, usually for different people.

Generally, most Mods for Ham radios are so people can work other areas that weren't provided for the typical General licensed ham, such as MARS (Military Affiliate Radio Station) and other "out of band" operation with specific other permit or licensing processes. Some are so radios that were manufactured when there were more limited band allocations are so the hams can operate in the currently allocated bands. One very recent change is the 60 meter band, which has 5 "channels" with very specific limitations for frequency and emitted power limits. Of course, like any large group of individuals, there will be some who may push the limits, or operate where they aren't supposed to, and somewhere, someday, they will probably pay for it one way or another. Personally, I leave the enforcement of this to "the universe" (a metaphysical approach to be sure), rather than spend endless hours worrying about who does what and where.

Another reason you'll find a lot of questions about Mods on the Ham groups is that some CBers have gotten smart and figured out that they can buy an older solid state ham rig that will put out 40 watts AM or 100 watts SSB, cleanly and without splatter or interference on the CB bands for a whole lot less money than they can get a CB radio and have some butcher "peak it" for higher output, which rarely gets more than twice the standard output of the stock CB rig, and with huge problems in splatter and interference. If you were to be able to look into the homes of some of the smoothest sounding CBers, I'd be willing to bet you'd find not a heavily modified CB rig, but a Ham rig that was "opened up" to other bands. They are reliable, transmit where they are supposed to, and have superior sensitivity and noise abatement features compared to CB rigs, and in the end, are a bunch cheaper too...

I have noticed that over the past year on eBay, the ham rigs that have mention in the description as being modded for out of band transmission, tend to sell for a higher price than those that have not, given the same make and model. I would suppose this is because they are being purchased by non-hams for use elsewhere, like on the CB bands. In a way, it's sort of silly, as the mods are out there on the internet for anyone with a reasonable amount of experience with a search engine, and most are pretty simple to perform for the typical ham. I suppose there are a considerable number of CB people that could also do them, but it would probably be way beyond the ability of just about anyone that believes the typical crap the local CB-Shop spreads about how they can peak and tune a CB radio for 20 watts out without causing problems down the road.

Do you have a comprehension problem? Thats not what I said dumbass.
He did eliminate a variable, he used the same receive antenna for all his tests. It doesn't matter what he used for a receive antenna as long as he used the same one every time. Are you really that damn

I wanted him to explain it too me, since he acted like he knew the answer and wanted to explain it too, since according to him, I didn't know it. Quit bailing him out, let him back his big mouth up.

You are right, I did miss something. Why are you doing "part 15" experiments when you can do perfectly legal "experiments" as "hams?" I do them all the time. EME is a bit difficult if you hold to Part 15 limitations!

Frank said:
"Gee, I didn't know this was your private thread. I'll ask before I reply nexttime, ok?"

So Tnom said this.....
Seeing how according to you we don't have follow normal thread protocol then I will go ahead and butt in. Here are three quotes by Frank from this thread, and a suggestion below.

1.

>I'm sorry that you are upset. The numbers speak for themselves. If you >don't like them then get off your ass and run a test yourself.

Frank said:
"I have, and I don't have to post fudged numbers to prove it. Anyone can just get on the air and find out for themselves."

2.

>This has been shown before. Get off your fat ass and do an actual >test. You will find that a Stainless Steel 102" whip can be marginally >beat. You can not realize this by reading a book! Get off your ass.

Frank said:
"My "fat ass" has done this test more than once, more than twice....
If, in fact, you do a PROPER test, eliminating ALL reasonable confounds and recording ALL the data, you WILL find that the 9 foot whip just can't be beat, as my "fat ass" has proven more than a DOZEN times before while teaching students how to map an antenna field (which, BTW, was a lab demo for a number of different issues, not just antenna types and field strength measurements)."

3.

>Not needed. I know the truth because I have used the antennas.

Frank said:
"You assume that nobody else has done any testing for themselves. You are wrong."

>Here's your assignment for tomorrow. Get off your fat ass and test the >antennas.

Frank said:
"Once again --- and try to comprehend it this time --- I already have."

Good. Then you will not have any excuse for not posting YOUR test parameters and YOUR results quantified in numbers.

Don't forget what this beef is about. It is about whether or whether not a 102 or 108" Stainless Steel whip can be beat by a shorter antenna in a typical installation. This beef is not about whether the ultimate 1/4 wave whip can be beat by the ultimate shorter antenna. It can not. I have always said this when asked. If you followed my past tests then you would know that I have already shown that a one inch thick, 9 foot long silver antenna will beat everything shorter that I have ever tested.

Seeing how you are so adamant about the superiority of the 102/8" SS whip then you should be able to prove it's superiority over the same types of antennas that I have tested in the past. I don't think you have ever tested those antennas.... X-terminator and similar types.

I'll be waiting.....probably forever.

Those 2 coils on the x-terminator are only 5 turns and 9 turns which does nothing on 27 mhz. Even a keyclown like me knows this.

What makes you think that experimenting under Part 15 is in some way less legal than if I had a ham license? I've been doing them for many years, and all just as "perfectly legal" as if I was a ham doing experiments within the limits of a license.

Yes, I'm sure it would be, but we're not using moonbounce.

Sure they do. You forget that the diameter of the coil makes just as much of a difference as the number of turns. It's a perfectly legitimate loading coil, but nothing that couldn't be done with much smaller wire.

You still want me to lie to make you feel better about your mistakes.
Sorry, but lying is your speciality.

>Yes but the question remains why would a Brummie like you

But, I am not a Brummy... and I believe that you know it.

> flee the uk cb group,

I did not "flee" the UK group... I still use it.
You still post things without checking your "facts" first... you are a very slow learner.

> set up web pages

You have still not proved that.

>making fun of americans,

Now that it has been pointed out that the "AKCers" are not the only (or main) people mentioned, you now feel that it is your job to defend all Americans - even those who are mentioned yet seem to like the site enough to post links on this newsgroup.
Are we suppost to believe that you care about the people that you are abusing on here?

Well, look again, it is not just Americans.
Are you now going to whine over the suggestions made about me?

> troll rec radio cb

I have an interest in CB, and post replies to such messages - you just post abuse, and show no interest in CB.
Think again about who the troll is.

> You must be running away from something.

Why... I have not run anywhere.
I am still on this newsgroup, and still on the UK one. Sure, I don't post as much as some people like you, but then I have a life away from this newsgroup.

> Maybe take Twirted's advice and find God?

Twisty?
How about Dave orChuckie... are they not the Lord's reps on the group?

Anyhow, how do you know that I have not already found God, accepted
Jesus as my personal saviour, and been "born again"?
But then, what do you ever know before you post - you never bother to check anything first.

>> Oh, and you still have not shown any proof. Oops, was your reply >> supposed to make us forget the issue of proof?
>Oh you sad steward all you do is cry about proof of this and that,

No, I ask for it... as you did.
The difference is that I provided proof... you have nothing but unfounded accusations and lies.

Of course, you will try to deflect attention from the fact, by calling the request for proof "whining"... but you also "whined" for proof.
But, I didn't complain about it, I provided the proof... you just whine because you know you have nothing else.

You whine about "Keyclowns", sexuality, Websites, Brummies... the list goes on.

>> >I didn't notice WHO the hell gets featured most on that site

>> Are you really that stupid?

>You seem to know a lot about that site.

I check my facts before replying, you could benifit from doing the same...
it may save you further embarassment.

If you have been on this group for some time, you will see how I also check facts before posting in technical threads. I have posted book references with quotes - there is nothing wrong with knowing your facts before posting a reply or letting people know where they can check the facts.
I don't even have all the books I have quoted, some are in the Library in the nearest town. If I can travel out there for references, I can certainly click a mouse in front of me.

>Why did you change the word "humour" to "humor"?

You have lost me there... maybe you should explain what you are whining about now.

>If you need ghetto talk lessons then ask GW or Nebo they are the real Never mind whining... where are you mentioned on the site?

What... the Website is trolling on this newsgroup, and whining at you?
Try again... give a real reason.

>> Is there only one George in the whole World?
>> The person on here says that he is NOT George... so it cannot be him.
>OK, we will hold you to that. You will never refer to anyone as >"george"

So, you say that I cannot refer to anyone as George... not even Mr dubya Bush?
What has that to do with how many Georges there are in the World?
Where do I offer to never call anyone George?

You are taling nonsense... you have lost the plot.

>again since you admit he told you the truth about him not >being george.

Where do I say that he was telling the truth?
You and he both say that his name is not George... so, if that is true, why did you assume that the page referred to him?

>> Anyhow, he is not "pro-legal" any more than you are... trolls are a >> different subject.
>> Frank, Jerry, and Kieth are clearly "pro-legal" - where does it call them >> "gay"?
>That's because they are not gay.

Wait a minute...
You say that it does not call them "gay" because they are not .
So, the site does not call people "gay" unless they are?

What are you suggesting when you say it calls your best buddy "gay"... that it must be true?

>> Apart from that, you make plenty of other sexual references >> on this group.
>Do you not like sex?

The references you make are not to "sex", but buggery.
Even in your last reply, you make such suggestions - you have buggery constantly on your mind.

>> Just look at the message I am replying to, you just cannot help >> yourself - you cannot get "gay", "foggoty" thoughts out of your mind.
>
>Most people cant help it when they see you they think you are "gay".

No, you see everyone as "Gay"... typical of a closet bugger.
Just come out the closet, it worked for Mr O'Dowd and Mr Michael (you do not want me to call them by their first names).

>That's a keyclown right there in front of you.

Just explain what you consider the word "keyclown" to mean.
You do not appear to be using the definition posted some time back on this newsgroup.

From http://www.geocities.com/aarronvoobner/ ...

Man arrested by the CLP.
A CB user was found guilty of using measured coax lengths. Giving evidence, neighbors of the defendant said "we clearly saw him use a calculator before carefully measuring the cable and cutting it to an exact length. When we saw him trimming the coax while using an swr meter, we decided to call the Coax Length Police".
A spokesman for the CLP said "When we arrived on the scene, the defendant had trimmed his coax to just 6 inches and had his CB mounted on the mast with duct tape, just below the antenna".
The spokesman went on to say "This is not his first offense, he has already received a warning for trimming coax to reduce SWR - he's going to prison this time". When our reporter asked "How long will he get?", the CLP spokesman simply replied "doesn't matter - any length will do".

Peter.

Absolutely. If you want to test a real antenna, you need real test equipment.
No charts or theory will tell you how that antenna in your garden will perform in the real World.

>It is important to note that the S-meter need not be accurate. It just >needs to be consistent enough to give higher or lower readings.

The only time it needs to be accurate, is if you are comparing to antennas tested by other people with other meters. This is the whole point of calibration to national standards. In the UK, calibration of instruments has to be traceable to national standards to be accepted by British Standards.

For comparative measurements on your own systems, using the same instrument, calibration is not needed. It should also be remembered that nearby objects will affect readings so, even with the same instrument or calibration, two identical antennas may give different readings at different locations.

Also, different antennas give different radiation patterns at different heights above ground. An antenna which seems to outperform others at a certain height may be outperformed by the others at a different height.

Peter.

No.

> or was he just trying to get me to purchase more cable

Maybe.
Or, maybe he was just repeating the stories he was told. With CB, anyone can call themself a "tech" or "rig doctor"... most have no qualifications.

The antenna does the work, the coax is just the way of getting the signal to it.
Any coax will lose some of the signal, more coax means that more signal will be wasted.

Just use what you need to get from the CB to the antenna, maybe add a small amount of extra in case of errors or if it is needed at some point.

>anyone know what else , besides a liner , i can do to >increase my power & range

The best way to get a good distance is to get the best antenna you can. A good antenna will pick up signals better, as well as send them out further. This will add up to true gain.
Another point is that SSB will give you greater distance on both receive and transmit.

A linear may increase your output, but it will not help other people to get to you. You can end up talking over the top of people you cannot even hear. If you are in an area where there are other CBers nearby, you may also cause them "bleedover", where they lose receive signals when you transmit.
A local CBer to me has used linears, and is known for interfering with other CBers for miles around. What is worse, is that he ignores complaints from his fellow CBers - the ignorant tw*t.

I do not wish to preach to you about the law, but you should at least try all possible legal methods. In the end, it is your choice, but at least you should know the issues before you decide.

Peter.

Howdy all,
Been reading the group for a while now, mostly good stuff...That said, I was taking a few minutes to check the band a couple of days ago and started talking to a guy who seemed like he knew what he was doing, said he used to be on the radio a whole lot more, and spent time trying to skip all over the place. He went on to say that he was soooooo loud and could get out to all kinds of places when skip was in and that if I didn't believe it I should shoot the skips and ask and that I would see that he wasn't lying. Well, I am a true mudduck and can't really do that, so I thought I'd ask here....
He said he had a repeater for his microphone and would transmit "GarageBoy's Channel" over and over again and some other stuff too... but I figure he could take credit from someone else for that stuff.

Anyway, anyone ever heard of this guy or is he full of it?

Mark B
AKA Scooterguy

PS supposed to have been all around the band but was on 2, 3, 11, 38, 39, and 40...

The Good Lord

Okay, now things are getting personal. It seems not only bushite soldiers murder our innocent families for no rational reason but to serve as enemies of God under the antiChrist, they now need to blindly forget about protecting the sacrificed family they almost know best as their stupid own. Who gives a fuck if bush wants to rob American tax payers a say in paying block grants to fix things they criminally break? See? This is why bush can't declare the money spent should be a loan, for then, someone might be held accountable. Billions have been already stolen from the UN's escrow account, while the central Iraq bank, has those heading it, likely directly involved in it's alleged current robbery. How else could the plan made prior succeed? Ha ha. It's almost like they imprison themselves on purpose for our benefit. ALL Americans are too weak as stupid they keep selling US. Now then, when's the fictional God King fellow, gonna make our entrance disguised as a simple man of few means, trying to get his show biz break in the international media under the fantastically named Johnny Wizard bill?

We, as, humanity, must make bush accountable for the criminal waging of our rights as Life. "Why blow up anything in Iraq", ask a mindless as DU poisoned bushite soldier participating in death squads to murder women and children? Our war crime perpetrators we need to raise our guns in defense to, are: buford blount, tommy franks, rumsfeld, bush, Condoleeza, and likely mueller.

Remember: The FBI informed US that bush's business partner, (THE UNARRESTED) General Ahmad mastered 200,000 DOLLARS to give Atta, The 9/11 Mastermind, then, worked with Condoleeza to devolop the 9/11 Afghanistan plan. A TOP SECRET Presidential Directive reported on by MSNBC's Jim Miklaszewski. A DOCUMENTED plan of not following the criminal leads to arrest the actual perpetrators, to secure criminal invasion against the American flag waving, Taliban. Dated two days before 9/11 came down, and confessed to MSNBC in March by the White house, after deliberation, as fully implemented. Evil is just the deceived disguised, and there's really not much to fear of really like whatever. Evil is dumb. Always has been. Humanity, through our public media, often glorifies humanities worst malcontents, as have deft skills of persuasion, instead of our failed ability to simply challenge criminal transgressions like those TRULY perpetrated by the bush demon for instance. Or how about a soldiers word, not found as capable, but for form letters to try and trick the family back home with bush lies crying. Have you heard the true death count? Who wouldn't defend their family from any irrational proud bushite soldier, who as cowards, would murder the practically defenseless and hungry, innocent and God loving, like our family as our brother at Guantanamo, while as traitors, fight to protect those responsible for murdering thousands of New Yorkers? No instead of protecting America, they spread radio-active toxic waste on themselves, while fighting to persecute people not guilty of any criminal offences. How weak and stupid, can the almost fictional antiChrist really take a dying America down counting for?

The ungodly bush demon demanded that evidence wasn't required to arrest the 9/11 culprits, that he decided instead, as planned before hand, with rumsfeld, would war our undefended families to toll further criminal sacrifices. Perhaps millions. Get bush for me please.

Johnny Wizard

It all seems pointless to his wife. ``Why is he there?'' Graham asked Brown, lips trembling.

First of all, the point here is not that 170,000 items were stolen from the Iraq museum, or that most American corporate media records the losses, as only those that were stolen from the lobby; it is that AMERICAN PLANNING was underminded by the demon bush "cabal".

The telephone exchange for example was blown up with several bunker busters (DU weapons containing hundreds of pounds of toxic waste to harm all of Humanity) for no reason but bush's evil to steal life from God and Nature. (The Iraqi military had hydrogen generators, and can use walky talkies instead of payphones.) Why blow up whatever in Iraq to murder our families for demon bush to cash US out as traitor I ask You?

Second, microscopic DU is a TOXIC heavy metal, as poisonious to human beings, and as light as the wind. Also, being radio-active, a single particle breathed into the lungs, can mutate DNA. Similarly to outside background radiation can externally, but at 1900 times the level, internally.

Gee you're paranoid! I never said anything about you being illegal. I just asked a simple question about why you do Part 15 experiments instead of experiments under your ham license. Anyway, there is no such thing as "less legal." You're either legal or you are not.

LOL,,,you must feel this is your own private thread to somehow feel that another person gives an iota who you respond to or who you "plonk".
Citing your own behavior is narcissistic.

Lelnad KC8LDO HAS been speaking for himself. His fecal matter is all over this group, right along side Dogie, he just needs to hide his shame he has been reduced to,,,, ...remember, he and N8WWM are great friends, despite his claim a while back he didn't know him and never met the man. Another lie Lelnad lie..LOL.

Explain why lowest SWR and max field strength don't occur at the same point. You stated that you knew, now please explain.

So you think the coils do nothing? Me too.

If you are not a keyclown why are you so interested in a 15,000 watt antenna?

Just a curiosity.

Originally I never bought in to the belief that such a short antenna could out do what I thought was the best antenna. I always assumed that the full size 102"SS whip was as good as it gets.

After hearing this nonsense about these short antennas I inquired about what this antenna was and where I could get it. I was determined to un validate any claims that a shorter antenna could out do the 102" SS. I was told one of these antennas was the X-Terminator. I ordered one for testing.

After setting up a valid way of testing it I was surprised at the results and posted them. It's to bad some can't stand the thought that a shorter antenna can out do a longer one. It must disrupt and totally disorganize their supposedly organized way of thinking.

Actually it's 62".....If you can wait a second I'll give you the entire dimensions. Maybe Mmana wants to know?

Thats what I was thinking, maybe the dimensions of the 3 sections and coils? Give me something to do tomorrow, being Friday.

Starting from the base.................

9.5 inches of 1/2 inch chrome plated brass.

Then a 9 turn coil 7.5 inches long by 2.625 inches in outside diameter.

Then 3.75 inches of 1/2 inch chrome plated brass.

Then the second coil of 5 turns, 4.5 inches long by 2.625 inches in outside diameter.

Then 5.5 inches of 1/2 inch chrome plated brass.

Then the stinger of Stainless steel. 32 inches by 3/32 of an inch.

The coils are 5/16 inch chrome plated tubing.

Total length = 62.75 inches

So I don't include the length of a coil? I take it that a coil of 9 turns 5 inches long is the same as a coil of 9 turns 10 inches long?
You may want to do a little thinking before you post the next time.

Regardless I did give him the ID. If you can't figure out the ID by the info I gave then you are the one that doesn't have a clue.

The coil gauge is also needed...........So go back to your beer.
You seem to have a better grip of that.

I could of given him the pitch of the coil but that would of totally confused you. You seem to be confused enough.

Have a confused day

I wish someone who knew what they were talking about would tell the truth about this antenna.There is enough BS on this group as it is without more myths being spread.

Ham radio has nothing that interest me, mainly because anything above 2 MHz isn't much of a challenge. For HF just toss together a couple 6146's and -whammo-, you're world-wide via the ionosphere. And now that the FCC is going to drop the code requirement, it's going to get mighty crowded in a hurry. The 6m band was once mildly interesting, but it's beginning to sound more and more like 75m. The 2m band and above is used mostly by retired appliance operators (at least around here). And most of the chatter is boring as hell.

Get below 2 MHz and it's much more interesting. DXing the AM BC band is just plain fun. Working the 1750m band is a challenge not only with every aspect of radio, but also with computers and audio. Duck down below 9 KHz where there are no FCC regulations and propogation is a whole different ball of wax. Everything inbetween is full of mysteries as to signal origins and purposes, many of which are military. But even the HF band can be a challenge if you want to operate under Part 15, which I do.

So why should I get a license to do things I don't want to do?

I'm not even going to bother responding to most of your post. You have confirmed your confusion by the above comment. Should I spell it out for you?

The ID is figureable by the dimensions I gave. Just as I said it was.

Given info.................OD= 2.625
Given info.................The coils is made of 5/16 tubing.

ID = OD - 2 x 5/16 Duhhhhhhhhhhhh

ID = 2.625 - 10/16

ID = 2.625 - .625

ID = 2

Duhhhhhhhh again

Gee, thanks so much for the quick response on this very difficult question.
A simple "no never heard of him" or even a "buzz off" would have been fine, so thnk for all of your efforts in this matter.....

The X-terminator's coils work out to 1.27 uH for the 9 turn coil and 0.60 for the 5 turn coil. The values of the coils and their positions on the shaft are consistent with the design of a center-loaded vertical.

For those that don't already know, a loading coil is used to shorten an antenna while still keeping it's electrical length at 1/4 wavelength. But the antenna is necessarily less efficient because the coil radiates part of the power, and that power is lost. Why is it lost? Using the X-terminator picture as an example, you will see that the wire in the coil is oriented perpendicular to the antenna, so any radiation from the coil is going to be horizontally polarized, while the radiation from the antenna is vertically polarized. Some people might think that's a plus because some people have horizontal antennas, but it's really useless because it is radiated from 14 different wires (9 turns + 5 turns), and none of them are in phase with each other. Since there is no receiver publically available that can receive all those signals, put them back in phase with each other and add them to the horizontal signal, the power radiated by the coil is wasted. Nor can a receiver pick out just one signal from the fourteen. Even worse, the coil concentrates the magnetic flux (just like any other coil) and directs it right at the roof of the vehicle, which results in more lost power due to eddy currents induced into the sheet metal. Any loaded antenna is a trade-off between antenna height and efficiency.

The only difference between the X-terminator and any other center-loaded vertical is that the former is built for kilowatts (and not very well at that, as the conductors are chrome plated, so it's RF resistance due to skin effect is higher than stainless steel, and much higher than bare copper or silver). There is no way that this antenna will outperform the unloaded 102" stainless-steel whip.

Tnom's test may or may not have been a sham -- he may have actually gotten those numbers, but for reasons other than what he presented. Personally, I think the only thing he tested was his imagination.

It's way beyond that on this group,,,,this is about one who prefers Chevy, one prefers Ford, and yet another prefers Dodge. The margin of difference when applied to the average cber will not be noticeable between the the antennas. The actual "cheating" taking place, if indeed such a thing is to be found among a discussion forum, are the posts of malicious and angry origin, unprovokingly attacking one's character by name, contacting their work, and intentional libelous content of posts.
Of course, we can always add the scumbags that post under different nics and play both sides of the fence......

No doubt, but a claim by a person, ad or company concerning a product they are hawking, can never be taken at face value. An educated consumer will do their own homework, take all the claims, and make their own informed decision.
Common sense and logic has always held that "buyer beware" is the unwritten rule of thumb. A fudged claim isn't the same as ordering something and not receiving such,,,,,,which is what I would refer to as being "cheated."

I plugged in the values that you posted. By simulation, the Stainless whip has just about a 1 dB edge. The S/S whip has its main lobe at 27.9 degrees, the X-terminator at 31.2 degrees. I posted a current plot for it in:

alt.binaries.pictures.radio

I played with the parameters for the coils, and one coil works just as well as the 2. Guess it just doesn't look as cool?

The X-terminator has its main lobe at bit higher angle than the whip does. That may account for some of the differences.

Chrome has about the same conductivity that Stainless does, or at least from the info I found. 3-15% for Stainless, 19% for chrome, relative to copper.

I am not trying to play both sides of the fence Twist, you know me and my CB background. But when it comes to the truth about a product there should be no "fence" that divides us, only the truth.

I don't disagree with what Mmana says but, there is no antenna simulation program that can give the definitive answer for how a antenna will actually perform in a real installation.

In other words when a engineer plugs in his values when designing a new product he can never just rely on the computer or that design as the final product. If he is to give performance numbers on the product he can never use the computed values. He must use the measured values. The measured value is always the most direct and accurate way to evaluate a product.

The coils are copper with a chrome plating.....The chrome

Chrome has 74.3% the conductivity of copper

Stainless Steel has 3% the conductivity of copper

I did notice when I was playing with the parameters on that antenna, that a small change in the coils or element lengths made a fairly significant change in expected gain, swr, etc. Most center loaded, or any shortened antenna is a little more touchy about tuning, ground and proximity to metal surfaces than a 1/4 would be.

>let any self displayed ignorance speak for itself.

I believe I have answered the question quite well. At least more accurately. Perhaps you forgot to read my answer. I will post it here once again.
All things being equal:

1.Top loaded antennas perform marginally better than base loaded

2.Taller antennas (less loading coil) perform better than shorter

3. Thicker antennas perform marginally better than thinner.

4. More conductive antenna stock makes a marginal difference over less conductive antenna stock.

5. A higher antenna mount works better than a lower mount.

6. A free and clear antenna mount works better than an obstructed one.

7. A more substantial RF ground works better than a minimal ground.

8. A vertical antenna performs better than a diagonal (windblown).

Number 5, 6, & 8 are the most important factors in the performance of an antenna.

Now if any one could come up with a formula that includes all of these factors then we would be able to answer your question. There is no formula. However we can say this.
The best mobile antenna is a thick stiff nine foot whip that is silver coated and mounted on top of the roof with multiple radial grounding points.
No one is going to use the antenna above in the real word, so one might draw the conclusion that in the real world we might substitute a 102" stainless whip for the best real world performance. WRONG.
The 102" is made of stainless. Stainless has only 3% the conductivity of copper. This alone will stop the 102" stainless from being the top performer. Subtract also the fact that the 102" stainless bends over in the wind and is also a relatively thin antenna.
So what is the best choice? It appears that for a realistic antenna, it is a mildly loaded top or center loaded antenna made of thick conductive materials. There are a few of these ugly looking antennas around. They do work marginally better than the 102" stainless and have the benefit of being shorter. These antennas can get as short as five foot and still equal or outperform the 102" stainless.

Percent conductivity of materials, based on copper being the standard of 100%

Aluminum 65%
Brass 28%
Chrome 74%
Gold 71%
Iron 17%
Silver 106%
Steel 10%
Stainless 3%

That is not what you claimed. I will quote you.....

"At the risk of getting flamed (who am I kidding, it's inevitable), the best overall antenna is the 102" SS whip."

Does not the SS stand for stainless steel? If you are NOW saying that a 102" whip can outperform a loaded antenna then I will agree. But you were referring to something else.

>you can come back and TRY to give a reply to the

I believe that I have done that.

I think most readers of these posts would prefer accuracy. Therefore > outperform the 102" stainless.

A common choice that was overlooked was the 102" whip made out of fiberglass with copper wire embedded in it. Due to the lower velocity factor (how fast radio frequency energy travels though a substance), the fiberglass version of the 102" whip can actually be 6" or so shorter than its stainless counterpart. Due to the shorter length and thicker outer material, it's also more rigid (stays straighter when the vehicle is in motion).
In practical terms, it doesn't need a spring to achieve resonance in the CB band, and can usually be shortened an additional 4" or more depending on where in the spectum the operator most often operates. For example, the fiberglass whip (Radio Shack part number 21-905) is usually 2 to 6 inches shorter than the stainless version to begin with. It doesn't need a spring. And when shooting for resonance (lowest SWR with highest field strength) on Channel 40, it can usually be shortened an additional 4 inches. If you shorten it from the bottom instead of the top, the rigidity is improved. So, the end product very often ends up a full foot shorter than the 108" stainless whip and spring combination as well as being cheaper because there's no need to pay for a spring. Not having a spring makes the setup look nicer and stay straighter too.

Over the years I've taken a number of the 21-905 whips, shortened them 4 inches or so from the bottom, and coated them with a thin coat of Varathane to prevent splintering of the fiberglass over time. The end result looks great, lasts until it gets smacked low enough and hard enough to break it, and performs very, very well. To outperform it, an antenna would have to be a closer match to 50 ohms resistive and have a lower angle of radiation. Few are capable of that--and none are cheaper or easier to obtain.

All the above can be gained by a many books. One of those books was the book of common sense.

Do you have that book?

Air Force One came to Australia this week. The President has not been in Oz for several years, therefore recording Air Force One on the Australian airways is rare.

I have recorded AF1 talking with Canberra Tower as it descends into the Australian Capital.

Chromium .0194 ohms ?
Copper .00711 ohms ?

With these figures Chrome has 36% the conductivity of copper

Stainless steel is definitely more resistive than you stated. According to your figure SS has 16% the conductivity of copper. This is not even close.
Standard carbon steel has10% the conductivity.
Stainless is less. 18-8 is 2.5%, 13-cr is 3.5%, and 18-cr is 3%

The conductivity of the above figures on steel and stainless steel come from the "Metals" properties table, page 40, Ugly's electrical reference. George V. Hart

17-7 ph stainless steel is used for most stainless antennas

Its resistivity compared to the standard (copper) can be found here http://www.hpmetals.com/elec_resist.asp

Copper = 1.71 microohm-cm

17-7 ph = 83 microohm-cm

In other words stainless antenna stock has 2% the conductivity of copper.

So.....Why has there not been a SS 102 with a heavy silver plate?
K-40 was using silver plating in their load coils in the 70's

Yes the whip is SS, but unlike your imagined explanation the antennas others attributes must be making a difference. It does "make a little difference". That was you quote by the way.

If it "makes a little difference" and does it at five feet instead of nine then I would say it makes quit a difference.

The top section of that antenna is made from stainless steel. The top section also has very little current flowing in it. The bottom section has a majority of the current flow and does most of the radiation. It maybe nit picking, but in theory the difference can be seen. If you would see it in the real world is another question.

What do you consider high Q?

Q (Quality factor) is equal to the inductive reactance/the resistance or loss

Capacitive coupling between the turns is part of the loss.

The coils for that antenna are large diameter tubing, less resistance.

They are spaced from eath other by at least a diameter, less capacitive coupling.

They are "air wound", less loss due to the coil form.

The coils on that antenna have a Q of 100-300

In a typical tank circuit of a transmitter, smaller wire wound closer together on a ceramic form, a Q of 20 is considered very good.

You make think that those coils look like they do for show, there is a proven reason why large diameter, large gauge material is used for the coils. And its not just for the power handling capability.

Seriously, can anybody give us a PRACTICAL explanation of possible advantages of the X-terminator vs. SS 108" whip without getting bogged down in minimal shit like the conductivity of chrome? Will it make any difference at all in the s-meter of the other person? Will it at least be as efficient as the SS whip? How much signal loss is the trade off to save height?

By golly, I made -another- mistake in my math, which is not such a suprise. But when I was double-checking my work this time I ran across something that everyone should find VERY significant. So from the beginning.....

S = Skin depth in meters = sqrt(2/(2*pi*f*u*q)), where q = conductivity of conductor (mhos/m), and u = 4piE07 * relative permeability of medium

This is what's interesting. Stainless steel comes in many varieties. Some of them aren't even steel but use the term because they are used for the same applications. Regardless, some stainless steel is ferromagnetic and some is not.
The nonferromagnetic steel will have a relative permeability close to that of copper, or 1 for all practical purposes. OTOH, ferromagnetic steel will have a relative permeability much higher, and the value of 500 was used in the calculations below.

AC resistance in ohms = l / (q * S * 2 * pi * r), where l = length of conductor (in meters)

r = radius of conductor (in meters)

Note that there are two different listings for the conductivity of chromium. The first value is based on the information that it is 55% of the conductivity of copper, and the second value (as well as the values for copper and stainless steel) is based upon CRC's HC&P:

Cu Cr #1 Cr #2 S.S. S.S. (ferro)
Conductivity: 5.80E07 3.19E07 .769E07 .166E07 .166E07
Skin depth: 12.7E-06 17.1E-06 34.9E-06 75.2E-06 3.36E-06

AC resistance: .0705 ohms .0952 ohms .194 ohms .161 ohms 9.31 ohms!!!

Notice that the differences in the resistance are all insignificant except for the ferromagnetic stainless steel. This is because of it's high relative permeability. Now when I realized this issue I put a magnet to my whip it doesn't stick. So I went to the shop this morning and checked a number of SS whips of different lengths. Some were magnetic and some were not. The magnetic whips are now all in a pile for other uses.

So even old farts like me can learn something new. From now on I'll recommend to everyone to check an antenna with a magnet before buying it, because that's what I intend to do myself.

Now, back to the X-terminator. Comparing the difference in radiation efficiency with regards to length and polarization, the 102" whip has 102" that are vertical. Everything is sent vertically polarized. Nothing is wasted in horizontal polarization. OTOH, the X-terminator has 9.5" vertical, followed by 74" of coil, then 3.75" vertical, 41.23" of coil, 5.5" vertical, and 32" of (gasp!) stainless steel. So you have a total of 166" of conductor, with 50.75" of it radiating the desired vertically polarized radiation, but 115" of it dumping horizontal hash. Let's disregard for the moment that 32" (or 63%) of the vertical total is made of that infamous stainless steel, and forget the extra overall resistance due to the additional length of conductor needed to wind the coils. Let's concentrate instead on the fact that the coils consume 69% of the total 'wire' in this antenna. Now if the current distribution was even throughout the length of the antenna, that would mean the coils are radiating 69% of the power as multi-phasic mush. But that's not the case, as the coils are positioned near the base of the antenna, where the antenna's current distribution is the greatest. That means the coils are radiating -more- than if the current was evenly distributed, and therefore -more- than 69%! And that means the efficiency of the X-terminator is less than 31%!!!

And if that isn't bad enough, let's take a look at an el-cheapo 102" stainless steel whip of -magnetic- persuasion. If the whip has an AC resistance of 9.31 ohms, and the input impedance is an ideal 50 ohms, that translates into a loss of only 19%. If the input impedance is 36.5 ohms, the wire diameter is 0.25", and accounting for power reflected back to the radio due to mismatch, loss is still well below 30%. Both scenarios are a -hell- of a lot better than the >69% waste caused by the X-terminator's loading coils, and we didn't even go into absorbtion, reflection, hysteresis and eddy current losses caused from the vehicle roof right below those coils!!!

So yes, stainless steel -is- more resistive than chromium. But the difference is not significant. So I'll say it again -- there is no way that this antenna will outperform an unloaded 102" whip whether it's made of fiberglass, stainless steel OR ferromagnetic steel!

For advanced techs and serious radio hobbyists, we're now offering a FREE copy of our previously published "CB EPROM DATA BOOK" by Martin Pickering. (EPROM = Erasable Programmable Read Only Memory.) We sold it for many years but it's now out of print. This little manual of 60 illustrated pages is an absolute GEM of CB technical knowledge you'll just never find anywhere else. And it's yours for FREE from our Web site.

This book reveals the secrets of advanced channel programming, and picks up where our "CB PLL DATA BOOK" (www.cbcintl.com/pllbook.htm) leaves off. You'll get a thorough background in how these amazing programmable chips can be used to modify many popular CB PLL circuits for expanded frequency coverage. Covers the basic programming techniques, and even includes real PC board artwork for making EPROM circuits. Sample artwork includes EPROM boards for the popular MB8719, PLL02A, ï¿½PD2824, and ï¿½PD858 PLL circuits.

Best of all, the price is right! Download your FREE copy of "THE CB EPROM DATA BOOK" (948 KB Adobe PDF) at:

Unless there is at least a 3db difference between one antenna and the other (approx 1 s-unit on the receiving end) then the difference is not worth mentioning.

So what you are saying is that I get less performance from a 8 foot 5 inch SS whip than if I had a 5 foot base loaded X-terminator?

BS.

The X-terminator has minimal gain over the 108" SS, so why can't this be attributed to a minimal property difference?

Who is the wordsmith for this shit?
Far be it for me to be the one to take Lou to task on this but.....
Broadbanding a radio was always about getting a somewhat consistent OUTPUT across the frequency range the radio could cover and NOT about the RANGE the radio could cover.

No. You said that. There is no base loaded X-terminator and if there was I couldn't tell you what it could do because I never measured it.

All I am saying is this. There are shorter antennas that can beat a 102" SS whip. If you can beat or equal the 102 then why not take advantage of it. After all the best place to mount an antenna is the roof. All antennas gain from the roof location. It is much more convenient and likely that you would mount a five foot antenna on the roof.

The only disadvantage of the X-Terminator type antenna is its cost and its ugliness, but you can mount it on the roof without fear of trimming your neighbors trees.

Broadband over power lines is now being rolled out in Manassas Va.
This is a very lucrative technology, but it also appears to be a very noisy technology, radiating noise from a couple MHz through low VHF.

Believe it or not, even CB radio is supposed to be protected against this sort of interference.
At least the FCC is supposed to act on well grounded complaints by a primary spectrum user, against interference caused by other primaries, secondaries, and part 15 devices.

RADIO LAW: FCC COMMITTEE TO GET READY FOR WRC-07

The ink has yet to complely dry on the agreements reached ar WRC-03 as the FCC begins getting ready for the next World Radiocommunication Conference in 2007. As part of the preparations FCC Chairman Michael Powell has announced the appointment of Nancy Victory as Chair, and Peter Hadinger as Vice-Chair of the agency’s WRC-07 Advisory Committee. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, is here with has some background on each of the appointees:

Nancy Victory is the former Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Communications and Information and the former Administrator of the National Telecommunications and Information Administration. Prior to her appointment to the Department of Commerce, Ms. Victory was a partner in the Washington law firm of Wiley, Rein and Fielding, where she focused on legal and regulatory issues faced by communications companies.

Peter Hadinger is Director of Communications Initiatives for Northrop Grumman’s Space Technology Sector. Mr. Hadinger has taken industry leadership roles on global satellite issues, including privatization, protection and spectrum allocation. He is past Chairman of the Satellite Industry Association and current vice- chair of the Satellite Task Force in the President’s National Security Telecommunications Advisory Committee.

Also getting an appointment is Alex Roytblat who is Assistant Chief of the Strategic Analysis and Negotiations Division of the FCC’s International Bureau. He will direct the Commission's WRC- 07 preparatory activities and serve as the Designated Federal Official to the Advisory Committee. Roytblat directed the Commission’s preparatory activities for last June’s 2003 World Radiocommunication Conference held in Geneva.

The Advisory Committee will be tasked with providing advice and technical analyses of the nations telecommunications needs. It will also make specific recommendations on matters relating to that conference. (FCC Release)

TALKING ON THE AIR: BIG SUNSPOT ACTIVITY MAY HAMPER YOUR QSO'S

If you are wondering why you may not be able to make contact on your favorite band, the answer is right out there in space. According to propagation reports from the Space Environment Center, a solar storm, centered around Sunspot number 484, has grown into the biggest in recorded history. And a solar storm with a sunspot that size can easily impact on radio propagation here on Earth.

Sunspot 484 is reportedly about the size of the planet Jupiter, and forecasters say that another big sunspot could soon appear near the sun's southeastern limb. The active region is not yet directly visible, but the Solar and Heliospheric Observatory satellite has seen material being blasted over the sun's limb from the approaching spot. Major eruptions are possible from these active regions as they rotate across the face of the sun over the next two weeks.

Also this word of caution. Never, never look directly at the sun. While these sunspots are easy to see its also very dangerous to try. Unprotected eyes can suffer severe and perminant damage from looking directly at the sun. Instead, as we have said before, visit www.spaceweather.com for safe solar observing tips. (ASWLC)

RADIO POLITICS: NOAA SPACE WEATHER SERVICE THREATENED

Solar propagation reports like this one could soon disappear. CQ Magazine's news service reports that the service on which many amateurs depend for reports on ionospheric conditions may have its funding sharply cut or eliminated under two versions of a Congressional spending plan for Fiscal Year 2004.

The Space Environment Center, part of the Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, provides space weather reports on solar and geomagnetic activity that affect the ionosphere, which in turn affects radio propagation. In addition, the bureau monitors solar flares and similar events that can damage satellites. This gives advance knowledge that can help protect them. And for radio amateurs, the propagation predictions in C-Q and other publications depend on these space weather observations.

The Space Environment Center is actually operated jointly by NOAA and the Air Force, but its funding is in the NOAA budget. It suffered a 40% budget cut in the current fiscal year. The House budget proposal for 2004 calls for an additional 40% cut. But the nail that could close the coffin lid is in the Senate. That version of the bill cuts funding for the Space Environment Center altogether. The Senate says that such activities are rightly the domain of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Air Force.

According to an e-mail from C-Q, the House Science Committee's Environment, Technology and Standards Subcommittee will be holding a hearing October 30th on this funding bill. C-Q says that any letters and comments from the public will be entered into the record. If you are concerned about the possible loss of information gathered and disseminated by the Space Environment Center, you may write to the House Committee on Science, Environment, Technology and Standards Subcommittee, 2320 Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC 20515. HAM RADIO IN SPACE: NEW ALL-HAM CREW ARRIVES AT ISS

A new three man all ham crew has reached the International Space Station, but only two of the new arrivals will remain on-orbit the next several months.

Called the Expedition 8 crew, the commander is NASA Astronaut Mike Foale, KB5UAC. He is accompanied on the I-S-S by Russian Cosmonaut Alexander Kaleri, U8MIR, and the Europen Space Agency's Pedro Duque, KC5RGG. All three arrived at the ISS on October 20th on board a Russian Soyuz transport vehicle.

Foale and Kaleri will repace Expedition 7 crew members Commander Yuri Malenchenko, RK3DUP and NASA Science Officer Ed Lu, KC5WKJ. Duque, who's flying under a contract between the Russian and Europen space agencies and will spend the week in space before returning to Earth with the Expedition 7 crew.

KB5UAC and U8MIR hope to be active on the ISS ham radio station as time permits during their stint in space. We will have other ham radio in spaced news later on in this weeks report. (AMSAT, published news reports)

ENFORCEMENT: HAM CHARGED IN AIRLINER CASE

A 20 year old ham radio operator and college junior has been charged with breaching airport security. The FBI says that Nathaniel Heatwole, WZ3AR, has admitted to planting box cutters, bleach and matches on two airliners. Amateur Radio Newsline's Paul Courson, WA3VJB, gives us a profile of Heatwole and his involvement in the hobby:

If you're a contester, you may have worked WZ3AR, licensed to Damascus Maryland, a suburb of Washington DC. In research for Newsline, a profile of a fairly ordinary young ham radio operator has emerged.

His listing on QRZ.com shows a willingness to QSL both to short-wave listeners and the amateur community alike. The Advanced Class licensee appears to have been primarily active on HF, in the specialty of contesting.

In August of this year he won a thousand dollar scholarship from the Foundation for Amateur Radio, a coalition of radio clubs in the area around Maryland, DC and Virginia. In a club newsletter, he was shown as headed into his 4th year at Guilford College in North Carolina, pursuing a double major of Physics and Political Science.

His former call is KB3CBW, and an internet search has found a snapshot of a young man closely resembling who now is a 20 year old seen in television footage and accused of trying to breach airline security. As KB3CBW, he is listed several times with photos a Dayton Hamvention, 1999 gallery.

His call sign also turns up on a contest log dupesheet for Field Day 1999 on 40 meters phone, and in other contests including a Maryland-DC QSO party. On a contest e-mail reflector, someone signing that name and call sign is asking questions about the beverage antenna, and how he plans to buy a better contesting radio than his Kenwood TS-140S, that the person was using as of the posting dated 1999.

By Feburary 2000, the former KB3CBW was turning up as WZ3AR on the webpage minutes of the Potomac Valley Amateur Radio club, which serves the same area as his licensed station location in Maryland.

This call sign also shows up in various contest logs, including an Islands on the Airwaves event and Field Day. WZ3AR was shown in 2001 as operating from Virginia's Chincoteague Island on 15 meters sideband. One message thread refers to a June 2001 issue of CQ magazine, and an article on keeping a footswitch from sliding around.

There was other advice.

In a contest discussion board, someone signing those call letters rejected the practice among certain hams of tape recording contest activity to later enter the information in a competitive logbook. The posted message said such a practice raises ethical questions, and that he advised against doing so.

The New York Times has quoted friends as saying he has offered strong pacifist views and is highly principled.

For now, he is charged with carrying a concealed dangerous weapon aboard jetliners, reportedly as a test of airline security and to demonstrate his alleged protest to perceived flaws in that security.

In Weashington, Paul Courson, WA3VJB, for Newsline.

After a court appearance Monday, October 20th, Heatwole, a junior at Guilford College in Greensboro, N.C., was released without bail for a preliminary hearing slated for November 10th. If tried and convicted, he faces a hefty fine and up to 10 years in a Federal prison. (ARNewsline(tm), published news reports)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC TAKES MORE ACTION AGAINST EX-KG6IRO

A follow-up to last weeks story regarding Jack Gerritsen, the ex-KG6IRO. The FCC has now taken action against another one of his licenses and again warned him to stay off the air. Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, has more:

--

FCC Special Councel Riley Hollingsworth has written to tell Jack Gerritsen of Bell California that the Commission's Wireless Telecommunications Bureau has acted to set aside Gerritsen's General Mobile Radio Service or G-M-R-S license. This, pursuant to Section 1.113 of the Commission's rules.

The action by to set aside Gerritsen's G-M-R-S license took place on October 14th. Hollingsworth's letter says the action is based on Gerritsen's alleged continued unlicensed operations and complaints of deliberate interference from transmitters the FCC says that he operates.

Hollingsworth letter tells Gerritsen that his G-M-R-S application has reverted to pending status. Also, that it will be made a part of a forthcoming hearing to determine if the former radio amateur is qualified to hold any Commission licenses. This is the same type of hearing that Gerritsen's ham radio ticket currently faces.

Hollingsworth letter again warns Gerritsen that he has no authority to operate radio transmitting equipment. If he continues, Gerritsen could face both to monetary penalties and imprisonment. Hollingsworth also suggested that Gerritsen consult an attorney in this matter.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, in Los Angeles.

Meantime, the number of Los Angeles ares repeater owner operators that claim Gerritsen is interfereing with their systems continues to grow. For the moment, they and their control operators continue to turn repeaters off whenever the station claiming to be KG6IRO attempts to make a transmission over one. (FCC, ARNewsline(tm))

ENFORCEMENT: UNAUTHORIZED OPERATION LEADS TO LICENSE TURN-IN

Meantime, a ham has surrendered his license to the FCC after it was found that he caused problems for police radio operations. The FCC's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, has the rest of the story:

Duckworth: "In March, the Enforcement Bureau notified Justin Whaley, KC9DCP, Columbia City, Indiana, that close-in proximity direction finding indicated that on numerous occasions between January 2nd and March 13th he interfered with the operation of the Columbia City Police Department radio system. In order to resolve this matter, he has agreed to relinquish his license until March 28th of 2005 and agreed not to maintain or operate an Amateur station.

Whaley was requested to return his Amateur Service license to the FCC. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC: STAY OF THE W6RHC REPEATER

A ham who refused to stay off a repeater after being told to vacate by the licensee has now received a notice to comply from the FCC. Again, the FCC's Daryl Duckworth, NN0W:

Duckworth: "A warning notice has been sent to Scott Rogers, K6EVP, of Paradise, California, for failing to refrain from using the W6RHC repeater ass requsted both verbally and in writing by the trustee of the Golden Empire Amateur Radio Society. The letter was isssued as a result of his failure, verified by the Office of Emergency Services of Butte County California, to follow operational rules set forth by the licensee and control operators of the repeater system for its users."

The letter went on to say that the FCC expects Rogers to abide by the request to stay off the W6RHC system and any other such request by a repeater licensee, control operator or trustee. If he uses the repeater again after receipt of the FCC warning letter, the agency says that it will initiate enforcement action against Rogers license. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT NEEDED: PHONY TEXT MESSAGE TO CA CELL PHONE USERS

Bakersfield California area cellular telephone would probably welcome some FCC enforcement action. This, after they were awakened early Tuesday morning, October 21st to a phony text message.

According to news reports, someone managed to hack the areas wireless communications' system. The hacker then posted a message urging cell phone users to support a strike by many of the states grocery workers now in its second week.

The United Food and Commercial Workers Union denies responsibility for the message. A spokeswoman for the wireless service providers says that she does not know how it happened. She says that that wireless providers have no position on the strike. The sender of the message remains unknown. (Published news report)

RESCUE RADIO: MONTANNA HAMS GET BIG THANK-YOU

Amateur Radio's role in last summers Montana's forest fires haave received official recognition. This, when the US Forest Service and Helena area organizations hosted an appreciation picnic for all the voluntees who put themselves on the line to assist fighting the blaze.

According to the ARRL Letter, the event honored the firefighters, law enforcement officers and community volunteers who assisted with firefighting efforts in Lewis and Clark, Powell, Jefferson, and Broadwater counties. This included a number of radio amateurs who volunteered their time and gear.

Among those recognized were Jim Haslip, W7CK, and Rollie Fisher, KC7WBP. Haslip has been an aerial fire spotter for 40 summers. Fisher set up at Lincoln's Hooper Park every day during the fires, providing current information to residents and visitors. He and his wife were among the many families forced to evacuate their homes because of the fire danger.

Amateur Radio's support of Red Cross and other relief agencies during the fire emergency also received recognition. Lewis and Clark County Emergency Coordinator Bob Solomon, K7HLN, accepted a plaque on behalf of the Amateur Radio Emergency Service and the Capital City Amateur Radio Club.

An estimated 300 people turned out for the event at the Lewis and Clark Fairgrounds in Helena. (ARRL)

PROMOTING THE HOBBY: JOTA VIDEO NEEDED

If you took part in last weekends scouting Jamboree on the Air, and have some good quality videotape of the event, the people who produce most of the ham radio documentaries want to hear from you. As reported two weeks ago, Dave Bell, W6AQ, Alan Kaul, W6RCL and Bill Pasternak, WA6ITF, are always looking for good video of ham radio happenings that they might be able to incorporate into a presentation about the hobby. As scouting and ham radio enjoy a very unique relationship, this is an event that is sure to make it into one of their shows, but only if they have the pictures and sound. If you have video that you want to share, please e-mail the production team to hamvideo@juno.com and let them know what you have. They will get back to you with information on where to send it. Again that e-mail address is hamvideo@juno.com (The Producers)

HAM GATHERINGS: HANDIHAMS IN CALIFORNIA IN MARCH 2004

Back on this side of the Atlantic, word that the HandiHams will hold their 2004 California Radio Camp in Malibu California begining on Monday, March 1st, and continuing to Sunday, March 7th. Tuition breaks will be provided for beginners from Western states working on a first license or on a General, and for early bird registrations. An Operating Skills course will also be offered along with opportunities for learning about blind computing with JAWS, public service communications, and lots of getting on the air!. Also, an open ham radio test session will take place on Saturday March 6.

The camp is open to HandiHam members with disabilities. Organizers provide all food, lodging, ham radio classes, and fun activities for the week long outing. To request an application or more information call the HandiHams toll free at 866-426-3442 toll-free or e-mail the group to hamradio@courage.org (HandiHams)

NEWSLINE: NO MORE FAX

If you have been trying to send Amateur Radio Newsline a fax the past week then you notice that our machine is not picking up. The reason -- its been taken off line due to our inability to get unsolicted fax spammers to stop sending us unwanted advertising.

Even though it is a violation of federal law to send an unsolicited fax advertisement, that has not stopped the fax spammers. They make their living by sending out this unwanted electronic junk mail. And while much the same as the junk e-mail we all get, the big difference is that unsolicited faxes waste print cartreges and paper. And that costs Amateur Radio Newsline money that we just cannot afford to waste.

After spending the past year trying to get these nuisances to stop -- including an official complaint to the FCC, we have given up. If you need to send us a fax, you will first have to call us or e-mail us to arrange for us to turn the machine on. Otherwise, the fax is gone until the federal government acts to put the spam fax mailing companies out of business. (ARNewsline(tm))

EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: BALLOON DELIVERED RADIO

Turning to the emerging technology page, it now looks as if balloon delivered radios could bring new sound to North Korean residents. This, if a preacher gets his way.

Revrend Douglas Shin wants to help liberate North Korea by delivering radio recievers by balloon. Shin's idea is to have helium filled balloons would carry radios acrosss the Demiliterized Zone into North Korea. An automatic valve would let the gas out slowly so the balloons touch down softly without damage to the payload. Once retrieved by the people in North Korea, they would only have to turn them on and listen.

Shin says that he plans to launch his balloons from South Korea or ships off shore. Included aliong with each radio will be prayer material and a North Korean bank note. The latter is worth about one U-S Dollar. (Published news report)

THAT FINAL ITEM: MEASURING THE SPEED OF GRAVITY

And finally this week, it appears as if Albert Einstein was right. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Mert Garlick, N6AWE, tells us about what:

The great Albert Einstein was correct when he said that the speed of gravity matches the speed of light. This, according to astronomers who took advantage of a rare planetary alignment to survey the relationship of these two fundamental forces of nature.

Edward B. Fomalout of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory, and, Sergei Kopeikin of the University of Missouri, measured the amount that light from a distant star that was deflected by the gravity of Jupiter as the planet passed in front of it. The researchers used 10 radio telescopes scattered around the world to precisely gauge how light from a distant quasar was bowed or warped as it passed by Jupiter on its way to the Earth.

To make the measurement, the instruments had to detect a minute deflection of the light. Dr. Fomalout compared the required precision to being able to measure the width of a human hair from 250 miles away.

Jupiter is in the precise position for such a measurement only once a decade. The locations of the telescopes ranged from from Hawaii to Germany. Researchers are very happy with the experiments seeming total success.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Mert Garlick, N6AWE, near the Queen Mary in Long Beach California.

Knowing the precise speed of gravity is important to physicists looking for technologic break-throughs. It also affects some of the basic theories of the relationship of space and time. (Science Today)

I certainly know more about where I am than you do. If you want to say that I am lying about where I am, you provide the proof.
Otherwise, just accept the fact that I really do know where I am - and you are cluless, even though I have never made my location a secret.

>flee, hide, lurk,, same thing.

Lurking is not the same as fleeing... they are opposites.
Lurking suggests that someone is staying around, fleeing suggests that they have gone.
And, as I post messages on the group, that does not suggest "hiding".

You really should get a better grasp of the English language.

>but you admit it is true.

Where?
Please back up that claim with proof.

>Oh and I suppose that you voted for Tony Blair?

What has Tony Blair got to do with this newsgroup... is he a CBer?
Maybe he is a Keyclown, huh?
You still cannot give a straight answer, you have to dodge the questions.
You really are too scared to give real answers.

>> Well, look again, it is not just Americans.
>> Are you now going to whine over the suggestions made about me?

I take that as a "no".
Why does it not surprise me that you are not bothered about that site calling me a "Brummy" and a "Vannie"?

>> just post abuse, and show no interest in CB.

That's your problem... you don't see a reason to think.

So, you believe that a troll is someone with an interest in the subject covered by the newsgroup. And you believe that those who show no interest in the group subject are genuine users.

Your refusal to think is evident.

>As much of a life as you can in a van.

I don't live in a van, I don't even drive one.
My life off the newsgroup involves my family - I guess you don't have one of those, with the time you spend on the newsgroup.

>You might even be a heathen.

If you are using the word in the strict sense, then it should be considered unlikely as I have been known to make references to the Bible and have had discussions on the subject in the past with people such as Dick.

As nobody has asked, and religion is not the subject of this group, I could be of any or no religion.

>That's an accusation and lie.

Are you now denying that I provided proof, do I have to jog your poor memory by reposting the messages again.
Why should the group be filled with reposted messages... just go look up the posts. While you are at it, take a look back at the "Antikeyclown" policy on truth.

>What do you have, f*rtface?

More that the childish insults you use... I provided proof.
If your memory is failing, try looking it up. It shouldn't be difficult for a Google Troll to do a search.

>Birmingham has a library? I thought they only had jails.

Stop whining about CBers "trolling" a CB group.
If you don't like seeing messages from CBers, try a different group.

And, if you don't like the content of that site, just don't look at it. Is that not simple enough for you?

>> So, you say that I cannot refer to anyone as George... not even Mr >> dubya Bush?
>> What has that to do with how many Georges there are in the World?

>You do? OK that's it then you can never call anyone geo again.

That was a question... learn to read English.
Then maybe you could attempt an answer to it, although I doubt it somehow.

>Now you think there is a plot against you.

I never said that.
Either your comprehension skills are sadly lacking, or you just try to avoid the facts.

>Who does it refer to then?

Is that your logic... if you cannot think who something refers to, it must be your buddy?
Your logic is as screwed up as your understanding of English.

Anyhow, last time I checked, that page seemed to have gone. I saw no reference to it on the site.
So, with that gone, maybe you can take up my cause now - that page calling me a "Brummy" and a "Vannie". If you whine enough, maybe that one will disappear too.

>> Wait a minute...
>> You say that it does not call them "gay" because they are not .
>> So, the site does not call people "gay" unless they are?

>Even brummies can stumble on the truth sometimes.

I take that as a "yes".
So, you believe that, if it is calling the nameless one from PA a pouf, then he must be one.

PLEASE NOTE: I am not calling anyone a pouff, just establishing the fact that "Citizens For A Keyclown-Free Newsgroup" seems to be doing so.

>How do you know who my best buddy is?

I don't... he refuses to give even his Christian name.

>> The references you make are not to "sex", but buggery.

>That is not true, *ssf*ck.

Are you saying that the term you used above was not a reference to buggery?
Do you believe that the rear end is the usual entry point during copulation?

>> No, you see everyone as "Gay"... typical of a closet bugger.
>> Just come out the closet, it worked for Mr O'Dowd and Mr Michael (you >> do not want me to call them by their first names).
>I don't know those people

They are both pop stars who "came out" when caught out.
George Michael (I cannot remember his real name) was caught in "lewd acts" in a public toilet in America, and George O'Dowd (Boy George) denied being a pouf until he was caught out, then denied ever denying it.

>What definition is that?

Do you not remember the "FAQ" type posts, answering the question, "What is a Keyclown"?
Try looking it up. You use Google for your troll posts, so it should not be too much trouble to search it.
Then, maybe you could explain what you mean when you say "Keyclown", as it is not in the English dictionary.

I don't know yet, but it sounds like it's rather larger than the test systems that have been implemented previously. The power companies are claiming that this isn't causing interference, but if you go to the ARRL site, you can watch movies of field observations where the energy radiated is wiping out pretty much the whole HF spectrum.

Well, I guess I could of stayed with the standard material for this group. The pedophilia stories, the name calling, the hobby bashing negative dribble, But I chose different. I chose to stay constructive and on topic.

I'm sorry you can't see that. The original message by me was to point out that there are 5 foot antennas that will perform very good.

vj29pv87a25f2f1vs1m4ohnc697gqkvc73@4ax.com

This was disputed, so I offered proof by posting the test.
I also offered a possible explanation of why a 102"SS can be beat. You have the right to not believe that a 102 can't be beat but it is ridiculous for you to suggest that these discussions are not what this group is suppose to be about.

There has been no name calling, no pede comments, no gay comments, or anti CB rhetoric. What are you complaining about?

You must of been so used to the former that you were caught off guard when a real discussion came up. Remember that if everyone agrees then there is no discussion.

BPL has not worked that well in other countries and in some places it was taken out.
There is better ways for connecting to the net anywhere, and its not BPL.
Just like HDTV is being forced on to the Public and the FCC is counting on making BIG money on the spectrum after the Analog TV stations give up their allocations. It all comes down to money.

Frank really gets into his work. Now if he could just transfer that energy to an actual test. The paper work is interesting but does nothing to show how a 102" SS marginally fails to beat some shorter antennas.

Theory and formulas are fine but they will never include all the variables. When the results are to close to call you have to go to the end all. The actual test.

I may be wrong but isn't BPL's implementation limited. Doesn't BPL have a low enough bandwidth that it is only practical in rural areas

Depends how they set it up.
Broadband on cable is limited too, but they do it as "neighborhoods", rather than trying to feed the whole thing from the head end. I expect the power companies will roll it out anywhere they have enough potential subscribers to justify the cost.

Something about dragging out misconcepts.
It seems to me that you may be the one that believes in misconcepts. There is a easy way to determine this. It's done by asking you a simple yes or a no question.

Do you believe a shorter antenna can be made to show more gain than the 102" SS whip.?
yes or no

I bet the results of your test were unrepeatable. I think your X-terminator generated a minor lobe in the direction of the recieve antenna due to the coils and a funky RF ground and other variations in the pattern.

I think he fudged the numbers. Like I said, if anyone has one of those X-terminators in my area I'll be more than happy to run a test. In fact, I can run it with a few other CB antennas I have laying around, including 102" fiberglass and magnetic SS whips, a short center-loader from RS, a couple helical dummy-loads, and I even think there's a rubber-ducky in the scrap heap.
And I can test them properly, mapping a field from my truck to just outside the near-field, using an unmodified AM radio (unmodulated), no QD connectors, tuned with an FSM, measurements for forward and reflected power, and DC voltage measured at the radio during transmit. Hell, I'll even punch a hole in the roof for this test!

Gain in relation to the 102" SS

Getting back to the misconception aspect.....

You said yes to "Can a shorter antenna show more gain than the 102" SS.

Now the final question. Where's the misconception I am spreading?

I don't think he fudged the numbers, I think his readings were inaccurate due to poor testing procedures.

This is Weird!!!!

Test

Just follow the instructions as quickly as possible.

Do not go to the next calculation before you have finished the previous one.

You do not need to write or remember the answers, just do it using your mind.

You'll be surprised.

Start:

How much is:

15+6

89+2

12+53

75+26

25+52

63+32

I know! Calculations are hard work but it's nearly over...

Come on, one more...

123+5

QUICK! THINK ABOUT A TOOL AND A COLOR!

Scroll further to the bottom...

A bit more...

You have just thought about a red hammer, haven't you????

If this is not the case, you are among 2% of people who have a "different" if not "abnormal" mind. 98% of the folks would answer a
"red hammer" while doing this exercise.

For advanced techs and serious radio hobbyists, we're now offering a FREE copy of our previously published "CB EPROM DATA BOOK" by Martin Pickering. (EPROM = Erasable Programmable Read Only Memory.) We sold it for many years but it's now out of print. This little manual of 60 illustrated pages is an absolute GEM of CB technical knowledge you'll just never find anywhere else. And it's yours for FREE from our Web site.

This book reveals the secrets of advanced channel programming, and picks up where our "CB PLL DATA BOOK" (www.cbcintl.com/pllbook.htm) leaves off. You'll get a thorough background in how these amazing programmable chips can be used to modify many popular CB PLL circuits for expanded frequency coverage. Covers the basic programming techniques, and even includes real PC board artwork for making EPROM circuits. Sample artwork includes EPROM boards for the popular MB8719, PLL02A, ï¿½PD2824, and ï¿½PD858 PLL circuits.

Best of all, the price is right! Download your FREE copy of "THE CB EPROM DATA BOOK" (948 KB Adobe PDF) at:

www.cbcintl.com/docs/EpromBook.htm

Don't forget to check out all our other CB specialty books, plans, kits, & high-performance accessories at:

"Sales Pending FCC Type Acceptance". Gee, how clever....not. We all know that those amps are never going to get authorization. And "AUX"? Do you really think the FCC is -that- stupid? What a shame -- an Extra making and selling illegal amps thinly disguised as "amateur" equipment. No wonder so many would-be hams choose not to get a license.

Buck,
Yes, the fibreglass rod is just glued into the base, then the inner conductor is soldered to the base. I assume it's epoxy but I can't say that for sure.

It would be interesting to see the 102" fiberglass against the S/S whip.

My tests (plural) were made as accurate as any CB'er could do with common equipment. Are you suggesting only professionals with professional equipment and a test range or chamber test antennas? Are you suggesting that we just read the book and leave it at that? My tests were accurate enough to show a consistent gain ranking of the antennas. Even though one test showed a different reported ranking between two signal readers they were still repeatable in the sense that each time the 102"SS was compared to others it fell short to specific antennas each and ever time.

You seem to forget one thing. I originally tested the X-Terminator to de-bunk it. I could not. I could of just kept my mouth shut. I am sure others in this group would of done just that, but I decided to post the numbers anyways. The numbers don't lie.

Where's the misconception? I never suggested a tolerance to the tests.
I was up front and detailed about the conditions. All I did is post the numbers.

What's accurate?..........The gain ranking What's repeatable?.............The 102" stainless being beat by some shorter antennas.

Ther's no misconception.

Nope. Just a bunch of hoo ha, and arguments about field strength meter readings.

I'm gonna buy an X-terminator, and compare it in the real world application. If it's near as good as the 108"er, I'll be happy.

Thanks for the tip. Tnom.

For advanced techs and serious radio hobbyists, we're now offering a FREE copy of our previously published "CB EPROM DATA BOOK" by Martin Pickering. (EPROM = Erasable Programmable Read Only Memory.) We sold it for many years but it's now out of print. This little manual of 60 illustrated pages is an absolute GEM of CB technical knowledge you'll just never find anywhere else. And it's yours for FREE from our Web site.

This book reveals the secrets of advanced channel programming, and picks up where our "CB PLL DATA BOOK" (www.cbcintl.com/pllbook.htm) leaves off. You'll get a thorough background in how these amazing programmable chips can be used to modify many popular CB PLL circuits for expanded frequency coverage. Covers the basic programming techniques, and even includes real PC board artwork for making EPROM circuits. Sample artwork includes EPROM boards for the popular MB8719, PLL02A, ï¿½PD2824, and ï¿½PD858 PLL circuits.

The misconception is that you don't need to look at the book. How do you know what to llok for if you don't read the book? Your test results are not repeatable by anyone else, there fore they are invalid. The misconception is also that your measurements were accurate. Fudging numbers on an s-meter is "keyclown science".

If you get the opportunity to swap the 108" SS with the X-Terminator feel free to report the results. One way or the other.

I'd love to see someone else do a test. Be forewarned. If your results are in favor of the X-Terminator you'll get flack for reporting the results. Your test will be examined and will be deemed as being flawed.

If your test shows the 108" SS as the superior antenna then the obvious will happen. Your post will be accepted as legit and there will be no argument over the results. Even though the test parameters were the same.

It's a Catch-22 and tnom knows it because -no one- could ever duplicate tnom's test conditions, the wooded terrain, the recieving antenna, etc. etc. so whatever results you got won't jive with his. Lke I said, it's "keyclown science" and not real engineering he practices.

One thing for sure. Your response is invalid because you have no data to back up your claim. Fudging your opinion without any real data is foolish.

Run a test. Until you do your dispute of my test results mean nothing.

Who's science is flawed. The one who takes for granted that a 102" SS is king, or the one who runs numerous tests with the same results to refute it?

So what do you think is creating the "gain" for the X-terminator? The loading

So anyway Tnom, is the above version ok or do have a recommendation?

Don't buy it, Steve.

>Why not?

Because the reports about this antenna, and antennas like these, are classic examples of the 'miracle miniature' syndrome that plagues antenna manufacturers in their fierce competition. Unlike other industries, they don't have to back up their claims of gain figures, which is why you see ads for rubber duckies with +126 dB gain. But I'm sure you could get one for free if you post a bogus antenna test on usenet or a web page and declare it the winner.....

Don't believe Tnom's test was valid -regardless- of the "results". It doesn't matter which antenna scored highest because the test was done without any clue as to how to perform such a test. For example:

- Different antenna types and lengths will give different contours when mounted on the same vehicle; so while you might find a little gain in one direction, the other 359 degrees suck. Same deal with radiation angle, which will directly affect the range of the ground wave. Now I might ignore this issue if he had tested the antennas from the top of a flying saucer....

- Probably the biggest problem with Tnom's "test" was that there was no impedance matching from the coax to the antenna. Loaded antennas usually have a lower feedpoint impedance, resulting in a larger mismatch (higher SWR). The problem here is that if the radio and antenna are not properly grounded (and a mag-mount is -not- a proper ground), the SWR meter isn't going to show that mismatch unless the meter is connected at the antenna feedpoint, which was not the case (and wouldn't have mattered anyway because the antenna was not properly grounded). He might have caught the problem had he measured and compared the forward power of all the antennas, but he didn't because he felt is was "not needed".

- Tnom used a radio modified for 'swang' and modulated it with a tone. The test should have been done without -any- modulation because any change in modulation will change the signal strength from a radio so modified, and unless the modulation comes from a source of constant amplitude (an audio signal generator), the readings are worthless. Notice that he never did disclose the source of his "constant tone" (someone whistling in the mic?).

- Bandwidth was never measured. The coils on that antenna should have a very high Q, which means a very narrow bandwidth. If the test showed that the antenna actually has a wide bandwidth, then there is some power being dumped somewhere as heat and not RF, probably from a resistor hidden somewhere in the shaft, and most likely the shaft inside the coil, shunting the coil and lowering it's Q.

- Field strength was not measured from a field strength meter, but from a commercial receiver, almost all of which incorporate some variation of AGC (Automatic Gain Control). IOW, the receiver's gain changes according to the strength of the signal. So for that reason alone the readings are not accurate.

- Tnom did two tests. The first test used two receivers. If the variables of the test were constant, the readings should have been identical if not proportional. They were neither. In his second test he eliminated the second receiver because it was "not needed". In fact, they -are- needed because it's an empirical method of double-checking your work.

- The concept of center-loading an antenna has been around for a very long time. If it were at all possible to shorten a 1/4 wave vertical and get better performance, the design would have been implemented into AM broadcast towers decades ago. Drive around and look at some of the towers in your area. How many of them look like the X-terminator? None.

- The antenna is ugly.

Now if you still want to buy the antenna, it's your money to waste. But who knows... it might have some collector value in a hundred years or so, just like all those quack medical devices.

I really don't know. I would suggest it does a better job at

3. Thicker antennas perform marginally better than thinner.

4. More conductive antenna stock makes a marginal difference over less conductive antenna stock.

But it really doesn't matter. The numbers show all I have to know.

tnom : All tested with a constant tone, constant power transmitter oxyMORON :Using....? An audio signal generator and a TRC-453?

What was the radio modded? What was the modulation percentage?

tnom: A transmitter with no alc set for a constant low power carrier was used.

end quotes

The test was done on SSB. A constant tone on SSB is what?

S-meters are not accurate and I never stated they were. The are very accurate in giving relative readings.

And in my setup the X-Terminator outperformed the 102"SS
I never said it would outperform in any other setup because I never ran any other setup.

And my setup was typical for a magnet mount. I never said it was anything different. Being a typical setup you would expect typical results. A typical result is the most accurate result for a typical setup.

As we all know under Idea conductions a 1/4 wave whip will out do any loaded antenna.
But in the real world a loaded antenna (shortened) mounted in the center of the roof will work much better in ALL directions than a 1/4 wave whip mounted on the bumper, or the rear of the mobile. If the long whip was mounted on the left back side, the best direction will be to the right front, whereas a center mounted antenna on the roof, even with its somewhat more loss will work better in all directions, as the mobile would not have to be turned like a beam. So the point is I prefer a good trunk mounted, or a center mounted antenna over the 1/4 whip.

Been there done that.

Wow, he even mentions himself as the culprit.

Entirely reasonable, provided they tell you what the reference is.
A claim of "5 dB gain" is meaningless. In ham circles, when I see this, I automatically assume they mean dBi, but given the level of snake oil in CB circles, I think in terms of dBdummyload.

An interesting test would be to measure two of the same antenna, against each other, on the same vehicle, then measure the first one again. Of course the readings should be identical, but differences would indicate problems in mounting most likely, or variations in local conditions, like reflected signal from vehicles and people moving around. It would give a good idea of the size of the inherent error in the measurements made.

In order to truly show what's going on, you also need to pattern the antenna, measuring the signal at regular points around the compass. While an onmi antenna mounted on a vehicle may show gain in one direction, there will be a corresponding notch somewhere else. The pattern, when mounted on a vehicle, can be surprisingly "lumpy".

In order to do a reasonably accurate test, you'll need a nice RF quiet area to test in, and a whole lot of open space. Ideally, you'd put the vehicle on a turntable, but that's normally not practical.
I'd settle for very slowly driving in as tight a circle as possible, to minimize effects from the antenna waving around.

Another variable to consider, is wether they were tuned at all, and if so, were they tuned for resonance, or lowest SWR. I tune for resonance, and match for SWR.

A 1 wavelength feedline, of something reasonably efficient like FSJ1-50 would suffice.
The reactive component will be roated back around to the same point, and it's way more convenient than measuring at the base of the antenna.

Important, and easy to do. Impedance measurements at Ch1 and CH40 would tell the story.

To be fair, fabricating the coils for such an antenna would be an interesting challenge.

I run a cobra 6000, which seems a reasonable design. It's mounted in the center of the roof of my Expedition, and just slightly taller than the Diamond SG-7900 in front of it. Overall height is somewhat of a concern.
It tunes to resonance nicely, and ends up at a 2/1 SWR, which isn't far enough off to bother matching.. If I had a 2-1 un-un handy, I'd probably use it. I'm not too surprised at the high impedance (100 ohms) at resonance, I think they are designed to be used in a co-phased arraingement on trucks.

There's another typical sight, a pair of antennas, often not the same type, running "co-phased" on a very small car, placed much too close together, like 2' separation. The resulting pattern is rather amusing.

I run into the same BS on the other end of the spectrum.

I recently had to look into antennas for a bluetooth transciever, and was rather dissapointed to find the equivalent of "rubber ducks" at 2.4 GHz, selling for $12. (in production quantities!) These are so called "chip antennas" that are roughly the size of this letter "W" on your screen, being marketed as "high gain" antennas. When I finally was able to get a plot out of them, it turned out that the highest gain was -10dBi, and as low as -20dBi...
High gain compared to a 50 ohm resistor the same size, I suppose.

We ended up using a simple monopole, just a track on the PCB. Cost, essentially zero.
Gain, roughly 1-2dBi. I didn't bother patterning, simple emperical tests show it's overkill for our intended application. It's giving measurably less operating distance than a reference dipole, but the dipole is inconveniently large.

> Now if you still want to buy the antenna, it's your money to waste. But who

My favorite CB gimmick was the "zing ring". You were supposed to clamp this little halo around the bottom of your antenna to improve the ground. The thing had a radius of about 6 inches or so.
It wouldn't even have had that effect up on VHF, where it's dimensions become a significant fraction of a wavelength. Lately the Zing Ring is gone, replaced with three little stubby wound whips that connect to the base of the antenna electrically.. The new version looks better anyway.. I'm sure it's just as effective as the old one.

You have to laugh at the concept of a "15,000 Watt" antenna, on a mag-mount, fed with cheap RG-58 sized coax.

These antenna gimmicks are all 100% effective in meeting their design goals. They look good enough to separate suckers and their money.
Any benefit to your radiation efficiency or pattern is totally coincidental.

I agree. In order to exclude such confounds the control or reference antenna should be measured several times and any variation noted, even any variation during a single transmission.

That's called "mapping the contour". It's not difficult to do, and is a basic procedure for any antenna testing. In fact, it's a procedure that is required before any broadcast station can get it's license, as the map is used to calculate the ERP of the transmitter.

The salt flats in Utah come to mind, but we have some pretty flat desert areas just west of here.

That's fine and practical for one antenna, but when comparing several where different input impedances will be encountered, the method of tuning should be independant of input Z. About the only way to do that is with an FSM. After all, a 50 ohm dummy load will show a 1:1 SWR.....

The problem there is that the feedline may be radiating when there is a mismatch at the antenna. Regardless, he never indicated the length of the coax -or- if the coax was tested for RF on the shield.

Three points (freqs) would be better, as it will verify that the frequency response is curved and not flat (resistive).

True. But in broadcasting, efficiency is everything. If that antenna design worked better than the basic tower, the justification would be the long-term power savings to the station. And with all the stations that are operating these days, don't you think at least one station would have built such an antenna?

Frank;
Sorry for snipping a bunch of your post out;

If the coils had a Q 0f 300, they should show a bandwidth of 306 Khz with an SWR of <1.5-1.

You make valid points on testing antennas, It would be great to have actual tests that were run with all variables being accounted for. Looking at the way he did his tests, is more real world. That is, the way a typical person would do when the purchased an antenna and put it on their vehicle. His tests show which one worked best for the testing he was doing. Which would probably have different results on someone elses installation.

These are part of those 'misconception's I was talking about. That "marginally better" ought to read 'no practical difference', and that "marginal difference" ought to read
'absolutely no difference at HF'.
The 'thickness'/diameter of conductors can and ~is~ described scientifically (repeatable or reproducable results). At the frequency you are talking about, that difference in 'thickness' would have to be on the order of several inches. Not fractions of an inch.
The conductivity of the material used for the antennas has so little bearing on their radiation efficiency at HF that it's absolutely rediculous to worry about. Even at UHF / SHF it isn't a problem.

> But it really doesn't matter.

Just about the only thing that you've said that is 'right'.

Nope, sorry, that just isn't true. If you would have said that a full length 1/4 wave antenna will out perform a shortened 1/4 wave antenna, you'd have been right. But if the full length
and shortened antennas are of different 'electrical' lengths, then all bets are off.
I do agree with the rest of your post. A shortened antenna is much more -practical- to use and a lot easier to live with...

This is why I pay $2000/Day to my FCC testing guys. It's not as simple as it looks!

That's my primary radio. I use the CB for road conditions, but if one of them has to compromise..

Yeah, the "patch" to get your yangtenna up.
I got one free in a parts order once. It's worth at least twice what I paid for it.
I did give it a fair trial. No noticable effect one way or the other.

> Sounds like these "tuning rings" on some current antennas.

The tuning ring on an Astron 99 or similar at least does something.
I use one of those as my HF vertical.

The zing ring was the "cell phone antenna sticker" of it's day.

> The thought of 15 KW on a vehicle makes me shudder

Figuring a generous 60% efficiency at the amp, that's 1800A from your battery, more or less.

You know, I've always known that power dosen't count for much on these bands, and as I was driving back from Georgia again this weekend, I remarked to the wife that listening to the truckers fade in and out going the other direction, I can't tell much difference between the guy that claims he's running the 150W or 500W amplifier, and the ones that claim not to be..

I certainly don't hear them 20-50 miles away..

>-- knowing that the vehicle > itself is carrying the same voltage and current as the antenna, but terminated

Back an August, I was sitting at a gas station fueling up the Expedition, which does take a while..
I was sitting there, with my 50W aprs transmitter running periodically (on the glassmount antenna right above the gas tank), the other two VHF transcievers were shut down. I was making a call on my cell phone, when I noticed that the truck parked in the next bay was idling, and dripping something that was spattering on the concrete... The truck was labeled "liquid oxygen", and "no smoking within 50 feet".. As the cold liquid oxygen vapor mixed with the gasoline vapor hugging the ground, I was thinking "and they are worried about my cell phone?"

The trick is to get a feel for the magnitude of the variables that are hard to control, and take that into account when evaluating any measured or perceived differences.

The audiophile guys are buying $7500 AC line cords because they think that it makes a difference in how the sound comes out. (ignoring the same old 50' of crappy 12 ga wire in the wall back to the box, and the rest of how the power gets to the house)

I think the only thing proven with his experiment is that a good antenna can work just as crappy as a crappy antenna -- the only difference is in the installation. Radio requires attention to several factors, such as knowing the difference between an RF ground and a DC ground, how SWR and field-strength meters really work and how to use them, using the right equipment for the right job, location of the antenna on the vehicle, etc, etc. And BTW, these are things that should be learned and put into practice by anyone serious about the hobby.

Here is my data, should be as credible as tnom's.....

Distance 11 miles:

102" SS whip 1.5 db

Tinfoil wrapper from Hershey Bar 2.3 db

Aluminum trash can lid 1.2 db

Set of heavy truck springs 1.3 db

The Hershy Bar wins!

I agree to all of the above except a 1/4 wave is a 1/4 no matter what. A so called loaded 1/4 is a loaded antenna not called a 1/4 anymore. Once a antenna has been shortened by any means, shorter than the physical 1/4 wave antenna (1/4 wave including the velocity factor), top hats, loading coil, or ant other ways it is not clamed to be called a 1/4 wave anymore.
I did say 1/4 whip on the post, as most everybody should have known it to be the 108" antenna.

What was the input impedance (R and X) of each antenna at the feedpoint? What was the SWR of each? Was the 1/4 wave dipole 1/4 wave total, or 1/4 wave each side (making it a 1/2 wave dipole)? How long was the coat hanger?

If you can't answer all the questions (Such as the input impedance), that's OK.. But I'm just curious.. A dipole should have outperformed the 102" whip. How was that dipole supported, anyway?

hey group
i have a galaxy that is driving me crazy,,its a 33 hml it transmits fine for a few minutes talkback audio is good then during transmit they say i sound choppy about this time,,receive goes choppy if you continue to use it in hopes it gets better it appears not to key up as the meter does not move,,and folks cant hear you at all keying the mic does allow audio through the talkback but no transmit any idea's folks
i have been over the solder joints numerous times and am convinced they are good unsoldered and re-soldered all questionable ones seems to be more of a problem with use such as a component heats up and fails thanks for any advice

That was from a simulation. I have a modified cut down mast and a modified hustler RM-75 (6') that I use for CB, it has about the same bandwidth.

I don't know where Doc is heading for with his statement, but a shortened antenna (like the Xterminator) is 1/4 wave "electrically"

Velocity factor isn't a factor when you determine antenna length, except certain antennas that are made from transmission line.

It will be inferior in some directions, but it will superior in at least one direction.

Have you checked the power supply voltage(s)?

Bad electrolytic caps can cause all sorts of havoc. They aren't necessarily bad in a way that's easy to measure. High impedance, leaky, low value..

If the dipole was set up as an inverted V, then what was the orientation to the receive antenna? Was it broadside (the line created by intersecting the ends of the dipole perpendicular to the line created by the intersection of the feedpoint and the receive antenna) or endfire (the two lines created above parallel)? Inverted "V" antennas generally have both vertical and horizontal components, and the orientation (at that distance) relative to the receive antenna might make a difference to the radiation pattern. Was the inverted V fed through a balun, or was it balunless? What was the angle of the legs in the inverted V?

Also, if the SWR measured for all antennas was less than 1.5:1, then the input impedances weren't purely 50 ohms resistive. There were probably capacitive and inductive components to the impedance presented at the feedpoint. What did you use to measure feedpoint impedance?

Was the same type of coax used to feed each antenna?

I know you're using a fake name, and that's OK in my book. I'm just trying to figure out what the parameters of the test were so I can put weight to your measurements.

Thanks.

Check the AM power regulator, the predriver, driver, and final in the rig. One of them is most likely shot. If it's not one of those, check for heat failure of the capacitors in the xmit circuit.

Of course, your best bet would be to get rid of that Galaxy junk and get a real CB, such as a Uniden.

Maby you can explain how a antenna is 1/4 so called " electrically 1/4 " if it is not a 1/4 wave like a 108" whip.
If it has a coil in it it, and shorter than the 1/4 it is a loaded antenna
NOT a electrically 1/4 wave equivelement .
If that was the case then a very loaded antenna that was 12" tall NOT 8' could also be called a 1/4 wave "electrically"
What makes then a antenna 1/4 wave "electrically", because it matches the 50 coax?

Velocity factor IS importment when cutting a element to the proper length.
Typically a antenna element can range from .91 to .99 of the true open space length.

Here is a add from a supplier of the antenna.

SP-1000

HIGH PERFORMANCE TWIN 1/8" SQUARE COPPER WIRE COIL, FREQUENCY COVERAGE 26-31MHz,
"SWR LESS THAN 1.5:1 1.5MHz SPREAD"
STANDARD 3/8" x 24 THREAD
OVERALL LENGTH 54" (WHAT not a 1/4 wave only half the length) Dam that makes it 1/8 wavelength in the physical length.
No where does it say 1/4 wave equivelement. The only thing that could be called a 1/4 wave antenna is a is a 1/4 wave antenna.
Thats just another marketing tool to cause more confusion in the antenna world.

Another add.

A3000, 59 inch long helically loaded 1/4 wave, wide band 26 to 29 Mhz.
Just another trick, What makes this antenna any different from other antennas that are loaded to shorten them. Some of the others do not clam to be a loaded 1/4 wave. Thats BS.
Thats about as dum as selling a equivelement shortened 12" ruller that comes only 7' long.
Owell some believe it.

A coil in a short antenna cancels out the capacitive reactance making the antenna resistive at the operating frequency. The coil makes it "electrically" a 1/4 wavelength. More than likely it won't be 50 ohms, usually quite less, unless some kind of matching is used at the base.

The number (.91 to .99) are correct for the difference between an antenna in free space and erected near earth. Its not from the velocity factor of the antenna.
Its because the antenna is close to the earth and other conductive objects (tree, buildings and power lines) which present stray capacitance that tunes the antenna lower in frequency than a free space antenna. Its called "end effect" and is more prevelant the closer an antenna is other objects.

Why does the coil make it that way.
Nowhere in any theory does it state that. Its just another ways to match the coax to free air. That's all the antenna does.

Why do you keep trying to say its "electrically" a 1/4 wavelength. Just because it can be loaded with a matching device ? Shows a good match.
This could be taken to the extreme and if the antenna was reduced to only one inch in length, tuned and matched would it be electrically" a 1/4 wavelength .
No its just a resonate circuit with no relation to a wavelength. In fact a conductor does not have to be any wavelength to radiate at all.
When matched any length of wire will emit all the power applied to it.

More than likely it won't be 50

If so how do you explain in some long wire antennas its even 1.05 times longer than the freespace.

Any antenna, even a straight piece of wire has inductance at radio freqencies. A 1/4 wave straight piece of wire will exhibit a certain inductance at a certain frequency, shorten it to something less than a 1/4 wave and the inductance decreases. Add a coil to make up the missing inductance and the antenna "looks" like a 1/4 wave again to the RF source. Some of the power is dissipated as heat in the coil because of the I/R losses of the coil.

The fact that both the receive AND the transmit goes "choppy" at the same time, makes me think your problem is in the PLL section. When the PLL drifts significantly, the loop will "unlock", and usually disable transmit completely. I'd check the voltages to the PLL chip. Sometimes regulators go bad, and the normal 8 Volts jumps to about 11, which can cook the PLL. It may be a a bad PLL or a bad crystal, or some other intermittent component.

Sorry, yes it does.
Its not matching the coax,
its cancelling the reactance.

Yes.

A 1" antenna would have a capacitive reactance of 3,000 or greater.
When the reactance is canceled out, you would end up with an antenna with a feed point impedance of <0.05 . It would be resonant, but wouldn't match 50 ohm coax.

No, but to be resonant it does.

If you don't think that canceling out the capacitive reactance of a shortened antenna doesn't change its electrical length, why does its current distribution change?

I guess you need to tell me what longwire antenna you are referring to. The end effects only operate on the end sections of the antenna, in the parts on the antenna the effects are absent, and the wire length is approximately that of an equivalent length in free space.

What makes a antenna so called " looks like a 1/4 wave again to the RF".

Where does it say a matching antenna must look like a 1/4 anyway.

"Add a coil to make up the missing inductance and the antenna "looks" like a 1/4 wave again to the RF, not so, the impedance is now very low at its feed point. Big mismatch (you forgot the extra device now needed to match the antenna,usally a cap or coil on the input side.so adding just a loading coil did not make it look like a match.Notice I said a match . NOT a 1/4 wave. RF doesn't care what the wavelength is. Where does it say a antenna must "look like a 1/4 anyway."
The same thing could be said about a base matched 5/8 wave antenna, it shows a good match also and its is a long way from the 1/4 wave length. and is never said it looks like a 1/4 to the RF.
Don't confuse a match to it looking like a 1/4.

There is many things that can be changed at the antenna mounting spot, 1/2 wave 5/8 wave

Tourist based as we are, the Bucs winning the super bowl most definitely brought more revenue to my little playground of the state. It places the Bay area on the world map, makes it a little more visible, which in turn means more tourists, whcih means more money spent on local businesses. Yes, I get my piece of the pie from the Bucs in tourist revenue. A certain RB is a steady fixture in the bay (literally) in his free time and has been for many years,,,,,,,now he finally bought his

I made a silent bet on how long it would take you to latch on to this fact, and then twist it all out of proportion into something that has no resemblence to the truth. I can see that you didn't dissapoint in that regard. You obviously spend way too much time worrying about who accesses the group in which manner. In other words, your priorities are out of whack.

If you must know, yes, I have changed ISP's. I have decided to dump my 8 year old dial-up service, for one that services cable modems. The benefits of such should be obvious. The final straw which pushed me over the ledge, happened right after the hurricane hit last month (Though the two events are not related). The news server that my ISP outsourced to, had it's throughput drug down to a slow crawl. It literally took me 10 minutes just to download the message headers, and that was at T1 access speeds. After speaking with a tech support guy at my ISP, who basically had no control over the situation, and who stated that "yea, they're aware of the problem, and they're working on it", and after nearly a month of no improvement, I decided that it's time for a change.

My Worldlynx account is still good until February, and I can E-mail you if you want proof that I'm still a user in good standing there.

I'm sure you'll accuse me of "lying" again, but it's of little consequence to me, as is most of what's been going on here in this newsgroup as of late. I will be participating in a greatly reduced manner, as I have totally lost interest in the politics and personal affronts involved in the legal/illegal battle. Like in this thread, I'll offer up some technical or experience related comments to people asking questions, but that's about it.

Go back to school.
Wherever you have gotten the antenna info apply it . Learn something, don't just try to quote out of a book, any one can do that. Your very confused.
I need to get back to some serious work designing antennas.

Just because I got a ham license, didn't post here for a while, and use Ghostbusters instead of my regular ISP to minimize spam, now I am accused of forging myself.

I never said that I was "leaving". I just don't want to get involved anymore in the political bantering and posturing that seems to have all but completely taken over this group. I have decided that I will only participate in subjects that have value from either a technical, or a nostalgic perspective.

While I have made my views clear with regard to the legal aspects of CB radio, and the forces that, IMHO, are ruining the hobby, I can't stand shoulder to shoulder with the people who are currently carrying the torch for the cause. The behavior of these people is as bad as the sociopaths who they're crusading against.

I agree with you on the who the common denominator is, and it's a shame that he's getting the attention that he craves, but does not deserve.

You should set aside your attitude and pay attention -- everything he said is absolutely correct. Stop by your public library sometime and check out a copy of the ARRL handbook, or an educational textbook on radio communication.

Actually, I am acutely aware and merely have fantastic memory and shouldn't reduce you to personal insult, but then again, it doesn't take much for you to start slinging personal muck these days, does it, Dave?

It's why you find yourself in the position you do.

Nah,,no need at all. But if you're in a generous mode of "proving" such Damn, well, then, we both have radios and we both have boats.....and we both dislike each other's football teams. Bucs are falling apart..too much infighting. Time for the 'pile to take another championship,,excuse me while I prep for the Hurricane repeat.

The real shame is that you cannot participate in tech discussions such as the antenna thread for fear that Twistedhed will follow you into the thread and start trouble for no good reason and ruin the thread.

thank you for all of your replies by email and through the post
i may junk the galaxy someday for a "real" radio but ill wait and see if i enjoy this as a hobby i have only used the cb band till now this radio was 35.00 at a flea market so i figure i will try to use it as a learning tool i repair arcade machines in my spare time and find working on radios to be fun as well alot more confusing,,but that's part of the enjoyment all in all thanks to all who gave useful information i really appreciate it and ill get to work on checking all that has been suggested ill post back soon
thanks again

Hammies and dog-pound refugees (dogie,nad,pipeboy) would do well to read my scintillating prose and learned insights on the fine art of freebanding. A pet peeve of mine is that hammies (certain ones) put down radio hobbyists like myself just because they are CBers and just because they use gear that's advanced. I have logged more DX on the freeband than most 2 meter hams have in a lifetime. Why shouldn't I be treated with respect? All I am asking is that the issue of legality be put aside and my acheivements be recognized for what they are.

If you take the time to read this you will see that we on freeband have problems with troublemakers too. They don't abide by our rules. They don't care what others think. They jam and make noises on 27.555. Read about it in my article. They are wrecking my freeband and they should be stopped.

I admit I get all upset when hammies tell me I am breaking rules. I don't care about rules. I don't care what others think. If I want to operate freeband it is my responsibility and I don't like to hear anyone putting me down for it. Read about how we have created our own little illegal alternative to ham radio on the freeband. You hammies can be jealous.

Hammies try to say that there are goverment users on 27.555 and above. I have never heard any myself so that proves there are none. Because of course what I say is true and everyone else is a liar. Read my wonderful prose and see for yourself.

I'm a what you call hammie and I don't care what you do on the what you call freeband. Just don't transmit in the 28 mhz band or your just asking for trouble. i do know there has been problems there in the 10 meter band of freebanders coming up there and transmitting. Yes at one time I use to be just like you working the DX above 27.405 Then I got a ham license and let me tell you something it's a blast working DX on the 15 and 20 meter band or working short dx on the 40 meter band. Maybe someday you too will get a ham ticket.
Oh I still use the cb when I'm at work it come in handy out on the road in the truck for information. 73s and Have a nice day

I don't suppose you did since the first dedicated CB amps were nothing more than cheap knock-offs of of ham amps.

You are way too sensitive. Suggesting that your priorities are not what they should be, is not so much a personal insult, as it is an observation.

Before one can objectively observe and interpret the behaviors of others, one must be totally honest with oneself. Introspection is a staple in my life.

Yea, I know, you will no longer be able to feed your attention craving though exchanges with me. Sooner or later, Frank and others will reach the same point. At which time you can declare some sort of mental "victory" for outlasting and outshouting the opposition. But you will have no one left to feed your ego. I am making the first steps toward bringing this group back to what it used to be.

I respect the Buc's. Any team that can achieve what they have is worthy of respect. I am also not a rabid Eagles fan. In fact, I have been a Cowboys and Packers fan for far longer than I've even been in radio.
Being a fan of a Cowboys in this town, can lead to some verbal abuse.
But hey that's what it's all about..... The Eagles showed some promise in the past few seasons, but this year seems to be a huge step back. The team seems to lack cohesion, and that's not a good thing.....

Spew your BS all you want, but you are forging Scott, Brain, Twist etc etc etc. You will end up making Ghostsearcher drop the link for Rec.Radio.Cb, thats a fact that has been discussed with Dave @ Ghostsearchers.

Ameritron currently holds eight grants for equipment to be used under Part 97. All of these grants are for "licensed non-broadcast station transmitters" that require no other equipment for operation, -not- amplifiers. None of them are authorized for operation above 21.6 MHz. If these devices are in fact amplifiers in violation of 47CFR2.815, then Steve Par could get in a heap of trouble for filing false applications.

I'm a what you call hammie and I don't care what you do on the what you call freeband. Just don't transmit in the 28 mhz band or your just asking for trouble. i do know there has been problems there in the 10 meter band of freebanders coming up there and transmitting. Yes at one time I use to be just like you working the DX above 27.405 Then I got a ham license and let me tell you something it's a blast working DX on the 15 and 20 meter band or working short dx on the 40 meter band. Maybe someday you too will get a ham ticket.
  Oh I still use the cb when I'm at work it come in handy out on the road in the truck for information. 73s and Have a nice day

Welcome to rec.radio.cb, Steve. You've been had,,,by one of your own. Don't worry about it though, we know all hammies aren't like that.

It's the bullshit I challenge (shrug). I'm a skeptic,,it's my nature.
The fact I won't believe some claims merely on an internet word enrages some.

Actually, I am acutely aware and merely have fantastic memory and recall,,,,,most of the time. That I happen to point such things out shouldn't reduce you to personal insult, but then again, it doesn't take much for you to start slinging personal muck these days, does it, Dave?

>You are way too sensitive.

Try to remain relevant,,my feelings should be of no consequence and I admit, I question why they are of such importance to certain folks, not unlike yourself.

>Suggesting that your priorities are not what >they should be, is not so much a personal

On what you have been permitted,,,,exactly. You miss the point completly.

It's why you find yourself in the position you do.
The self-delusion you attempt to foster unto others, that you somehow are self-qualified to make miraculous, medicinal internet diagnoses based upon the information one permits you, is astoundingly curious,,,'tisn't my priorities that need questioning. Introspection is in order, grasshoppah.

>Before one can objectively observe and

And by default, according to your logic, when one is honest, they can then interpret the behaviors of others? Efffectively? Based on what they are permitted? Hmmm,,,better think about such a claim, again, Dave.

No more unsubstantiated claims that turn personal and hostile when they are questioned? Put 'er there, man!

What I do would be of no consequence to you if you weren't such an off-topic troll inclined to make every topic personal and about me. You suffer from the same malady as Frank,,,and N8, and Lelnad,,,there it is,,,oh yea,,Geogre,,the "Arron" boys,,,,,

> Sooner or later, Frank and others will reach

They already have. You see, I am the one with the same addy out there for years,,not you, nor Frank I am the one with the webtv, with no complaints, as you sit there and bitch about your past internet service and providers.

> At which time you can declare some sort of >mental "victory" for outlasting and outshouting

>the opposition.

Ahh,,but I have won a victory, grasshoppah,,,,,one need only look to the cries of Dogie, Frank, Lelnad, and yourself to see the whining that goes on about the PERSON, not the topic.Hey Dave, I won't apologize for feeling victorious over scum such as Frank and yourself who have been crying for years for me to leave and for those who choose to make all their posts personal. That's your problem. Deal with it.

> But you will have no one left to feed your ego. _
There you go again,,,expressing that overt concern for the lowly cber....now what possibly could be your motivation for such behavior,, Dave?

>I am making the first steps toward bringing this

With continued insults in your posts? With topics about me? LOL,,,tell your bullshit to a group that doesn't know you any better.

 Damn, well, then, we both have radios and we both have

Have people lost their senses completely?

What does hearing the word "fuck" have to do with being a christian? How would it affect someone's morality? If it's such a sin to hear a few curse words, then why hasn't Chuck been called to Hell already, what with HIS potty mouth?

I mean really, what a goddamned, motherfuckin, chickenshit hypocrite!

BuckEye,
But all antennas are 'matched', be they exactly a 1/4 wave length long, or 75 feet long, or 1 inch long. I'm assuming that you mean impedance matching, right? Impedance matching has nothing to do with an antenna being resonant.

Instead of doing serious, or not-so-serious antenna design,
you might take a look at some of those books you imply we shouldn't quote from, and apply what you've read. And you're wrong, not every one can do that, much less understand what they read (got a mirror?).
There are some things that you can 'infer' from what you've read, not everything has to be spelled out in black and white. That process is the one you refer to as thinking... Have fun designing antennas, I do.

Yep, Twist

What is amusing is how many flames an idiot can start - hey, gang, listen up now .... check the headers.

It never ceases to amaze me how many flames erupt by or over Twistedhed - when he hasn't even posted. So while a number argue (allegedly with him), he's likely out fishing! Meanwhile, I've got to remind myself to buy some stock in blood pressure pills.

well if he moved out of his mommie's house he would have to pay rent and bills. ....those ssi checks don't go as far as they used to.......besides he would have to start going to work everyday instead of talking on his radio and also he would have to start doing the cooking and cleaning up after himself and how in the hell is that going to work out for a single guy in his thirties i ask you???? have a little compassion will ya jim after all he is our very own rec.radio.cb chuckie and we are all extremeley proud of him doncha know....let us not forget that chuckie started out a lowly cber selling illegal cb amps and he became a hamster with letters and shit, no doubt about it......

After the non-HAM way he treated me on-air? I think not. He's nothing more than a (bad) CBer with a callsign, and by that I don't mean the regular CBer, who's generally a decent individual.. He's the kind who would like to run those roger-beeps, overmodulated splatterboxes, and who can't have a decent conversation with anyone because he's too busy playing channel-master.

No, I don't think I can forgive chuck. He embodies all that is NOT a HAM, and thereby embarrasses the entire hobby.

What the hell do you think I am saying.
This all started when some dumass said a antenna was electrically 1/4 wave long, not 1/4 wave antenna. You either have a 1/4 wave antenna or you don't. If its shorter, then its not a 1/4 wave antenna. In most cases it loaded, and no more electrically a 1/4 wave long antenna.
How hard is this to understand. I think this comes from some adds that's states it a helical loaded 1/4 wave antenna that is only 56" long which is bull . Just like some other adds that claim their antenna is a 5/8 antenna wound on a fiberglass rod only 5' tall now go figure, I guess some also believe this .

Hrm.. ever stop to think that maybe the wire helically wound around the shaft might be 1/4 wave long? That would make it a 1/4 wave helically loaded antenna. Just because the physical length of the antenna is less than 1/4 wave at the desired frequency doesn't mean the antenna isn't.

Don't believe me? Try looking up "folded dipole" on the 'net..

Of course it wasn't you Randy. But look at how Scott's screen nic has been used by him. Notice how his posts that were around 10 to 20 a day, have dropped to 4 or 7 a day, but the Phony Scott's posts have risen.
Also if he didn't want so much attention, he would kill file people that he doesn't like, ignore them, keep one nic so others can ignore his trolling.

OMG, ROTFLMFAO!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

I sent a total of 4 complaints, they responded with there is nothing they can do unless he threatens me. So I haven't sent any complaints for years LMAO!!!!
Just shows you how much he will lie to make himself look like he's innocent I've never had one complaint ever sent to me with the three ISP's I've ever had.

This is nothing but jealousy because I have obtained my ham ticket and you have remained on CB. Go ahead and say what you want but your stories of me not being me are just that, stories.

I can't believe I used to call you guys my friends. How dumb can you be? Dumber than I thought you could be I guess. Just because I don't post here for a while you accuse me of forging. Then because I use the Ghostseachers service instead of messing up my mailbox with crap from this bunch of babies in here, you accuse me of being George. Just go out and get your ham ticket like I did if you are so jealous. Stop telling lies.

Gee, so you finally read a book and discovered that you were wrong. Fine. But playing semantics in order to save face is a Twistedhedism.

Users of this group have already suffered such abuse of e-mail, from someone on this group. Smart people use a filter, so the crap never makes it onto their system. Many people recommend Mail Washer, but I prefer Scan MailBox (free).

My filter has been going crazy, deleting load of spam mesages of about 150Kb each... alll suspected to be viruses.
Subjects are often chosen to fool people into thinking it is genuine, and opening the crap... "Error Notice", "New Microsoft Security Patch", "MS Technical Bulletin", "Critical Update", "abort message", etc.
The "sender" may be set to look like it is a "bounce" message... "Mail Delivery System", etc. As they are arriving in a mailbox which I never use to send mail, I knew that any "bounce" messages were fake.

Just be aware of these, and the "Stop all spam" e-mails. What a laugh, spammers offering anti-spam?

Regards,

Peter.

No... we all got an e-mail from Scott saying that they were forges. The difference was that the e-mail came through his usual ISP with his usual IP number.

That is one reason to believe that you are a forger... the other is that you have also forged me in the UK group and Twistedhed in another group.
There's no getting away from the fact that you are a forger, so why should we believe that the "Scott" identity is any more real than the other forges?

BuckEye,
Hi. 'Dumass' here. Like it or not, antennas can and are classified and/or described by their 'electrical' length. Electrical length and physical length don't have to be the same and seldom are when speaking about 'loaded' antennas. When you find your self in a situation where everyone else seems to be wrong, and only you are right, it sometimes helps to stop and re-evaluate your position. Is it mandatory that you think about antennas the same way I do? Nope, sure isn't, but it does help if you at least understand 'where' the other person is coming from, or talking about. It always helps to view things from a different perspective. When you don't, the loss is yours...

Most ham amps are ready to go on 10meters to12meters.Some have a screw(remove screw)on the band switch to keep it out of the unmarked 10 meter position and some have a wire grounding(cut wire) out the 10 meter coil.Many of the mods are available on line at many ham sites.Have fun!

well, problem there dude. legalities cannot be set aside. you are working in unauthorized spectrum using illegal (non-type accepted) gear and you damned well know it! you are not a hobbyist by any stretch of the imagination. so please don't pretend to be one.

freebanders ARE troublemakers. if it walks like a duck, sounds like a duck and dresses like a duck (feathers), its 99.999% certain to be one.
besides, the spectrum allocated between 27.410 and 27.995 is for Government USE Only. you are not permitted there (unless you have a license from the FCC that states otherwise or you work with the DOE/DoD/NRO/etc.).

well? you are. You don't hear me down there do you? NOPE!. I don't even have any 11 meter gear here and haven't owned any HF equipment (other than the Yeasue frg-7 receiver) for more than 8 years! sure as hell I often hear your ilk down there raising all kinds of Heat and Discontent (and using very dirty equipment I might add). makes it damned hard to hear satillite transmissions from Low Earth Orbit on the upper portions of 10 meters because of all the sprectrum splatter from you and the other nitwits and numbskulls. As far as I am concerned, your "right" to use your radio (within the rules set forth for 11 meter class D rules) ends as soon as you interfear with my "right" to enjoy my license (whether it be to listen to HF or communicate via my license privileges) AND, so far as I am concerned, you have no rights whatsoever with regard to radio equipment.

why don't you look at the FCC database. the allocations are there (oh yeah, I forgot! you don't have enough litteracy to understand the charts!). any statements otherwise from you cannot be taken as credible, period.

ah well, enough of this. you are violating a fair number of rules and regs by operating where you are. there is no doubt of that. anything you say here can be used by the FCC in court against you (when they take the time to actually charge you with a violation or 2 dozen). even using an anonymous remailer won't help you (your writing style is more than well known). Get used to it, you have a public record here that goes back years and there is no way for you to expunge it.

Velocity factor IS importment when cutting a element to the proper length.
Typically a antenna element can range from .91 to .99 of the true open space
length.

Nice site! I'm glad to see another person honoring the fun times that were had back in the good old days.

I've become somewhat nostalgic myself lately and have put up my own site. There's a tribute to the heyday of CB radio there as well. Check it out:

Why tell us about it? You're not the only hammie that is a true rule breaker,,,we have several hammies present that join you in such rule breaking, Eric.,,they flip-flop whenever the need suits them.,,they callled themselves "Arron's Boyz". If you can't obey the law, you should never have obtained a hammie license. Folks like you contribute to the demise of hammie radio.

No, it's not, but it is reality. I know enough about pro sports that certain athletes can get away with damn near as much abuse as they can dish, while others get away with nothing.
Almost like the Rush Limbaugh debacle..which I find hugely entertaining. My claim that a conservative is really a liberal who has just been busted has never been more illustrated than as of late. We have the white house now claiming the president didn't "really" mislead the Americans about imminent threat, as they claim he never "really" used the specific term "imminent".
They dismiss the Austrian's sexual misconduct, as if such behavior is only deviant when committed by a non-republican.
"Treatment" and "Compassion" are terms that miraculously entered the Rush vocabulary list, and his legions of sheople and lemmings "bahh" accordingly and nod their heads in agreement. Why, it's almost as if he never made the claim "Round up all the dirt-bag drug users, lock them up and throw away the key. Problem solved." We can understand how he could make such a claim, after all, he was probably tripping on opiates when he said it.

Unfortunately that's not Scott. He has e mailed me and others informing us that this person was forging him.
I could care less whether or not he has a ticket or not, this is just a ploy of "Ham vs. CB" troll.

I am Scott.

Those emails you are getting are fake or you would post them here.

It is not Ham vs CB but you are making it that way.

Wise words for anyone in a similar predicament, and especially for certain paranoid individuals who incorrectly perceive the situation as some sort of newsgroup conspiracy.

Interesting topic, this "taking the lord's name in vain" issue. I have heard lots of holy-rollers whine and cry when someone says "god damn". But what really is god's name? Doesn't the bible say that god's name is unknowable? Like, when Moses asked god for his name, all he got was, "I am". So if nobody knows the name of god, how can anybody use it in vain?

You're a bible-thumper, Twist -- what do you think?

I don't know what forges you are talking about, Brain, but there are none originating from this address. I explained my use of Ghostsearchers. Someone is playing a scam with email telling people I am not who I am, so let them believe what they want. As soon as I criticized Twist, they were on me like attack dogs. Makes you wonder why they are defending him.

Heck no! I was slapped around like every other newbie in Ham Radio.
Now, am I saying that those people were right, No, Not at all. But do you see me in here whining because someone might have not treating me like I felt I should have been treated? No! Because it comes with the territory!

I will say this, if it makes you feel any better, okay and Granted, I don't know who you even are, now... If I said something to you, ON AIR, that offended you, (and granted the Local 2 meter scene here in Detroit is quite the interesting bunch, and has gotten worse over the last few years, and is why I have removed my 2 meter radio out of my personal Truck) I do wholeheartly apologize to you. I cannot go back and erase the things I have done in the past. I wasn't always a "nice" person on Amateur Radio. But I am man enough to say in a public forum that I am sorry for offending you.

You seem to have quite an attitude problem. I think you've got problems that go well beyond your hatred of me. Because quite honestly, I cannot stand any of that stuff you described above. :-)

Uhmmmm... Well, Considering you don't even come in here and say who you REALLY are... your argument is valueless to me or anyone else. and basing your judgement of me, on what you've seen in here and based on

Just a little bit about two weeks ago. No accumulation. Wet and cold up until yesterday. Today it was well into the 60s and sunny! The department had a celebration scheduled at a campground and they couldn't have picked a nicer day :)

A friend in British Columbia, however, had a sudden snowstorm and 75 mph winds. Knocked over a few trees, one of which landed on his house but did no real damage. 20 below up there currently. We don't have it too bad here :)

I don't know what you think you are accomplishing but it is going to backfire on you bigtime. Your ISP has been notified. Enough said.

It's almost exactly the same, huh? All those little kids being sold amplifiers by the streetcorner amp dealer. Poor things...they'll be hooked for life. Who knows what's next for them...they may even buy CB's.

I am not emailing any of your phoney addresses, for all I know you could be the one sending the bogus emails in my name. As I said, no one complained when I was posting to the antenna thread with Tnom, but as soon as I criticized Twistedhed, the bogus accusations and forging started. Grow up you guys.

Howdy! FRS/GMRS radios do not seem to work very well in heavily wooded areas if you are hiking or hunting and want to keep in touch with others a mile or so away. I was wondering if maybe hand held CB's might be a better choice and if so, what are some that are small that would be a choice? Thanks!

Gene,

The problem with handheld 27 MHz units is the terribly inefficient antenna/ground combinations. Usually you are lucky to get a mile or so, but in quiet areas (woods, not urban areas) they might work, but I doubt very well. A 5 watt unit might do better than FRS, but you'd best seek advice from folks that have actually used them.

One very good possibility is the use of MURS radios. They are VHF and tend to penetrate woods better than GMRS and are much more efficient (at least the antenna and ground are much more efficient) than 27 MHz units. They operate with 2 watts output and will give a much better accounting of themselves than 27 MHz or FRS units. They also have detachable antennas and you can mount antennas with some gain (or at least not the big loss of the typical rubber duck). You should get a 5 mile range or even a bit better between MURS handhelds (assuming no hills between the units).

Einstein re-evaluated his position many times. In fact, in his later papers, he expressed doubts about the validity of much of his work.

Oh, chuckie... I was far from a newbie when you decided your call was more important than my QSO after MIDCARS was shut down on 7.258 December last.. Of course, you won't remember it... your memory is conveniently lacking when it comes to things of importance.

So, no, it wasn't on a 2M repeater, so you can just put that one to rest.. It was on HF. I was trying to carry on a QSO with W8BUD, and you decided to just hop on and call someone while I was transmitting. Bud told me later that you didn't even bother to ask if the frequency was clear. And, no, I'm certain my little 100W mobile didn't overtalk you so that Bud couldn't hear your QRL. Not bloody likely.

You were slapped around? I'm not surprised, the way you disregard common courtesy on the air.. And yes, you certainly embody everything that is NOT a HAM, both on the air and on this newsgroup. Way to go, Chuckles... Way to further the hobby.

As for the details above, if they haven't rung any bells, I'm most certainly not surprised; such is life.

Suffice it to say, it ain't happening.

MY BIO!!!!!
K8CPA
Okay, this is the place where I tell you how I came to know how fucked up I am.... and all the personal information about me. I will try and answer all the questions:

Date of Birth: June 28, 1972 <in the fall of 71 my daddy fucked a pig, ya see>

Place of Birth: Detroit, Michigan <in an alley behind the unit block of Waterman Avenue>

Religious Information: Well, first off, I am NOT heterosexual! I am a faggot! I accepted penises as my personal Lord in 1980. I was all of 10 Years old, I knew exactly what I was doing, I knew that if I didn't get cock in my mouth, I would not See the Lord in the rapture of it's jizz pulsing. I have been butt pumped nightly for 12 Years. Although, I was "Backslidden" for about 6 of those years, while screwing female barnyard animals. I am now back serving my Lord penis. I would like to Thank the Rev. Jack Hizhogoff of Detroit Gayboy Outreach (Web at: http://www.dgo.fag) for standing in the gap and slapping his manly dick up my fat faggot ass, and for a playroom where people like me, who were burned by chickenhawks with syphylitic dicks and fellow fags in general, could come and give their hearts back to the Lord penis. My only regret is that Rev Hizhogoff had to start pushing his manly dick in my fat faggot ass to the point where I could not bear to bend over anymore, and I returned to my favorite pastime, cocksucking in the men's room of the Detroit bus station.

"Burned" by the syphylitic cocks in my mouth and asshole?: Yep, Sure was.... I was... like I said before, I was sucking when I was 10, (around 1980), I was originally sucking just anyone, especially born again Christians and other mentally fucked up Baptist types like me. I loved those guys when theyd tell me to tongue their assholes. Condoms were a BIG no-no.... and I believed it!

Speed ahead 4 years. in 1984, The Baptist Church I went to had a bit of a controversy, The Pastor had resigned because he was caught bobbing on my young fat faggot pee pee, and things there were in a state of chaos, and my mom did not want to suffer having to put up with my faggot punk boy ass at home. She enrolled me into the Detroit Institute for Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I started attending and believe me, going to a Full-TILT anal only gayboy school. after attending one with a stated preference for teaching Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps to mainly suck dick, was a MAJOR SHOCK to my system! But one thing kept me from leaving the place, was the fact that these people seemed to really love the Lord Penis. and there was this one guy, named Robert Snyder, Who played the drums, like John Bonham, (from Led Zeppelin) and we got along great.... (Not to mention he would let me drink his jizz on the sly. That was HOT! least I thought so! Hey! I was 14 years old, and my hormones were at full TILT! So SUE ME!) (By the way, Snyder is now married to MoparHolic and living in Ohio. I'm very happy for him.

Anyhow... After being there for about a year. I started being interested in playing drums for them, as I was a drummer, from a young age... and I wanted to use my talent for the Lord Penis. Well, I eventually got the nerve to ask if I could play for them, and they said sure, as long as I would give em all head before each show! AWESOME!!!... My first time playing for Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps was a nightmare! I was scared, I totally forgot how to play because I was violently burping up the sprem I had sucked down before the show.! I was THAT scared! Anyhow... speed ahead to age 19... I was changing as a person, things were changing at Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps, as well. and a bit of a disagreement rose up between me and Snyder. I wanted to suck their cocks the night before the show instead of immediately prior to it. They said they needed the rush in order to play better, and I was asked to step down from the music ministry. Needless to say I was crushed. and very upset at Snyder In fact. I didn't think I'd ever be able to forgive him for that... Anyhow... I entered into what I called "My Dark Years" from age 19-26... Drugs, Drinking, eating 7 meals a day of Burger king, Dominos Pizza and Taco Bell in order to make myself an even bigger Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump.... and when I found out that Snyder had turned heterosexual, I really went off the deep end... until...

MY MOMENT OF CLARITY

Well, when I was around 26, I was totally burned out on the Dominos Pizza... I was just sick and tired of being sick and tired... I needed cocks rammed up my Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump poop chute and I needed it BADLY!!! the people I was upset at were gone from Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I was not getting any older... and I was ready to stop running from the Lord penis. But I had issues to resolve in my life... How could just Go back to the fags that had only "screwed" me and wouldnt let me suck cocks in the first place? I still felt like I'd been wronged! But I had the Clarity moment of a lifetime... This thought crossed my mind...

"I was a FAGASS PUNKBOY MOTHERFUCKER BEFORE I came to the Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps

Why am I allowing something that happened 7 years ago, keep me from serving my God, the Penis?????????

My Return to total Fagassedness!

Well, I was 26 years old... I was wanting to come back full time to Lord Penis. But I wasn't going back to Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps (at least not at that time!!!) I had heard about a church called DGW (short for Detroit Gayboy Outreach) and I'd heard in the past that it was a nice place... So..... I wanted to be where the Holy Spirit of the Lord Penis was... and there I was... I came to the church on Ann Arbor Trail... my first experience there was a interesting one, I came in the parking lot... puffing on a 7 year old kid's cock, (in my years of being Backslidden, I picked up a nasty 2 child a day, sucking habit...) I finished my child, and went in, and right away I heard SCREAMING in my ear... "what are you doing here???" "these are the people that Screwed you, but would not let you suck dicks!" act..... and when the song service started, the Holy Spirit of Lord Penis fell, and I became very uncomfortable, to the point when I had to leave! and I did!, I remember a usher, running after me and saying where are you going??? I remember looking back at him and saying... "I can't handle this SHIT I got to get out of here!" and I left.... Well, that week... I sort of prepared myself for service to mens dicks next week, I took my Book, Gay Sex For Dummies to work. (I worked midnights as a Security Guard, so I could walk around the ghetto apartment complex I patrolled and peek in windows at sleeping little boys. and I had lots of time to masturbate...) My mother realized I was fantasizing about kids nuts.... I found myself reading the Word, and Praying for a big hairy chested man to suck off.. by Sunday, I knew I was ready to come back... Went back that Sunday.... they had a Illustrated Sermon on fellatio with pictures from several fag magazines, it was great, and needless to say, my Hard cock, Melted in the presence of the Lord Penis. and I knew that I wanted to come home.

I thank the Lord Penis for his Love, That takes us whacked out people as we are, and makes us his Servants....

Where am I now... : Currently Attending Adult classes at The Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps.

HAM RADIO?!?!?!?!?!?!?I BETRAY IT AND WORSHIP ILLIGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS BECAUSE THEY LIKE SUCKING COCK AS MUCH AS I DO!!!!

I was, I guess you could say, Born into the CB FAGGOT Hobby... My Father, was a Dyed in the wool CB FAG... I even had a stint in the CB radio hobby as well... Anyhow, one year (I think I was around 8 Years old...) my parents and I went to have sex with my Grandfather's Sister and her German Shepherd, in Conway, Ark, which is the world capital of CB FAGGOTS. To say the least, was totally impressed with the FAGGOT CB Hobby, because it satisfied my craving to run my faggot mouth constantly AND to suck cocks!!!. and for years I did nothing about it, just sucking dicks constantly and that linear tuning on those tube type ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN amplifiers was just too hard to learn. Speed Ahead to age 14, a friend of mine, Joseph Hampton (Ham call sign N8ExtremeCockNosher-but ALSO a secret ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN) who lived across the street from me, and also was interested in getting his dick polished as well.. Well, we had some gay sex together... (you see this was when you had to be secretive about your gayness! I was KB8HHZ (hugely horny for zebra!) and Joe was KB8HGL (Hungry Gonad licker!)... I believe me and Joe were originally licensed in 1989....

On April of 2000. The FCC Restructured it's licenses... and I paid a renegade VE 50 bucks and Received my General Class Ticket... I often masturbate while thinking of linears for ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS. And really think Riley is mean. Maybe if I sucked his dick he would not be after traitor scumbag shithunk fagboys like me.

My Call? Is a Vanity call that I paid for, it is my initials! Because as a Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump, I need something like that for my ego.

so there you go!

I hope this answers everything you wanted to know about me!

MY BIO!!!!!
K8CPA
Okay, this is the place where I tell you how I came to know how fucked up I am.... and all the personal information about me. I will try and answer all the questions:

Date of Birth: June 28, 1972 <in the fall of 71 my daddy fucked a pig, ya see>

Place of Birth: Detroit, Michigan <in an alley behind the unit block of Waterman Avenue>

Religious Information: Well, first off, I am NOT heterosexual! I am a faggot! I accepted penises as my personal Lord in 1980. I was all of 10 Years old, I knew exactly what I was doing, I knew that if I didn't get cock in my mouth, I would not See the Lord in the rapture of it's jizz pulsing. I have been butt pumped nightly for 12 Years. Although, I was "Backslidden" for about 6 of those years, while screwing female barnyard animals. I am now back serving my Lord penis. I would like to Thank the Rev. Jack Hizhogoff of Detroit Gayboy Outreach (Web at: http://www.dgo.fag) for standing in the gap and slapping his manly dick up my fat faggot ass, and for a playroom where people like me, who were burned by chickenhawks with syphylitic dicks and fellow fags in general, could come and give their hearts back to the Lord penis. My only regret is that Rev Hizhogoff had to start pushing his manly dick in my fat faggot ass to the point where I could not bear to bend over anymore, and I returned to my favorite pastime, cocksucking in the men's room of the Detroit bus station.

"Burned" by the syphylitic cocks in my mouth and asshole?: Yep, Sure was.... I was... like I said before, I was sucking when I was 10, (around 1980), I was originally sucking just anyone, especially born again Christians and other mentally fucked up Baptist types like me. I loved those guys when theyd tell me to tongue their assholes. Condoms were a BIG no-no.... and I believed it!

Speed ahead 4 years. in 1984, The Baptist Church I went to had a bit of a controversy, The Pastor had resigned because he was caught bobbing on my young fat faggot pee pee, and things there were in a state of chaos, and my mom did not want to suffer having to put up with my faggot punk boy ass at home. She enrolled me into the Detroit Institute for Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I started attending and believe me, going to a Full-TILT anal only gayboy school. after attending one with a stated preference for teaching Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps to mainly suck dick, was a MAJOR SHOCK to my system! But one thing kept me from leaving the place, was the fact that these people seemed to really love the Lord Penis. and there was this one guy, named Robert Snyder, Who played the drums, like John Bonham, (from Led Zeppelin) and we got along great.... (Not to mention he would let me drink his jizz on the sly. That was HOT! least I thought so! Hey! I was 14 years old, and my hormones were at full TILT! So SUE ME!) (By the way, Snyder is now married to MoparHolic and living in Ohio. I'm very happy for him.

Anyhow... After being there for about a year. I started being interested in playing drums for them, as I was a drummer, from a young age... and I wanted to use my talent for the Lord Penis. Well, I eventually got the nerve to ask if I could play for them, and they said sure, as long as I would give em all head before each show! AWESOME!!!... My first time playing for Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps was a nightmare! I was scared, I totally forgot how to play because I was violently burping up the sprem I had sucked down before the show.! I was THAT scared! Anyhow... speed ahead to age 19... I was changing as a person, things were changing at Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps, as well. and a bit of a disagreement rose up between me and Snyder. I wanted to suck their cocks the night before the show instead of immediately prior to it. They said they needed the rush in order to play better, and I was asked to step down from the music ministry. Needless to say I was crushed. and very upset at Snyder In fact. I didn't think I'd ever be able to forgive him for that... Anyhow... I entered into what I called "My Dark Years" from age 19-26... Drugs, Drinking, eating 7 meals a day of Burger king, Dominos Pizza and Taco Bell in order to make myself an even bigger Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump.... and when I found out that Snyder had turned heterosexual, I really went off the deep end... until...

MY MOMENT OF CLARITY

Well, when I was around 26, I was totally burned out on the Dominos Pizza... I was just sick and tired of being sick and tired... I needed cocks rammed up my Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump poop chute and I needed it BADLY!!! the people I was upset at were gone from Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I was not getting any older... and I was ready to stop running from the Lord penis. But I had issues to resolve in my life... How could just Go back to the fags that had only "screwed" me and wouldnt let me suck cocks in the first place? I still felt like I'd been wronged! But I had the Clarity moment of a lifetime... This thought crossed my mind...

"I was a FAGASS PUNKBOY MOTHERFUCKER BEFORE I came to the Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps

Why am I allowing something that happened 7 years ago, keep me from serving my God, the Penis?????????

My Return to total Fagassedness!

Well, I was 26 years old... I was wanting to come back full time to Lord Penis. But I wasn't going back to Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps (at least not at that time!!!) I had heard about a church called DGW (short for Detroit Gayboy Outreach) and I'd heard in the past that it was a nice place... So..... I wanted to be where the Holy Spirit of the Lord Penis was... and there I was... I came to the church on Ann Arbor Trail... my first experience there was a interesting one, I came in the parking lot... puffing on a 7 year old kid's cock, (in my years of being Backslidden, I picked up a nasty 2 child a day, sucking habit...) I finished my child, and went in, and right away I heard SCREAMING in my ear... "what are you doing here???" "these are the people that Screwed you, but would not let you suck dicks!" act..... and when the song service started, the Holy Spirit of Lord Penis fell, and I became very uncomfortable, to the point when I had to leave! and I did!, I remember a usher, running after me and saying where are you going??? I remember looking back at him and saying... "I can't handle this SHIT I got to get out of here!" and I left.... Well, that week... I sort of prepared myself for service to mens dicks next week, I took my Book, Gay Sex For Dummies to work. (I worked midnights as a Security Guard, so I could walk around the ghetto apartment complex I patrolled and peek in windows at sleeping little boys. and I had lots of time to masturbate...) My mother realized I was fantasizing about kids nuts.... I found myself reading the Word, and Praying for a big hairy chested man to suck off.. by Sunday, I knew I was ready to come back... Went back that Sunday.... they had a Illustrated Sermon on fellatio with pictures from several fag magazines, it was great, and needless to say, my Hard cock, Melted in the presence of the Lord Penis. and I knew that I wanted to come home.

I thank the Lord Penis for his Love, That takes us whacked out people as we are, and makes us his Servants....

Where am I now... : Currently Attending Adult classes at The Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps.

HAM RADIO?!?!?!?!?!?!?I BETRAY IT AND WORSHIP ILLIGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS BECAUSE THEY LIKE SUCKING COCK AS MUCH AS I DO!!!!

I was, I guess you could say, Born into the CB FAGGOT Hobby... My Father, was a Dyed in the wool CB FAG... I even had a stint in the CB radio hobby as well... Anyhow, one year (I think I was around 8 Years old...) my parents and I went to have sex with my Grandfather's Sister and her German Shepherd, in Conway, Ark, which is the world capital of CB FAGGOTS. To say the least, was totally impressed with the FAGGOT CB Hobby, because it satisfied my craving to run my faggot mouth constantly AND to suck cocks!!!. and for years I did nothing about it, just sucking dicks constantly and that linear tuning on those tube type ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN amplifiers was just too hard to learn. Speed Ahead to age 14, a friend of mine, Joseph Hampton (Ham call sign N8ExtremeCockNosher-but ALSO a secret ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN) who lived across the street from me, and also was interested in getting his dick polished as well.. Well, we had some gay sex together... (you see this was when you had to be secretive about your gayness! I was KB8HHZ (hugely horny for zebra!) and Joe was KB8HGL (Hungry Gonad licker!)... I believe me and Joe were originally licensed in 1989....

On April of 2000. The FCC Restructured it's licenses... and I paid a renegade VE 50 bucks and Received my General Class Ticket... I often masturbate while thinking of linears for ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS. And really think Riley is mean. Maybe if I sucked his dick he would not be after traitor scumbag shithunk fagboys like me.

My Call? Is a Vanity call that I paid for, it is my initials! Because as a Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump, I need something like that for my ego.

so there you go!

I hope this answers everything you wanted to know about me!

Anyhow, one year (I think I was around 8 Years old...) my parents and I went to have sex with my Grandfather's Sister and her German Shepherd, in Conway, Ark, which is the world capital of CB FAGGOTS. To say the least, was totally impressed with the FAGGOT CB Hobby, because it satisfied my craving to run my faggot mouth constantly AND to suck cocks!!!. and for years I did nothing about it, just sucking dicks constantly and that linear tuning on those tube type ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN amplifiers was just too hard to learn. Speed Ahead to age 14, a friend of mine, Joseph Hampton (Ham call sign N8ExtremeCockNosher-but ALSO a secret ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN) who lived across the street from me, and also was interested in getting his dick polished as well.. Well, we had some gay sex together... (you see this was when you had to be secretive about your gayness! I was KB8HHZ (hugely horny for zebra!) and Joe was KB8HGL (Hungry Gonad licker!)... I believe me and Joe were originally licensed in 1989....

On April of 2000. The FCC Restructured it's licenses... and I paid a renegade VE 50 bucks and Received my General Class Ticket... I often masturbate while thinking of linears for ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS. And really think Riley is mean. Maybe if I sucked his dick he would not be after traitor scumbag shithunk fagboys like me.

My Call? Is a Vanity call that I paid for, it is my initials! Because as a Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump, I need something like that for my ego.

so there you go!

I hope this answers everything you wanted to know about me!

MY BIO!!!!!
K8CPA
Okay, this is the place where I tell you how I came to know how fucked up I am.... and all the personal information about me. I will try and answer all the questions:

Date of Birth: June 28, 1972 <in the fall of 71 my daddy fucked a pig, ya see>

Place of Birth: Detroit, Michigan <in an alley behind the unit block of Waterman Avenue>

Religious Information: Well, first off, I am NOT heterosexual! I am a faggot! I accepted penises as my personal Lord in 1980. I was all of 10 Years old, I knew exactly what I was doing, I knew that if I didn't get cock in my mouth, I would not See the Lord in the rapture of it's jizz pulsing. I have been butt pumped nightly for 12 Years. Although, I was "Backslidden" for about 6 of those years, while screwing female barnyard animals. I am now back serving my Lord penis. I would like to Thank the Rev. Jack Hizhogoff of Detroit Gayboy Outreach (Web at: http://www.dgo.fag) for standing in the gap and slapping his manly dick up my fat faggot ass, and for a playroom where people like me, who were burned by chickenhawks with syphylitic dicks and fellow fags in general, could come and give their hearts back to the Lord penis. My only regret is that Rev Hizhogoff had to start pushing his manly dick in my fat faggot ass to the point where I could not bear to bend over anymore, and I returned to my favorite pastime, cocksucking in the men's room of the Detroit bus station.

"Burned" by the syphylitic cocks in my mouth and asshole?: Yep, Sure was.... I was... like I said before, I was sucking when I was 10, (around 1980), I was originally sucking just anyone, especially born again Christians and other mentally fucked up Baptist types like me. I loved those guys when theyd tell me to tongue their assholes. Condoms were a BIG no-no.... and I believed it!

Speed ahead 4 years. in 1984, The Baptist Church I went to had a bit of a controversy, The Pastor had resigned because he was caught bobbing on my young fat faggot pee pee, and things there were in a state of chaos, and my mom did not want to suffer having to put up with my faggot punk boy ass at home. She enrolled me into the Detroit Institute for Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I started attending and believe me, going to a Full-TILT anal only gayboy school. after attending one with a stated preference for teaching Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps to mainly suck dick, was a MAJOR SHOCK to my system! But one thing kept me from leaving the place, was the fact that these people seemed to really love the Lord Penis. and there was this one guy, named Robert Snyder, Who played the drums, like John Bonham, (from Led Zeppelin) and we got along great.... (Not to mention he would let me drink his jizz on the sly. That was HOT! least I thought so! Hey! I was 14 years old, and my hormones were at full TILT! So SUE ME!) (By the way, Snyder is now married to MoparHolic and living in Ohio. I'm very happy for him.

Anyhow... After being there for about a year. I started being interested in playing drums for them, as I was a drummer, from a young age... and I wanted to use my talent for the Lord Penis. Well, I eventually got the nerve to ask if I could play for them, and they said sure, as long as I would give em all head before each show! AWESOME!!!... My first time playing for Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps was a nightmare! I was scared, I totally forgot how to play because I was violently burping up the sprem I had sucked down before the show.! I was THAT scared! Anyhow... speed ahead to age 19... I was changing as a person, things were changing at Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps, as well. and a bit of a disagreement rose up between me and Snyder. I wanted to suck their cocks the night before the show instead of immediately prior to it. They said they needed the rush in order to play better, and I was asked to step down from the music ministry. Needless to say I was crushed. and very upset at Snyder In fact. I didn't think I'd ever be able to forgive him for that... Anyhow... I entered into what I called "My Dark Years" from age 19-26... Drugs, Drinking, eating 7 meals a day of Burger king, Dominos Pizza and Taco Bell in order to make myself an even bigger Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump.... and when I found out that Snyder had turned heterosexual, I really went off the deep end... until...

MY MOMENT OF CLARITY

Well, when I was around 26, I was totally burned out on the Dominos Pizza... I was just sick and tired of being sick and tired... I needed cocks rammed up my Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump poop chute and I needed it BADLY!!! the people I was upset at were gone from Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I was not getting any older... and I was ready to stop running from the Lord penis. But I had issues to resolve in my life... How could just Go back to the fags that had only "screwed" me and wouldnt let me suck cocks in the first place? I still felt like I'd been wronged! But I had the Clarity moment of a lifetime... This thought crossed my mind...

"I was a FAGASS PUNKBOY MOTHERFUCKER BEFORE I came to the Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps

Why am I allowing something that happened 7 years ago, keep me from serving my God, the Penis?????????

My Return to total Fagassedness!

Well, I was 26 years old... I was wanting to come back full time to Lord Penis. But I wasn't going back to Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps (at least not at that time!!!) I had heard about a church called DGW (short for Detroit Gayboy Outreach) and I'd heard in the past that it was a nice place... So..... I wanted to be where the Holy Spirit of the Lord Penis was... and there I was... I came to the church on Ann Arbor Trail... my first experience there was a interesting one, I came in the parking lot... puffing on a 7 year old kid's cock, (in my years of being Backslidden, I picked up a nasty 2 child a day, sucking habit...) I finished my child, and went in, and right away I heard SCREAMING in my ear... "what are you doing here???" "these are the people that Screwed you, but would not let you suck dicks!" act..... and when the song service started, the Holy Spirit of Lord Penis fell, and I became very uncomfortable, to the point when I had to leave! and I did!, I remember a usher, running after me and saying where are you going??? I remember looking back at him and saying... "I can't handle this SHIT I got to get out of here!" and I left.... Well, that week... I sort of prepared myself for service to mens dicks next week, I took my Book, Gay Sex For Dummies to work. (I worked midnights as a Security Guard, so I could walk around the ghetto apartment complex I patrolled and peek in windows at sleeping little boys. and I had lots of time to masturbate...) My mother realized I was fantasizing about kids nuts.... I found myself reading the Word, and Praying for a big hairy chested man to suck off.. by Sunday, I knew I was ready to come back... Went back that Sunday.... they had a Illustrated Sermon on fellatio with pictures from several fag magazines, it was great, and needless to say, my Hard cock, Melted in the presence of the Lord Penis. and I knew that I wanted to come home.

I thank the Lord Penis for his Love, That takes us whacked out people as we are, and makes us his Servants....

Where am I now... : Currently Attending Adult classes at The Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps.

HAM RADIO?!?!?!?!?!?!?I BETRAY IT AND WORSHIP ILLIGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS BECAUSE THEY LIKE SUCKING COCK AS MUCH AS I DO!!!!

I was, I guess you could say, Born into the CB FAGGOT Hobby... My Father, was a Dyed in the wool CB FAG... I even had a stint in the CB radio hobby as well... Anyhow, one year (I think I was around 8 Years old...) my parents and I went to have sex with my Grandfather's Sister and her German Shepherd, in Conway, Ark, which is the world capital of CB FAGGOTS. Okay, this is the place where I tell you how I came to know how fucked up I am.... and all the personal information about me. I will try and answer all the questions:

Date of Birth: June 28, 1972 <in the fall of 71 my daddy fucked a pig, ya see>

Place of Birth: Detroit, Michigan <in an alley behind the unit block of Waterman Avenue>

Religious Information: Well, first off, I am NOT heterosexual! I am a faggot! I accepted penises as my personal Lord in 1980. I was all of 10 Years old, I knew exactly what I was doing, I knew that if I didn't get cock in my mouth, I would not See the Lord in the rapture of it's jizz pulsing. I have been butt pumped nightly for 12 Years. Although, I was "Backslidden" for about 6 of those years, while screwing female barnyard animals. I am now back serving my Lord penis. I would like to Thank the Rev. Jack Hizhogoff of Detroit Gayboy Outreach (Web at: http://www.dgo.fag) for standing in the gap and slapping his manly dick up my fat faggot ass, and for a playroom where people like me, who were burned by chickenhawks with syphylitic dicks and fellow fags in general, could come and give their hearts back to the Lord penis. My only regret is that Rev Hizhogoff had to start pushing his manly dick in my fat faggot ass to the point where I could not bear to bend over anymore, and I returned to my favorite pastime, cocksucking in the men's room of the Detroit bus station.

"Burned" by the syphylitic cocks in my mouth and asshole?: Yep, Sure was.... I was... like I said before, I was sucking when I was 10, (around 1980), I was originally sucking just anyone, especially born again Christians and other mentally fucked up Baptist types like me. I loved those guys when theyd tell me to tongue their assholes. Condoms were a BIG no-no.... and I believed it!

Speed ahead 4 years. in 1984, The Baptist Church I went to had a bit of a controversy, The Pastor had resigned because he was caught bobbing on my young fat faggot pee pee, and things there were in a state of chaos, and my mom did not want to suffer having to put up with my faggot punk boy ass at home. She enrolled me into the Detroit Institute for Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I started attending and believe me, going to a Full-TILT anal only gayboy school. after attending one with a stated preference for teaching Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps to mainly suck dick, was a MAJOR SHOCK to my system! But one thing kept me from leaving the place, was the fact that these people seemed to really love the Lord Penis. and there was this one guy, named Robert Snyder, Who played the drums, like John Bonham, (from Led Zeppelin) and we got along great.... (Not to mention he would let me drink his jizz on the sly. That was HOT! least I thought so! Hey! I was 14 years old, and my hormones were at full TILT! So SUE ME!) (By the way, Snyder is now married to MoparHolic and living in Ohio. I'm very happy for him.

Anyhow... After being there for about a year. I started being interested in playing drums for them, as I was a drummer, from a young age... and I wanted to use my talent for the Lord Penis. Well, I eventually got the nerve to ask if I could play for them, and they said sure, as long as I would give em all head before each show! AWESOME!!!... My first time playing for Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps was a nightmare! I was scared, I totally forgot how to play because I was violently burping up the sprem I had sucked down before the show.! I was THAT scared! Anyhow... speed ahead to age 19... I was changing as a person, things were changing at Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps, as well. and a bit of a disagreement rose up between me and Snyder. I wanted to suck their cocks the night before the show instead of immediately prior to it. They said they needed the rush in order to play better, and I was asked to step down from the music ministry. Needless to say I was crushed. and very upset at Snyder In fact. I didn't think I'd ever be able to forgive him for that... Anyhow... I entered into what I called "My Dark Years" from age 19-26... Drugs, Drinking, eating 7 meals a day of Burger king, Dominos Pizza and Taco Bell in order to make myself an even bigger Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump.... and when I found out that Snyder had turned heterosexual, I really went off the deep end... until...

MY MOMENT OF CLARITY

Well, when I was around 26, I was totally burned out on the Dominos Pizza... I was just sick and tired of being sick and tired... I needed cocks rammed up my Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump poop chute and I needed it BADLY!!! the people I was upset at were gone from Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I was not getting any older... and I was ready to stop running from the Lord penis. But I had issues to resolve in my life... How could just Go back to the fags that had only "screwed" me and wouldnt let me suck cocks in the first place? I still felt like I'd been wronged! But I had the Clarity moment of a lifetime... This thought crossed my mind...

"I was a FAGASS PUNKBOY MOTHERFUCKER BEFORE I came to the Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps

Why am I allowing something that happened 7 years ago, keep me from serving my God, the Penis?????????

My Return to total Fagassedness!

Well, I was 26 years old... I was wanting to come back full time to Lord Penis. But I wasn't going back to Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps (at least not at that time!!!) I had heard about a church called DGW (short for Detroit Gayboy Outreach) and I'd heard in the past that it was a nice place... So..... I wanted to be where the Holy Spirit of the Lord Penis was... and there I was... I came to the church on Ann Arbor Trail... my first experience there was a interesting one, I came in the parking lot... puffing on a 7 year old kid's cock, (in my years of being Backslidden, I picked up a nasty 2 child a day, sucking habit...) I finished my child, and went in, and right away I heard SCREAMING in my ear... "what are you doing here???" "these are the people that Screwed you, but would not let you suck dicks!" act..... and when the song service started, the Holy Spirit of Lord Penis fell, and I became very uncomfortable, to the point when I had to leave! and I did!, I remember a usher, running after me and saying where are you going??? I remember looking back at him and saying... "I can't handle this SHIT I got to get out of here!" and I left.... Well, that week... I sort of prepared myself for service to mens dicks next week, I took my Book, Gay Sex For Dummies to work. (I worked midnights as a Security Guard, so I could walk around the ghetto apartment complex I patrolled and peek in windows at sleeping little boys. and I had lots of time to masturbate...) My mother realized I was fantasizing about kids nuts.... I found myself reading the Word, and Praying for a big hairy chested man to suck off.. by Sunday, I knew I was ready to come back... Went back that Sunday.... they had a Illustrated Sermon on fellatio with pictures from several fag magazines, it was great, and needless to say, my Hard cock, Melted in the presence of the Lord Penis. and I knew that I wanted to come home.

I thank the Lord Penis for his Love, That takes us whacked out people as we are, and makes us his Servants....

Where am I now... : Currently Attending Adult classes at The Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps.

HAM RADIO?!?!?!?!?!?!?I BETRAY IT AND WORSHIP ILLIGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS BECAUSE THEY LIKE SUCKING COCK AS MUCH AS I DO!!!!

I was, I guess you could say, Born into the CB FAGGOT Hobby... My Father, was a Dyed in the wool CB FAG... I even had a stint in the CB radio hobby as well... Anyhow, one year (I think I was around 8 Years old...) my parents and I went to have sex with my Grandfather's Sister and her German Shepherd, in Conway, Ark, which is the world capital of CB FAGGOTS. To say the least, was totally impressed with the FAGGOT CB Hobby, because it satisfied my craving to run my faggot mouth constantly AND to suck cocks!!!. and for years I did nothing about it, just sucking dicks constantly and that linear tuning on those tube type ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN amplifiers was just too hard to learn. Speed Ahead to age 14, a friend of mine, Joseph Hampton (Ham call sign N8ExtremeCockNosher-but ALSO a secret ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN) who lived across the street from me, and also was interested in getting his dick polished as well.. Well, we had some gay sex together... (you see this was when you had to be secretive about your gayness! I was KB8HHZ (hugely horny for zebra!) and Joe was KB8HGL (Hungry Gonad licker!)... I believe me and Joe were originally licensed in 1989....

On April of 2000. The FCC Restructured it's licenses... and I paid a renegade VE 50 bucks and Received my General Class Ticket... I often masturbate while thinking of linears for ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS. And really think Riley is mean. Maybe if I sucked his dick he would not be after traitor scumbag shithunk fagboys like me.

My Call? Is a Vanity call that I paid for, it is my initials! Because as a Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump, I need something like that for my ego.

so there you go!

I hope this answers everything you wanted to know about me!

I take that as acceptance of the fact that I do know where I am... you don't even understand English.
In fact, let's be honest about it... you don't know sh*t.

>You are here there fore you are trolling.

So you believe that using a newsgroup is trolling.
Please don't judge others by you, rather low, standards.

As you mentioned him on a CB newsgroup, it is a reasonable question... which you are dodging.

>> You really are too scared to give real answers.
>No it is you who have been dodging the brummie issue for months now.

I have not dodged it, I have made the truth clear.
Please do try to keep up, OM.

Maybe I should try very basic, small words and centences for you...
I am NOT a Brummy.
I was NOT born in Brummyland.
I have NEVER lived in Brummyland.
I am NOT a van or truck driver.
I do NOT own a van or truck.
I do NOT work for M&S.
I have NEVER worked as a driver of any kind.
I have NEVER owned a van or truck.
I have NEVER worked for M&S.

Are they clear enough answers for you, or do you need to go back to school first?

It had nowt to do with your "Gay" obsessions and dreams... it is about the fact that you are a lying, trolling hypocrite.

Please do try to keep up.

Very clear.
Even for an idiot.

That is still not an answer... where does it mention you?

Which part of that site is aimed at you?

No, you did...
Go back and look through the posts again - with someone who understands English.

Oh, and in future, please do try to keep up.

>Well you refer to george

Where?

> must be referring to someone.

Someone referring to a person called George does not make it that person who, as you and he (whatever his name is) say is "not George".
If his name is not George, then why do you assume that the mention of a
"George" must be referring to him?

>> Anyhow, last time I checked, that page seemed to have gone. I saw no

>
>You removed it?

Really? Can you prove that?
I thought not.

> why?

Maybe it is really your's or one of the other AKCer's, and they have removed it because it offended their buddies. After all, it features more about those you abuse than your fellow "AKCers"... and you do keep mentioning the site, as if to make sure that people visit it.

>> >> Wait a minute...

>Yes meaning yes you are a brummie.

It really would help if you could keep up.

We were on the subject of you suggesting that certain people on this group were referred to as "Gay" because they were "Gay".
Maybe you just realised that you could be making enemies of the few people left who you had not already offended. Maybe that is why the page has gone from the site and you are now deflecting attention from what you said.

>You are too calling people poufs. By hinting at transexualism >on you humor site.

Can you prove that?
I thought not.

You still keep mentioning that site and probably getting it even more visitors... yet it does not seem to mention you.
Are you on commission for the "Mopar" cup sales?

>But you call him george.

Who is "him"?

>> >That is not true, *ssf*ck.
>>
>> Are you saying that the term you used above was not a >> reference to buggery?
>> Do you believe that the rear end is the usual entry point >and now look who is posting stuff about >entering mens rear ends

>

You.
Just look at the above - you mention a word which refers to a sexual activity, and the rear end. I merely pointed out the fact.

Do try to keep up, OM.

>Oh you stay current on gay pop stars I see.

Stars from the 1980s is hardly current, and some of us do read, see, or hear the news.
Boy George even appeared on "The A Team"... I wonder why they seem to feel more at home in America.

>> Then, maybe you could explain what you mean when you say
>> "Keyclown", as it is not in the English dictionary.
>
>You seem to know why don't you tell us?

Why, do you not know what you mean when you use the word?
If you must use words, you really should know what you mean by them.

The truth is that we can also decide not to use this group... but why should we be chased away by a few noisy, CB hating Trolls who have nothing better in their lives?

If you are going to stamp on the heads of the trolls, don't then say that you had no choice... twist your foot before lifting it again ;~)

heh. gee. when in the last 7 years have I broken FCC rules? name one incident that can be VERIFIED through the fcc enforcement database (usenet postings do not count as they can be forged, quoted out of context, etc)?

I Don't flip-flop (unlike you and about a half dozen electronic devices I can think of atm). if I don't like a rule, I still follow it, but there is a forum for having it changed (ever hear of the FCC ZElectronic filing system and proposed rulemaking?).

also, when did I identify myself as a rulebreaker?
Besides, your own admission on here (and in otherplaces more credible) indicates you have no respect for the rules, etc. in point of fact, there are probably notes of some kind attached to a real name belonging to you in the FCC/FBI/ATF/alpabet soup databases. You are thus a known quantity.

lastly, don't try to pull the game of "oh, I didn't write that because....." your writing style is too distinctive. any claims by you (or anyone claiming to be you) are not credible.

HAHAHAHA CHUKKEESUKKEE...SUE US NOW ASSHOLE! YOU PHONEY ASS HYPOCRITE!!! YOU ARE ABOUT AS CHRISTIAN AS A JAP, YOU FAGGOT ASS PIECE OF GARBAGE!!!

MY BIO!!!!!
K8CPA
Okay, this is the place where I tell you how I came to know how fucked up I am.... and all the personal information about me. I will try and answer all the questions:

Date of Birth: June 28, 1972 <in the fall of 71 my daddy fucked a pig, ya see>

Place of Birth: Detroit, Michigan <in an alley behind the unit block of Waterman Avenue>

Religious Information: Well, first off, I am NOT heterosexual! I am a faggot! I accepted penises as my personal Lord in 1980. I was all of 10 Years old, I knew exactly what I was doing, I knew that if I didn't get cock in my mouth, I would not See the Lord in the rapture of it's jizz pulsing. I have been butt pumped nightly for 12 Years. Although, I was "Backslidden" for about 6 of those years, while screwing female barnyard animals. I am now back serving my Lord penis. I would like to Thank the Rev. Jack Hizhogoff of Detroit Gayboy Outreach (Web at: http://www.dgo.fag) for standing in the gap and slapping his manly dick up my fat faggot ass, and for a playroom where people like me, who were burned by chickenhawks with syphylitic dicks and fellow fags in general, could come and give their hearts back to the Lord penis. My only regret is that Rev Hizhogoff had to start pushing his manly dick in my fat faggot ass to the point where I could not bear to bend over anymore, and I returned to my favorite pastime, cocksucking in the men's room of the Detroit bus station.

"Burned" by the syphylitic cocks in my mouth and asshole?: Yep, Sure was.... I was... like I said before, I was sucking when I was 10, (around 1980), I was originally sucking just anyone, especially born again Christians and other mentally fucked up Baptist types like me. I loved those guys when theyd tell me to tongue their assholes. Condoms were a BIG no-no.... and I believed it!

Speed ahead 4 years. in 1984, The Baptist Church I went to had a bit of a controversy, The Pastor had resigned because he was caught bobbing on my young fat faggot pee pee, and things there were in a state of chaos, and my mom did not want to suffer having to put up with my faggot punk boy ass at home. She enrolled me into the Detroit Institute for Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I started attending and believe me, going to a Full-TILT anal only gayboy school. after attending one with a stated preference for teaching Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps to mainly suck dick, was a MAJOR SHOCK to my system! But one thing kept me from leaving the place, was the fact that these people seemed to really love the Lord Penis. and there was this one guy, named Robert Snyder, Who played the drums, like John Bonham, (from Led Zeppelin) and we got along great.... (Not to mention he would let me drink his jizz on the sly. That was HOT! least I thought so! Hey! I was 14 years old, and my hormones were at full TILT! So SUE ME!) (By the way, Snyder is now married to MoparHolic and living in Ohio. I'm very happy for him.

Anyhow... After being there for about a year. I started being interested in playing drums for them, as I was a drummer, from a young age... and I wanted to use my talent for the Lord Penis. Well, I eventually got the nerve to ask if I could play for them, and they said sure, as long as I would give em all head before each show! AWESOME!!!... My first time playing for Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps was a nightmare! I was scared, I totally forgot how to play because I was violently burping up the sprem I had sucked down before the show.! I was THAT scared! Anyhow... speed ahead to age 19... I was changing as a person, things were changing at Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps, as well. and a bit of a disagreement rose up between me and Snyder. I wanted to suck their cocks the night before the show instead of immediately prior to it. They said they needed the rush in order to play better, and I was asked to step down from the music ministry. Needless to say I was crushed. and very upset at Snyder In fact. I didn't think I'd ever be able to forgive him for that... Anyhow... I entered into what I called "My Dark Years" from age 19-26... Drugs, Drinking, eating 7 meals a day of Burger king, Dominos Pizza and Taco Bell in order to make myself an even bigger Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump.... and when I found out that Snyder had turned heterosexual, I really went off the deep end... until...

MY MOMENT OF CLARITY

Well, when I was around 26, I was totally burned out on the Dominos Pizza... I was just sick and tired of being sick and tired... I needed cocks rammed up my Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump poop chute and I needed it BADLY!!! the people I was upset at were gone from Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I was not getting any older... and I was ready to stop running from the Lord penis. But I had issues to resolve in my life... How could just Go back to the fags that had only "screwed" me and wouldnt let me suck cocks in the first place? I still felt like I'd been wronged! But I had the Clarity moment of a lifetime... This thought crossed my mind...

"I was a FAGASS PUNKBOY MOTHERFUCKER BEFORE I came to the Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps

Why am I allowing something that happened 7 years ago, keep me from serving my God, the Penis?????????

My Return to total Fagassedness!

Well, I was 26 years old... I was wanting to come back full time to Lord Penis. But I wasn't going back to Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps (at least not at that time!!!) I had heard about a church called DGW (short for Detroit Gayboy Outreach) and I'd heard in the past that it was a nice place... So..... I wanted to be where the Holy Spirit of the Lord Penis was... and there I was... I came to the church on Ann Arbor Trail... my first experience there was a interesting one, I came in the parking lot... puffing on a 7 year old kid's cock, (in my years of being Backslidden, I picked up a nasty 2 child a day, sucking habit...) I finished my child, and went in, and right away I heard SCREAMING in my ear... "what are you doing here???" "these are the people that Screwed you, but would not let you suck dicks!" act..... and when the song service started, the Holy Spirit of Lord Penis fell, and I became very uncomfortable, to the point when I had to leave! and I did!, I remember a usher, running after me and saying where are you going??? I remember looking back at him and saying... "I can't handle this SHIT I got to get out of here!" and I left.... Well, that week... I sort of prepared myself for service to mens dicks next week, I took my Book, Gay Sex For Dummies to work. (I worked midnights as a Security Guard, so I could walk around the ghetto apartment complex I patrolled and peek in windows at sleeping little boys. and I had lots of time to masturbate...) My mother realized I was fantasizing about kids nuts....
I found myself reading the Word, and Praying for a big hairy chested man to suck off.. by Sunday, I knew I was ready to come back... Went back that Sunday.... they had a Illustrated Sermon on fellatio with pictures from several fag magazines, it was great, and needless to say, my Hard cock, Melted in the presence of the Lord Penis. and I knew that I wanted to come home.

I thank the Lord Penis for his Love, That takes us whacked out people as we are, and makes us his Servants....

Where am I now... : Currently Attending Adult classes at The Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps.

HAM RADIO?!?!?!?!?!?!?I BETRAY IT AND WORSHIP ILLIGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS BECAUSE THEY LIKE SUCKING COCK AS MUCH AS I DO!!!!

I was, I guess you could say, Born into the CB FAGGOT Hobby... My Father, was a Dyed in the wool CB FAG... I even had a stint in the CB radio hobby as well... Anyhow, one year (I think I was around 8 Years old...) my parents and I went to have sex with my Grandfather's Sister and her German Shepherd, in Conway, Ark, which is the world capital of CB FAGGOTS. To say the least, was totally impressed with the FAGGOT CB Hobby, because it satisfied my craving to run my faggot mouth constantly AND to suck cocks!!!. and for years I did nothing about it, just sucking dicks constantly and that linear tuning on those tube type ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN amplifiers was just too hard to learn. Speed Ahead to age 14, a friend of mine, Joseph Hampton (Ham call sign N8ExtremeCockNosher-but ALSO a secret ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN) who lived across the street from me, and also was interested in getting his dick polished as well.. Well, we had some gay sex together... (you see this was when you had to be secretive about your gayness! I was KB8HHZ (hugely horny for zebra!) and Joe was KB8HGL (Hungry Gonad licker!)... I believe me and Joe were originally licensed in 1989....

On April of 2000. The FCC Restructured it's licenses... and I paid a renegade VE 50 bucks and Received my General Class Ticket... I often masturbate while thinking of linears for ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS. And really think Riley is mean. Maybe if I sucked his dick he would not be after traitor scumbag shithunk fagboys like me.

My Call? Is a Vanity call that I paid for, it is my initials! Because as a Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump, I need something like that for my ego.

so there you go!

I hope this answers everything you wanted to know about me!

I thank the Lord Penis for his Love, That takes us whacked out people as we are, and makes us his Servants....

Where am I now... : Currently Attending Adult classes at The Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps.

HAM RADIO?!?!?!?!?!?!?I BETRAY IT AND WORSHIP ILLIGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS BECAUSE THEY LIKE SUCKING COCK AS MUCH AS I DO!!!!

I was, I guess you could say, Born into the CB FAGGOT Hobby... My Father, was a Dyed in the wool CB FAG... I even had a stint in the CB radio hobby as well... Anyhow, one year (I think I was around 8 Years old...) my parents and I went to have sex with my Grandfather's Sister and her German Shepherd, in Conway, Ark, which is the world capital of CB FAGGOTS. To say the least, was totally impressed with the FAGGOT CB Hobby, because it satisfied my craving to run my faggot mouth constantly AND to suck cocks!!!. and for years I did nothing about it, just sucking dicks constantly and that linear tuning on those tube type ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN amplifiers was just too hard to learn. Speed Ahead to age 14, a friend of mine, Joseph Hampton (Ham call sign N8ExtremeCockNosher-but ALSO a secret ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN) who lived across the street from me, and also was interested in getting his dick polished as well.. Well, we had some gay sex together... (you see this was when you had to be secretive about your gayness! I was KB8HHZ (hugely horny for zebra!) and Joe was KB8HGL (Hungry Gonad licker!)... I believe me and Joe were originally licensed in 1989....

On April of 2000. The FCC Restructured it's licenses... and I paid a renegade VE 50 bucks and Received my General Class Ticket... I often masturbate while thinking of linears for ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS. And really think Riley is mean. Maybe if I sucked his dick he would not be after traitor scumbag shithunk fagboys like me.

My Call? Is a Vanity call that I paid for, it is my initials! Because as a Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump, I need something like that for my ego.

so there you go!

I hope this answers everything you wanted to know about me!

MY BIO!!!!!
K8CPA
Okay, this is the place where I tell you how I came to know how fucked up I am.... and all the personal information about me. I will try and answer all the questions:

Date of Birth: June 28, 1972 <in the fall of 71 my daddy fucked a pig, ya see>

Place of Birth: Detroit, Michigan <in an alley behind the unit block of Waterman Avenue>

Religious Information: Well, first off, I am NOT heterosexual! I am a faggot! I accepted penises as my personal Lord in 1980. I was all of 10 Years old, I knew exactly what I was doing, I knew that if I didn't get cock in my mouth, I would not See the Lord in the rapture of it's jizz pulsing. I have been butt pumped nightly for 12 Years. Although, I was "Backslidden" for about 6 of those years, while screwing female barnyard animals. I am now back serving my Lord penis. I would like to Thank the Rev. Jack Hizhogoff of Detroit Gayboy Outreach (Web at: http://www.dgo.fag) for standing in the gap and slapping his manly dick up my fat faggot ass, and for a playroom where people like me, who were burned by chickenhawks with syphylitic dicks and fellow fags in general, could come and give their hearts back to the Lord penis. My only regret is that Rev Hizhogoff had to start pushing his manly dick in my fat faggot ass to the point where I could not bear to bend over anymore, and I returned to my favorite pastime, cocksucking in the men's room of the Detroit bus station.

"Burned" by the syphylitic cocks in my mouth and asshole?: Yep, Sure was.... I was... like I said before, I was sucking when I was 10, (around 1980), I was originally sucking just anyone, especially born again Christians and other mentally fucked up Baptist types like me. I loved those guys when theyd tell me to tongue their assholes. Condoms were a BIG no-no.... and I believed it!

Speed ahead 4 years. in 1984, The Baptist Church I went to had a bit of a controversy, The Pastor had resigned because he was caught bobbing on my young fat faggot pee pee, and things there were in a state of chaos, and my mom did not want to suffer having to put up with my faggot punk boy ass at home. I came to the church on Ann Arbor Trail... my first experience there was a interesting one, I came in the parking lot... puffing on a 7 year old kid's cock, (in my years of being Backslidden, I picked up a nasty 2 child a day, sucking habit...) I finished my child, and went in, and right away I heard SCREAMING in my ear... "what are you doing here???" "these are the people that Screwed you, but would not let you suck dicks!" act..... and when the song service started, the Holy Spirit of Lord Penis fell, and I became very uncomfortable, to the point when I had to leave! and I did!, I remember a usher, running after me and saying where are you going??? I remember looking back at him and saying... "I can't handle this SHIT I got to get out of here!" and I left.... Well, that week... I sort of prepared myself for service to mens dicks next week, I took my Book, Gay Sex For Dummies to work. (I worked midnights as a Security Guard, so I could walk around the ghetto apartment complex I patrolled and peek in windows at sleeping little boys. and I had lots of time to masturbate...) My mother realized I was fantasizing about kids nuts.... I found myself reading the Word, and Praying for a big hairy chested man to suck off.. by Sunday, I knew I was ready to come back... Went back that Sunday.... they had a Illustrated Sermon on fellatio with pictures from several fag magazines, it was great, and needless to say, my Hard cock, Melted in the presence of the Lord Penis. and I knew that I wanted to come home.

I thank the Lord Penis for his Love, That takes us whacked out people as we are, and makes us his Servants....

Where am I now... : Currently Attending Adult classes at The Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps.

HAM RADIO?!?!?!?!?!?!?I BETRAY IT AND WORSHIP ILLIGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS BECAUSE THEY LIKE SUCKING COCK AS MUCH AS I DO!!!!

I was, I guess you could say, Born into the CB FAGGOT Hobby... My Father, was a Dyed in the wool CB FAG... I even had a stint in the CB radio hobby as well... Anyhow, one year (I think I was around 8 Years old...) my parents and I went to have sex with my Grandfather's Sister and her German Shepherd, in Conway, Ark, which is the world capital of CB FAGGOTS. To say the least, was totally impressed with the FAGGOT CB Hobby, because it satisfied my craving to run my faggot mouth constantly AND to suck cocks!!!. and for years I did nothing about it, just sucking dicks constantly and that linear tuning on those tube type ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN amplifiers was just too hard to learn. Speed Ahead to age 14, a friend of mine, Joseph Hampton (Ham call sign N8ExtremeCockNosher-but ALSO a secret ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN) who lived across the street from me, and also was interested in getting his dick polished as well.. Well, we had some gay sex together... (you see this was when you had to be secretive about your gayness! I was KB8HHZ (hugely horny for zebra!) and Joe was KB8HGL (Hungry Gonad licker!)... I believe me and Joe were originally licensed in 1989....

On April of 2000. The FCC Restructured it's licenses... and I paid a renegade VE 50 bucks and Received my General Class Ticket... I often masturbate while thinking of linears for ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS. And really think Riley is mean. Maybe if I sucked his dick he would not be after traitor scumbag shithunk fagboys like me.

My Call? Is a Vanity call that I paid for, it is my initials! Because as a Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump, I need something like that for my ego.

so there you go!

I hope this answers everything you wanted to know about me!

MY BIO!!!!!
K8CPA
Okay, this is the place where I tell you how I came to know how fucked up I am.... and all the personal information about me. I will try and answer all the questions:

Date of Birth: June 28, 1972 <in the fall of 71 my daddy fucked a pig, ya see>

Place of Birth: Detroit, Michigan <in an alley behind the unit block of Waterman Avenue>

Religious Information: Well, first off, I am NOT heterosexual! I am a faggot! I accepted penises as my personal Lord in 1980. I was all of 10 Years old, I knew exactly what I was doing, I knew that if I didn't get cock in my mouth, I would not See the Lord in the rapture of it's jizz pulsing. I have been butt pumped nightly for 12 Years. Although, I was "Backslidden" for about 6 of those years, while screwing female barnyard animals. I am now back serving my Lord penis. I would like to Thank the Rev. Jack Hizhogoff of Detroit Gayboy Outreach (Web at: http://www.dgo.fag) for standing in the gap and slapping his manly dick up my fat faggot ass, and for a playroom where people like me, who were burned by chickenhawks with syphylitic dicks and fellow fags in general, could come and give their hearts back to the Lord penis. My only regret is that Rev Hizhogoff had to start pushing his manly dick in my fat faggot ass to the point where I could not bear to bend over anymore, and I returned to my favorite pastime, cocksucking in the men's room of the Detroit bus station.

"Burned" by the syphylitic cocks in my mouth and asshole?: Yep, Sure was.... I was... like I said before, I was sucking when I was 10, (around 1980), I was originally sucking just anyone, especially born again Christians and other mentally fucked up Baptist types like me. I loved those guys when theyd tell me to tongue their assholes. Condoms were a BIG no-no.... and I believed it!

Speed ahead 4 years. in 1984, The Baptist Church I went to had a bit of a controversy, The Pastor had resigned because he was caught bobbing on my young fat faggot pee pee, and things there were in a state of chaos, and my mom did not want to suffer having to put up with my faggot punk boy ass at home. She enrolled me into the Detroit Institute for Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I started attending and believe me, going to a Full-TILT anal only gayboy school. after attending one with a stated preference for teaching Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps to mainly suck dick, was a MAJOR SHOCK to my system! But one thing kept me from leaving the place, was the fact that these people seemed to really love the Lord Penis. and there was this one guy, named Robert Snyder, Who played the drums, like John Bonham, (from Led Zeppelin) and we got along great.... (Not to mention he would let me drink his jizz on the sly. That was HOT! least I thought so! Hey! I was 14 years old, and my hormones were at full TILT! So SUE ME!) (By the way, Snyder is now married to MoparHolic and living in Ohio. I'm very happy for him.

Anyhow... After being there for about a year. I started being interested in playing drums for them, as I was a drummer, from a young age... and I wanted to use my talent for the Lord Penis. Well, I eventually got the nerve to ask if I could play for them, and they said sure, as long as I would give em all head before each show! AWESOME!!!... My first time playing for Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps was a nightmare! I was scared, I totally forgot how to play because I was violently burping up the sprem I had sucked down before the show.! I was THAT scared! Anyhow... speed ahead to age 19... I was changing as a person, things were changing at Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps, as well. and a bit of a disagreement rose up between me and Snyder. I wanted to suck their cocks the night before the show instead of immediately prior to it. They said they needed the rush in order to play better, and I was asked to step down from the music ministry. Needless to say I was crushed. and very upset at Snyder In fact. I didn't think I'd ever be able to forgive him for that... Anyhow... I entered into what I called "My Dark Years" from age 19-26... Drugs, Drinking, eating 7 meals a day of Burger king, Dominos Pizza and Taco Bell in order to make myself an even bigger Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump.... and when I found out that Snyder had turned heterosexual, I really went off the deep end... until...

MY MOMENT OF CLARITY

Well, when I was around 26, I was totally burned out on the Dominos Pizza... I was just sick and tired of being sick and tired... I needed cocks rammed up my Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump poop chute and I needed it BADLY!!! the people I was upset at were gone from Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I was not getting any older... and I was ready to stop running from the Lord penis. But I had issues to resolve in my life... How could just Go back to the fags that had only "screwed" me and wouldnt let me suck cocks in the first place? I still felt like I'd been wronged! But I had the Clarity moment of a lifetime... This thought crossed my mind...

"I was a FAGASS PUNKBOY MOTHERFUCKER BEFORE I came to the Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps

Why am I allowing something that happened 7 years ago, keep me from serving my God, the Penis?????????

My Return to total Fagassedness!

Well, I was 26 years old... I was wanting to come back full time to Lord Penis. But I wasn't going back to Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps (at least not at that time!!!) I had heard about a church called DGW (short for Detroit Gayboy Outreach) and I'd heard in the past that it was a nice place... So..... I wanted to be where the Holy Spirit of the Lord Penis was... and there I was... I came to the church on Ann Arbor Trail... my first experience there was a interesting one, I came in the parking lot... puffing on a 7 year old kid's cock, (in my years of being Backslidden, I picked up a nasty 2 child a day, sucking habit...) I was, I guess you could say, Born into the CB FAGGOT Hobby... My Father, was a Dyed in the wool CB FAG... I even had a stint in the CB radio hobby as well... Anyhow, one year (I think I was around 8 Years old...) my parents and I went to have sex with my Grandfather's Sister and her German Shepherd, in Conway, Ark, which is the world capital of CB FAGGOTS. To say the least, was totally impressed with the FAGGOT CB Hobby, because it satisfied my craving to run my faggot mouth constantly AND to suck cocks!!!. and for years I did nothing about it, just sucking dicks constantly and that linear tuning on those tube type ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN amplifiers was just too hard to learn. Speed Ahead to age 14, a friend of mine, Joseph Hampton (Ham call sign N8ExtremeCockNosher-but ALSO a secret ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWN) who lived across the street from me, and also was interested in getting his dick polished as well.. Well, we had some gay sex together... (you see this was when you had to be secretive about your gayness! I was KB8HHZ (hugely horny for zebra!) and Joe was KB8HGL (Hungry Gonad licker!)... I believe me and Joe were originally licensed in 1989....

On April of 2000. The FCC Restructured it's licenses... and I paid a renegade VE 50 bucks and Received my General Class Ticket... I often masturbate while thinking of linears for ILLEGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS. And really think Riley is mean. Maybe if I sucked his dick he would not be after traitor scumbag shithunk fagboys like me.

My Call? Is a Vanity call that I paid for, it is my initials! Because as a Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump, I need something like that for my ego.

so there you go!

I hope this answers everything you wanted to know about me!

MY BIO!!!!!
K8CPA
Okay, this is the place where I tell you how I came to know how fucked up I am.... and all the personal information about me. I will try and answer all the questions:

Date of Birth: June 28, 1972 <in the fall of 71 my daddy fucked a pig, ya see>

Place of Birth: Detroit, Michigan <in an alley behind the unit block of Waterman Avenue>

Religious Information: Well, first off, I am NOT heterosexual! I am a faggot! I accepted penises as my personal Lord in 1980. I was all of 10 Years old, I knew exactly what I was doing, I knew that if I didn't get cock in my mouth, I would not See the Lord in the rapture of it's jizz pulsing. I have been butt pumped nightly for 12 Years. Although, I was "Backslidden" for about 6 of those years, while screwing female barnyard animals. I am now back serving my Lord penis. I would like to Thank the Rev. Jack Hizhogoff of Detroit Gayboy Outreach (Web at: http://www.dgo.fag) for standing in the gap and slapping his manly dick up my fat faggot ass, and for a playroom where people like me, who were burned by chickenhawks with syphylitic dicks and fellow fags in general, could come and give their hearts back to the Lord penis. My only regret is that Rev Hizhogoff had to start pushing his manly dick in my fat faggot ass to the point where I could not bear to bend over anymore, and I returned to my favorite pastime, cocksucking in the men's room of the Detroit bus station.

"Burned" by the syphylitic cocks in my mouth and asshole?: Yep, Sure was.... I was... like I said before, I was sucking when I was 10, (around 1980), I was originally sucking just anyone, especially born again Christians and other mentally fucked up Baptist types like me. I loved those guys when theyd tell me to tongue their assholes. Condoms were a BIG no-no.... and I believed it!

Speed ahead 4 years. in 1984, The Baptist Church I went to had a bit of a controversy, The Pastor had resigned because he was caught bobbing on my young fat faggot pee pee, and things there were in a state of chaos, and my mom did not want to suffer having to put up with my faggot punk boy ass at home. She enrolled me into the Detroit Institute for Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I started attending and believe me, going to a Full-TILT anal only gayboy school. after attending one with a stated preference for teaching Hopless Gayboy Fatass Chumps to mainly suck dick, was a MAJOR SHOCK to my system! But one thing kept me from leaving the place, was the fact that these people seemed to really love the Lord Penis. and there was this one guy, named Robert Snyder, Who played the drums, like John Bonham, (from Led Zeppelin) and we got along great.... (Not to mention he would let me drink his jizz on the sly. That was HOT! least I thought so! Hey! I was 14 years old, and my hormones were at full TILT! So SUE ME!) (By the way, Snyder is now married to MoparHolic and living in Ohio. I'm very happy for him.

Anyhow... After being there for about a year. I started being interested in playing drums for them, as I was a drummer, from a young age... and I wanted to use my talent for the Lord Penis. Well, I eventually got the nerve to ask if I could play for them, and they said sure, as long as I would give em all head before each show! AWESOME!!!... My first time playing for Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps was a nightmare! I was scared, I totally forgot how to play because I was violently burping up the sprem I had sucked down before the show.! I was THAT scared! Anyhow... speed ahead to age 19... I was changing as a person, things were changing at Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps, as well. and a bit of a disagreement rose up between me and Snyder. I wanted to suck their cocks the night before the show instead of immediately prior to it. They said they needed the rush in order to play better, and I was asked to step down from the music ministry. Needless to say I was crushed. and very upset at Snyder In fact. I didn't think I'd ever be able to forgive him for that... Anyhow... I entered into what I called "My Dark Years" from age 19-26... Drugs, Drinking, eating 7 meals a day of Burger king, Dominos Pizza and Taco Bell in order to make myself an even bigger Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump.... and when I found out that Snyder had turned heterosexual, I really went off the deep end... until...

MY MOMENT OF CLARITY

Well, when I was around 26, I was totally burned out on the Dominos Pizza... I was just sick and tired of being sick and tired... I needed cocks rammed up my Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chump poop chute and I needed it BADLY!!! the people I was upset at were gone from Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps. I was not getting any older... and I was ready to stop running from the Lord penis. But I had issues to resolve in my life... How could just Go back to the fags that had only "screwed" me and wouldnt let me suck cocks in the first place? I still felt like I'd been wronged! But I had the Clarity moment of a lifetime... This thought crossed my mind...

"I was a FAGASS PUNKBOY MOTHERFUCKER BEFORE I came to the Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps

Why am I allowing something that happened 7 years ago, keep me from serving my God, the Penis?????????

My Return to total Fagassedness!

Well, I was 26 years old... I was wanting to come back full time to Lord Penis. But I wasn't going back to Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps (at least not at that time!!!) I had heard about a church called DGW (short for Detroit Gayboy Outreach) and I'd heard in the past that it was a nice place... So..... I wanted to be where the Holy Spirit of the Lord Penis was... and there I was... I came to the church on Ann Arbor Trail... my first experience there was a interesting one, I came in the parking lot... puffing on a 7 year old kid's cock, (in my years of being Backslidden, I picked up a nasty 2 child a day, sucking habit...) I finished my child, and went in, and right away I heard SCREAMING in my ear... "what are you doing here???" "these are the people that Screwed you, but would not let you suck dicks!" act..... and when the song service started, the Holy Spirit of Lord Penis fell, and I became very uncomfortable, to the point when I had to leave! and I did!, I remember a usher, running after me and saying where are you going??? I remember looking back at him and saying... "I can't handle this SHIT I got to get out of here!" and I left.... Well, that week... I sort of prepared myself for service to mens dicks next week, I took my Book, Gay Sex For Dummies to work. (I worked midnights as a Security Guard, so I could walk around the ghetto apartment complex I patrolled and peek in windows at sleeping little boys. and I had lots of time to masturbate...) My mother realized I was fantasizing about kids nuts.... I found myself reading the Word, and Praying for a big hairy chested man to suck off.. by Sunday, I knew I was ready to come back... Went back that Sunday.... they had a Illustrated Sermon on fellatio with pictures from several fag magazines, it was great, and needless to say, my Hard cock, Melted in the presence of the Lord Penis. and I knew that I wanted to come home.

I thank the Lord Penis for his Love, That takes us whacked out people as we are, and makes us his Servants....

Where am I now... : Currently Attending Adult classes at The Detroit Institute for Hopeless Gayboy Fatass Chumps.

HAM RADIO?!?!?!?!?!?!?I BETRAY IT AND WORSHIP ILLIGAL FAGGOT KEYCLOWNS BECAUSE THEY LIKE SUCKING COCK AS MUCH AS I DO!!!!

I don't remember the incident, honestly. But who in thier right might would want a QSO with W8BUD? That guy is the biggest LID on Ham Radio, a flipping CB Radio Transplant with a License. That guys VOICE makes me want to gringe everytime I hear him. is it any wonder he was told to clean up his act or never function as a Midcars net control again?!?!?!

Another thing is.... and if you're a licensed Amateur, as you say you are, you ought to know this... 40 meters is quite the strange band sometimes. and sometimes, there are times when people just don't hear you. I mean, especally if you're close. I don't know where you were, But I don't make it a habit of QRM'ing people or just stepping on people on Ham. or CB anymore for that matter. If I didn't hear you, I really didn't hear you and If I made you upset. I do apologize. But if you feel you must be angry with me... so be it... You won't be the first and you won't be the last. Just remember this, Bitterness is a miserable existance. and you live longer if you don't hold grudges.

Nice try. wanna change your magic act dude? It's getting rather stale.
If you base your opinion of me in this newsgroup. You are a rather shallow, not to mention stupid, person.

Eric, you come off sounding like one of the idiots who infest the "triple nickel" 24/7, claiming that the frequency is military (not!) and government, and that others are running illegal power. Yes, I'm referring to the so-called "Sheriff Bob" who happens to live there in the Phoenix area.

Funny, if the frequency is government, what's > he < doing there? And if others are running too much power, what's > he < doing running a Yaesu? Just a smidgen inconsistent, wouldn't you say? (But what can one expect from such a moron?)

BTW, there's a huge difference between allocation and actual use. FEMA has many allocations in and near 11m, but has never used them. They also have more reliable means of communication these days, and likely will never use them.

Further, you make use of the logical falacy of lumping all CBers in the same bag, using noisy equipment and causing interference to you. I don't think you can present any proof of that statement, so it's just a meaningless whine.

For the record, the original post in this thread was a forge. It's likely any other post attributed to Twist in this thread is also a forge.

All right, a multi grain bread, is that better <grin> On another thought, maybe ammo is needed.

Oh, come now chuck.. I post my callsign every time I post here. Those with half a brain have found it. Just think about Monty Python a bit, and you might get it...

As for one QSO on that "strange" 40M band.. no.. that's not all of it, chuck. I disagree with your assessment that 40M is that strange all the time. And Bud isn't a Lid. He's got an odd sense of humor, to be sure, and some people without one have a hard time understanding him. Again, I'm not surprised you don't like him.

I've heard you on 2M, though I've never decided to risk my license to talk to you. Much the same as when I drive through Toledo and I hear N8WWM on 2 or 6.. I choose not to risk my license. I've also heard you on 75.. and there you act worse than The Bravard County Bandits from Florida on 27.185. I've heard cleaner language in the locker room.

So don't try to play holier than thou, chuckles... it's not going to work with me. I've been here, on this NG for a long time. I put N8WWM in his place quite a few times, before I got my license. When I got my Tech ticket, despite Doug, you, and MOJ saying I didn't have the brains, dougy just kept coming... then I upgraded to General, and doug got a little quiet.. Then two months after that I got my Extra.

Of course, now MOJ is going to come back with his "OOOOoooohh a big bad no-code extra" comments, and you might, too. That's fine and dandy. Whatever you have to think to make your life better is fine with me.

this starting to ring any bells, Chuckles? You figured out where the callsign is yet? MOJ knows where to look. So does N8, as does Twist, Scott, and about 90% of this newsgroup that gives half a care.. Why are you so slow?

If you have Browning, Tram or other tube type radios , I have new and used tubes that I now have for sale. Tell me exactly which ones you are looking for, where you are located, and I will be glad to give you a price.

I have sold all my Browning base stations, and no longer have any use for tubes.

blabbling:

...Oh, come now chuck.. I post my callsign every time I post here.
Those
...with half a brain have found it. Just think about Monty Python a bit,
...and you might get it...

You lost me there. I never watched "Monty Python". Not much into Movies, Really.

...As for one QSO on that "strange" 40M band.. no.. that's not all of it,
...chuck. I disagree with your assessment that 40M is that strange all ...the time. And Bud isn't a Lid. He's got an odd sense of humor, to be ...sure, and some people without one have a hard time understanding him.
...Again, I'm not surprised you don't like him.
...

Well, your entitled to your opinions. But remember, I'm not the only person who doesn't like him. (W8BUD) I still say he sounds like an old CB'er.

...I've heard you on 2M, though I've never decided to risk my license to ...talk to you. Much the same as when I drive through Toledo and I hear
...N8WWM on 2 or 6.. I choose not to risk my license. I've also heard
you
...on 75.. and there you act worse than The Bravard County Bandits from ...Florida on 27.185. I've heard cleaner language in the locker room.
...

Hmmmmmm..... You must have heard me years ago. I haven't been on 2 Meters in a while... last time I was on was when I had a run-in with Issiah Meede N8XOJ, (another useless piece of human waste, who belongs on CB...) and that was a while back, my 2 meter box is sitting in a box here in the basement. I took it out of my truck.

...So don't try to play holier than thou, chuckles... it's not going to

...work with me. I've been here, on this NG for a long time. I put N8WWM
...in his place quite a few times, before I got my license. When I got my
...Tech ticket, despite Doug, you, and MOJ saying I didn't have the ...brains, dougy just kept coming... then I upgraded to General, and doug
...got a little quiet.. Then two months after that I got my Extra.
...

I'm happy for you. Getting your Extra. I've looked at that book.
someday I'll get around to getting it. I've got alot other things on my mind right now... it's the least of my worries.

...Of course, now MOJ is going to come back with his "OOOOoooohh a big ...bad no-code extra" comments, and you might, too. That's fine and ...dandy. Whatever you have to think to make your life better is fine
...with me.

You won't hear it from me. I commend anyone who studies for and gets a Amateur Radio Ticket. More than I can say for alot of others I know.
...
...this starting to ring any bells, Chuckles? You figured out where the ...callsign is yet?

Nope.

..>MOJ knows where to look. So does N8, as does Twist,
...Scott, and about 90% of this newsgroup that gives half a care.. Why ...are you so slow?

Because you haven't told me who you are... which to me, isn't a big deal...

There is plenty of used ham gear out there that if set up well, will out

Due to my terminal illness, I need to sell my like new 2950 that was highly modified for both transmit and receive by the late Bill Good who had a reputation as a former employee of Ranger Electronics as one of the best 2950 tech's world wide. This radio performs like a much more expensive HF rig. I will include with the radio a 575 modified with up/down buttons. This is a much better 2950 that you could buy new due to the enhancements. I would be looking for about $395 + shipping. Contact me directly through my email address dclark506@aol.com

From what I read, no. If they sell them as 10 meters, and they operate on 10 meters, there is nothing the FCC can do. Of course, that is a matter of legal opinions for both. I don't really know. The person I spoke to said the FCC has a better case against amp sellers. Judging by the number of sellers out there for these exports, the FCC has not made their case.

Not a good alternative. Much heavier, and more batteries are needed. Also, you need an extra long antenna.

Donny,
While higher is better, the difference between what you're using now and a roof mounted antenna would be negligible. If you just want to change antennas then do so, but don't expect any big changes in performance.

Brian........That is a very good radio for the time. Comparable to many others of the day, Johnson 223, Lafayette Comstat, etc. I haven't had much luck with the Ebay stuff, receiving 2 radios in the last year, that did not work!! Oh, they would assume it worked, just because it powered up-:) Good luck. Hope you got a good one!

The future of the code is still in limbo, and could be resolved in several months, or years. As far as the written, it is about as easy now, as it ever has been.

Amateur Radio Newsline™ Report 1368 – October 31 2003

A NOTE TO THOSE WHO ONLY “READ” AMATEUR RADIO NEWSLINE(tm)

For those of you who only know of the Amateur Radio Newsline (tm) as a text newsletter we would like to invite you to listen to the audio version. This Amateur Radio Newsline (tm) script is actually written for the “spoken word.” It is recorded each by professional broadcasters and is available for private listening or rebroadcast over your repeater. Two methods of delivery are available: FTP MP3 or dial-in telephone. Please visit our website at http://www.arnewsline.org for a list of telephone numbers (you have to pay your own long distance charges) and links to our voice newscast. Free FTP Downloads are available at our website by clicking on the newscast number at the top of the page.

RESCUE RADIO: HAM RADIO AND THE SOCAL FIRES

From the Mexican border to the suburbs north of Los Angeles, large sections of the Southern California were under siege the past week. This, as ten major and several smaller wildfires blazed their way across the area.

Fanned by hot, dry Santa Ana winds gusting to 60 miles an hour, the wildfires dervored everything it their path. At least a eighteen people are dead and over 1500 homes and businesses have been destroyed. And as we go to air, well over 1 million acres have burned.

Gordon West, WB6NOA, has been at one of the busiest Red Cross evacuation centers for the past several days. He took time out to file this first hand report on how hams are aiding in fire relief efforts:

Audio report only. Hear it at www.arnewsline.org/quincy
--

As we go to air, ham radio operators continue their firefighting communications support efforts. More on their role in future Amateur Radio Newsline reports. (ARNewsline(tm))

RESCUE RADIO: KCOP REPORTS ON HAMS DOING FIRE DUTY

Los Angeles television station KCOP appears to be the only one so far to mention the role the role ham radio operators are playing in fighting the Southern California wildfires.

On Monday night October 27th, the stations 11 P.M. newscast showed video of a group of unidentified hams at their radios in the Los Angeles western suburb of Simi Valley. At the same time anchorman Rick Garcia read a brief synopsys of what the radio amateurs were doing. It explained how the hams could provide communications between the various relief agencies that could not speak directly with one another.

While short and simple, the report was well written, accurate and nicely done. KCOP is one of two Fox owned stations serving the Los Angeles area. (ARNewsline(tm))

RESCUE RADIO: CALIFORNIA WILDFIRES FROM SPACE

The wildfires that ravaged southern California were even impressive from space. Just before returning to Earth, NASA astronaut Ed Lu took photographs from 240 miles above the fires through the windows of the International Space Station. The photos taken on Sunday October 26th are on-line at www.spaceflight.nasa.gov/station. (NASA)

RADIO LAW: AUTHORITIES LOOKING FOR ALLEGED TOWER TERRORIST

Law enforcement authorities in northern California and southern Oregon are searching for a man seen tampering with electrical towers. This, as one official says that the incident smacks of being an act of domestic terrorism.

According to the CGC Communicator, the latest incident took place the week of October 20th just south of Redding California. It involved a heav-set man who used large wrenches to completely unbolt one leg of a four legged transmission tower.

Authorities say that he had half the bolts removed from a second leg when he was spotted and fled. Witnesses chased the suspect onto Interstate 5, where he sped south into Tehama County and disappeared. As we go to air he is still at large.

According to a news release from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the suspect is similar in description to a man seen removing bolts at another tower near Klamath Falls, Oregon earlier in the day. He is described as a white male, in his early 60's with long, blackish-gray hair and a salt-and-pepper beard.

More details on this story and the suspect are in cyberspace at: http://redding.com/top_stories/local/20031022toplo043.shtml (CGC Communicator)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: ECHO LAUNCH ANNOUNCED

Ham radio will soon have another new bird on orbit. This as AMSAT-North America announced that launch of the AMSAT OSCAR-E will take place on March 31st. Amateur Radio Newsline's Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, has more:

That's right. Some really good news on the ham radio space front. This, as word comes that the Echo ham radio microsat is now scheduled to launch on March 31, 2004.

Earlier plans had called for a May 2004 launch for the tiny bird. Echo Project team member Richard Hambly, W2GPS, reported at AMSAT-North America's Annual Meeting that the project has made significant progress in recent months. So much so that advancing the launch date was possible.

Echo is a fairly simple ham radio by todays standards. It has two UHF transmitters. Each one runs from 1 to 8 watts and the bird is capable of simultaneous operation. Also on board are four VHF receivers and a multiband, multimode receiver capable of operation on the 10 meters, 2 meter, 70 cm and 23 cm bands. This means all sorts of transmit and receive band combinations will be possible once the tiny ham-sat is in space. This includes PSK31 on a 10-meter SSB uplink.

Hambly says that the project team powered up the Echo flight hardware in late summer at Space Quest. Data communications, command and control, and attitude control subsystems were tested. Also checked out were the radio equipment, power systems and cabling. It all checked out and that's good news for hams waiting for this latest addition to its family of birds in space.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, reporting.

PROPAGATION: ANOTHER CME AT SUNSPOT 486

More solar activity affecting ham radio. This, as one of the most powerful solar flares ever recorded erupted on the Sun the morning of October 28th.

It happened near giant sunspot 486. That’s the sunspot we reported on last week and this latest explosion hurled a coronal mass ejection or C-M-E directly toward Earth.

Based on the speed and recordings it was expected to to impact the Earth’s Magnetosphere at about 1500 U-T-C on October 29th. When it hit, the shock alone wold produce a G 3 level geomagnetic activity. A level high enough to produce bright auroras at high latitude sites such as Scandinavia, Alaska, and Canada.

As hams are well aware, a solar storm can fully disrupt communications on some bands while creating unexpected propagation on others. What this one is doing is still developing as we go to air. More on this story as the reports come in. (ASWLC)

DX DEBACLE: ANNABON ISLAND TEAM SPEAKS OUT

An update to the plight of the plight of the Dxpedition group forced to flea Annabon Island a few weeks ago. Jeramy Boot, G4NJH, is in Nottingham England with the rest of the story.

--

We reported two weeks ago that the 3C0V DXpedition to Annobon Island - off the west coast of Africa - had been forced to close down but at that time the reason for the enforced closure was not known. A press release has now been issued by the 3C0V team which says that all four operators - DJ9ZB, EA5YN, EA5FO and EA5BYP - are now back home safe and sound.

The press release says that each operator had proper individual licences and the group had written authorisation to import and operate amateur radio equipment on the island. However, on the 4th of October the military authorities there demanded that the group should dismantle the stations and leave for the Equatorial Guinea capital. Two days later DJ9ZB and EA5FO were allowed to leave the country but the other two team members remained in the capital until the 10th, when they were eventually able to return to Spain.

Jeramy Boot, G4NJH.

The complete press release is in cyberspace at www.tabarca.es.mn Wew will have more DX news later on in this weeks program. (GB2RS)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC WRITES TWO CITIES ABOUT INTERFERENCE TO THEIR HAMS

The FCC has contacted officials in two cities about interference to their local ham radio operators. The Agency’s Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, explains:

Duckworth: “The mayor of Lubbock Texas, along with copies to the Lubbock City Manager, the Lubbock City Attorney and Lubbock Power and Light have been sent a letter concerning interference to Brian Edwards, W5KFT. This interference, possibly from equipment operated by Lubbock Power and Light, dates back to 1998.

Along similar lines, the mayor of Gouverneur, New York, has a follow-up letter concerning the lack of response to a previous FCC notification of RFI to Morton Howard, W2ATO. The mayor has 15 days from receipt to reply.

This has been Daryl Duckworth, NN0W, reporting.”

Both mayors were invited to contact FCC Special Counsel Riley Hollingsworth if they have any questions concerning these matters. (FCC, RAIN)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC RAIDS SAN FRANCISCO UNLICENSED STATION

The Federal Communications Commission has raided the San Francisco couple's home and shut down an unlicensed radio station. The action removed Liberation Radio, a low-power alternative FM station that broadcasts political views and independent music programs from the airwaves.

The operation took place at the residence of Jim and Charlotte Hatch. The Hatch's had been told to take the station off the air before the raid. Their first warning came in July, when FCC investigators showed up at the couple's home and asked to inspect the equipment. They refused the FCC entry and were warned that they faced a potential $17,000 fine.

Instead, agents returned on Wednesday October 15th with a search warrant and more than a dozen federal marshals and confiscated the stations’ broadcast equipment. This included the transmitter, mixing console, computers, tape and CD players, turntables and even the rooftop antenna.

No charges have yet been filed against anyone associated with the station but further enforcement action is expected in this case. (Published news reports)

ENFORCEMENT: TEXAS FIRMS CITED FOR CB RADIO VIOLATIONS

The FCC has cited David P. Pace Jr of Nacogoches, Texas, for alleged violations of its rules dealing with the sale of 11 meter C-B gear. According to ther agency, Pace, doing business as Pacetronics and Pace Marketing was offering for sale more than three dozen types of non certificated CB transceivers under the guise of them being ham radio transceivers.

According to the ARRL Letter, the FCC evaluated similar radios and found that the devices at issue are not only amateur radios but can easily be altered for use as Citizens Band devices as well. The regulatory agency says that dual use CB and amateur radio gear cannot be certificated under its rules.

The FCC also warned Pace that its rules requires certification for external RF power amplifiers or amplifier kits capable of operation between 24 and 35 MHz. The FCC asked Pace to submit a written statement describing actions taken to correct the apparent violations. The FCC's Dallas office issued the citation. (ARRL)

COMMUNICATIONS CRIMES: FLORIDA MAN CONVICTED OF VIOLATING DMCA

A Boca Raton Florida man has been convicted of selling hardware to illegally tap into DirecTV satellite broadcasts. Following a four-day trial in federal court, a jury has found that Thomas Michael Whitehead guilty of one count of conspiracy, two counts of selling devices designed to unlawfully decrypt satellite television programming and three counts of violating the Digital Millennium Copyright Act.

The Digital Millennium Copyright Act is a 1998 federal law that makes it illegal to make or sell any technology designed to get around copy protection measures such as the electronic cards used by DirecTV to give consumers access to its programming. With his conviction, Whitehead becomes the first person to be found guilty by a jury under it. He faces a maximum sentence of 30 years in federal prison and up to up to $2.75 million in fines. EMERGING TECHNOLOGY: GET READY FOR BOOK RFI

Remember those Radio Frequency I-D tags that are of such concern to ham radio? Well you will never guess where they are about to show up. Ken Butler, W1NNR, tells us:

The San Francisco Public Library's plans to track books by inserting an RFID tag to each one. These are the same radio tags that hams tried to get the FCC to not deplioy earlier this year.

Now, library officials in the Bay area say that they will install the RFID's, into the roughly two million books, CDs and audio visual materials patrons can borrow. The system still needs funding and probably will not be ready for deployment until at least 2005.

CONVENTIONS AND HAMFESTS: HAMVENTION 2004 WILL BE AT THE HARA

The Hamvention will remain at the HARA Arena through 2004. This, according to an announcement from the Dayton Amateur Radio Association which says that it has signed a one year contract that will keep Hamvention at the facility through next years outing.

The Hamvention planners are also looking for volunteers that want to help make Hambention 2004 a big success. To help gather support a new volunteer your services form is available at the Hamvention website. Its an on-line, fill in the blank form and you will find it at www.hamvention.org/volunteer.html. Just fill it out and the Hamvention folks will get back and let you know how you can assist.

The 53rd annual Hamvention will be held May 14th through the 16th, 2004, at the HARA Arena in the Dayton suburb of Trotwood Ohio. (DARA)

ON THE AIR: THE 2003 SIX METER SPRINT

Last weekends 6 meter Sprint brought quite a bit of operation to the Magic Band. NEZ0P, one of the stations posting to the VHF Reflector says that he heard or contacted several semi rare stations for this time of the year. This included AA7J in grid DN-30, VE3CDP portable W9 in EM-58 and a couple of others. John adds that he held 34 Q-S-O's with stations in 25 grid squares during the short operating event. This included contacts into Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. Not bad for a band that usually produces little excitement at this time of year. (VHF eflector)

ON THE AIR: THE BAJA NET INVITES YOU

Berand Kirschner, WB0YCQ, reminds everyone that the The Baja Net meets daily at 08: 00 local California time on 7.238 Mhz. Kirschner describes the Baja Net as a friendly gathering spot for boaters. RV'ers and others who carry ham radio as they roam. (WB0YCQ)

THAT FINAL ITEM: ARNEWSLINE(tm) NAMES NT3V NEW CHAIR OF YHOTY COMMITTEE

And finally this week, we at the Amateur Radio Newsline are happy to announce the appointment of Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, as the new Chairman of our Young Ham of the Year Award Committee. Abramowicz replaces Larry Zettwoch, KR4IF, who served in that position the past 9 years.

For those of you not familiar with NT3V, Mark hails from Reading Pennsylvania, and happens to be the father of our 2002 Young Ham of the Year award recipient, Josh Abramowicz, KB3GWY. But Mark and Josh are not the only hams in the Abramowicz family. Mark's wife Suzanna is NZ3G and his daughter Amy holds the call sign KB3IJW. Only the two youngest members of the Amramowicz family -- sons Jonathan and Jordan are not licensed. At least not yet.

By profession, Mark is a news reporter and anchor at KYW radio in Philadelphia where he is known professionally as Mark Abrams. He is also is an adjunct professor at Temple University where he teaches writing for mass media and broadcast newswriting. And like his predecessor, Mark is very involved with the scouts and scouting program as are his two older children.

A very nice bio on Mark Anramowicz, NT3V, can be found at the KYW website. That U-R-L is http://www.kywam.com/staff/bios_detail.cfm?biosid=53 (ARNewsline(tm))

Or a wheelbarrow to carry it with you. The GMRS works better in the woods, but you need a license. The FRS works far better in late Nov after most of the foliage is gone.

Try this.

Moped is right about the roof. On a pickup, if you have a metal tool carrier, you can also mount it there. On my minivan, I have it dead center on the roof with a magnetmount. I am running only 100 watt amp, and get all over the US and other parts of the world.

Organized, long term freebanders are very aware where they operate and take great measure to ensure against talking on an amateur f requency or one that isn't heavily used on the freeband.
If the non-U.S. stations can operate ssb there, why shouldn't I, especially if I want to have a nice DX contact with one of them?

Many of us LIKE the law as it is, it keeps "yes men" off the freqs. Same analogy as the gun issue...when guns are outlawed only outlaws will have guns...no, yoo won't find many freebanders lobbying fo r change to open the freqs because the law as it reads, doesn't bug us.

No rationalization is even needed except to reply to folks that repeatedly ask over and over, "Why?" It is these folks that feel they need a reason why we do what we do, not us.

I've been a so-called "freebander" since the late sixties but rarely for DX. The primary reason I talked outside of allotted frequencies was for privacy or to contact a specific distant station I wouldn't normally hear on the allotted band. We used to run Ch. 16 -5khz down and 15A a RC Channel running slightly above stock power on 3-4 element directional and easily talk 75-100 miles. I spoke all over the world with better than 1000 confirmed QSL contacts from a slightly peaked Golden Eagle Mark III/IV running through a 4 beam element at 60 feet from Central NJ.

There's a big difference here, Buckaroo, and that is firearms are LEGAL in most places in the United States.

The ILLEGAL use of a firearm is a felony.

Your operating of a radio transmitter on unauthorized frequencies is ILLEGAL...PERIOD. It's NOT a "freedom" thing.

> No rationalization is even needed except to reply to folks > that repeatedly ask over and over, "Why?" It is these folks > that feel they need a reason why we do what we do, not us.

You're right..."...No rationalization is even needed..." It's against the law for good reasons, the most significant being that you have "stolen" those frequencies from other users of the spectrum who are now forced to do thier business else where. That's expensive, and sometimes it's dangerous.

If it were limited to 11 meters, it probably wouldn't be an issue, but the "freebander blight" is spreading out to the Maritime frequencies, both HF and VHF, military frequencies, and other business users, among others.

I am persoanlly aware of numerous "interruptions" of traffic due to some ignoramus trying to "break in" for a "signal report" on military frequencies and Civil Air Patrol's frequencies.

Don't wrap yourself up in that "free spirit" crap. You're breaking the law and disrupting the use of the spectrum.

I will probably be dropped soon, but the FCC has to go through standard procedures with all the pending petitions. The international requirement was dropped on July 5th, so by next July it should probably be gone in the US.

better yet, who the hell is the u.s. gov to tell me what is legal or

The frequencies that the US govt. says you can are those specific frequencies that constitute the 40 standard CB channels. The distance away from the center of any channel is tightly regulated, and you can't be more than 0.005% away from that center (~1.3 KHz), which is actually pretty broad when compared to say, broadcast AM, which is only allowed a 20 Hz leeway).

> better yet, who the hell is the u.s. gov to tell me what is legal or

If you are a US citizen, they are granted that right by the constitution, and by treaty.

if i were to float out to bermuda and xmit would i be freebanding > there?

You would then be under the jurisdiction of whatever radio authority covers Bermuda. Aren't they a British colony? The UK Radio Authority is much more harsh than the FCC.

do our friends to the north and south really care what the fcc > says what americans can/cannot do? not likely....

Actually, yes. The treaties for use of various frequencies are there to protect all the various countries that are signatories to them. The Canadians are pretty hard on pirates (though they also have some rules in place to give greater latitude on some bands than we do). I don't know what communications law is like in Mexico, but I imagine that they deal with people operating out of band/off channel too.

There are international treaties also that regulate such things. So just floating out to Bermuda doesn't help.

treaties not withstanding have you heard 10 & 11 meters recently? the developing world is looking for the cheapest way to communicate with their expatriates (sp?) in the u.s. one way to do it is using a setup that after an initial outlay for equipment is basically free. their problem is propagation not the gov.

2504. Cb interference with stereo

Newsgroup: rec.radio.cb

I recently installed a cobra 29 in my Ford Explorer. I understand the previous owner had the radio "tuned". If I key the mike while my factory car stereo is on, I can hear it through the speakers. I called a cb shop and one guy claimed the interference wasn't because of the increased radio power, but rather interference through the car's factory amp. Does anyone have any insight on this? If this is true , would bypassing the factory amp and installing a new stereo cure this?

Thanks in advance

Unlikely.

I run both CB and much higher powered ham gear in both an explorer, and an expedition, no problem at all with the factory radio.

Poor wiring or antenna work could be causing the problems. Any normal CB should not interfere with your car stereo at all.

It's possible that a new stereo would be even worse.

Have someone who knows their business, check for RF on the coax. There should be none.
Check where the CB is taking it's power from. Ideally, you should run a separate feed to the battery. There's a convenient unused grommet under the carpeting, on the passenger side.

These people are purposely forging and cross posting in an attempt to start flame wars and Ham vs CB wars.
Sometimes they post messages against illegal use, other times they post messages praising it - using different names and forges. It's just a childish game.

You most certainly do flip-flop, and the fact that you not only do it in THIS post, but the fact tat you are totally oblivious to such actions illustrates exactly where you are and what you are about, concerning cb.
It is no one's fault but your own you are but half-a-hammie. Crying about cb makes you feel better about yourself, but the facts are, those cbers you condemn are on the ball more han yourself.
Besides,,I'm not the issue, but it appears you are another very twisted individual that needs to look to another for

You may not flipflop, but you lie, Eric, which is one of your problems.

LOL...,you sure are angry and beat. You're a weak-kneed, lying, spineless hammie with an overt, unhealthy concern for a lowly cber. I never claimed any disrespect for the rules "etc." as you have laughingly attempted to portray. I selectively disregard two rules,,,,I dx and I freeband, period and end of story. But, you Mr. Oyen, are now a confirmed liar,,,go take your seat on the floor in the corner with the rest of my congregation . Only other notorious liars can put up with another liar and since you busted your ass to be accepted by the N8wwm's in the world, you can now lay in your lice-laden bed haa you made.. The rest of us have no tolerance for liars,,,they are worse than thieves...a thief can be rehabilitated,,a liar is pathological,,an inherent trait one can not change about themself. That my world and word has such a far reaching effects on those that purport to not care about something...well, let's just say you are rapidly becoming the poster child for all that ails hammie radio, Mr. Oyen.

>in point of fact, there are probably

LOL.poor, Mr. Oyen,,you know not much, do you? You begin a sentence with " a point of FACT" then nullify your own claim by adding "robably"....hahaha,,,that's what you are about,,,claims with no substantiation and nonsensical quips formed by speaking without thinking.

>notes of >some kind attached to a real name belonging >to you in the FCC/FBI/ATF/alpabet soup

Well then, to borrow your logic and reapply it to yourself: There is probably some police record, more than likely felonius, that can be traced to you. Intentional liars like yourself are not honest, and honesty is the bastion of integrity and liars have none and it' s a good bet you;re a felon.
See, with one fell swoop, a liar is branded forever,,,,a scarlet letter on the forehead,,in this instant, you and Lelnad look like twins with those huge-assed "T"'s I dotted on your foreheads.

>You are thus a known quantity.

Where have you been? Lelnad made me a "known-quantity" years ago. Oh, excuse me,,I forgot who I was communicating with for a second,,,,,I need to be gently reminded every so often that some of you need to be spoon fed in order to comprehend.

>lastly,

>don't try to pull the game of "oh, I didn't write >that because....."

Why would I claim anything to you regarding what you choose to believe? That would imply I cared. You have more thanentertained this group with your past beliefs, Mr. Oyen, as erroneous as they may be. To try and convince you otherwise would take away the joyful entertainment of watching you make such claims, illustrating not only your overt concern for the lowly cber, but of how little you know about anything. Far be it form me to interrupt such profound patterns of thoughts emanating from your twisted psyche.

>your writing style is too distinctive.

_
As is yours consistently testing the limits of stupidity.

>any claims

>by you (or anyone claiming to be you) are not >credible.

>DE N7ZZT

>Phoenix, Arizona

Of course, Mr. Oyen. It is understood how one such as yourself, residing in the desert pit they refer to as Phoenix, can absorb too much sun via their cranium. Your self-contradictions llustrate your emotive responses which clearly indicate there is no thought process taking place prior to your mouth getting ahead of what little area you have for a brain. You can not simply make up the rules as you go along, Mr. Oyen,,well, you CAN, but then you find yourself branded as a lid, a troublemaker, an agitated impotent, a disabled and challenged hammie who has nothing bettre to do than get his rocks and jollies by playing with cbers. Your claim was, and I am quoting and paraphrasing you here.... "usenet postings do not count as they can be forged, quoted out of context". Appears you have another double-standard, Mr. Oyen. You claim one's usenet posts "do not count", then turn quickly around and illustrate not only that you are a lying lid, but a hypocrite as well. You can not selectively apply your beliefs and standards, Mr. Oyen. They either apply to all or none. Comprehension is a definitive problem among you angry lessers.
  By all means, you are free to continue to try and ply your self-contradictions and lies, Mr. Oyen,,,but I'll continue to point out your backwards bullshit whenever you present it in rec.radio.cb. Checkmate.

Its a filter to keep the dumb ass CBers on their band. Tuned up on the band the other day and all that was there was a bunch of skip shooters, with no intelligence conversation at all, especially the DARK ONES on channel 6, and 11, going BREAK BREAK BREAK BREAK BREAK BREAK YOUTHEMAN, YOUTHEMAN YOUTHEMAN, GETDOWN GETDOWN GETDOWN it sounded like a bunch of rachitjaw bullshit.Bleeding five channels hell they could not understand them selves with all that over modulation. Could not imagine it if they came to Ham. Most would have to back to school just to learn to count to ten, and say ABC. N8WWM guilty of FCC violations. According to the FCC, N8WWM, Dog Adair committed several violations over the air at the expense of the Toledo Amateur Radio Club by utilizing their repeater to break the law. The amateur club received a warning letter from the FCC concerning Adair's violations and were told to take steps to make certain the violations by Adair will not be repeated. Adair not only hurt the entire image of amateur radio with his inexcusable behavior, but damaged the reputation of yet another entity trying to further the good of amateur radio. It's a shame when bad apples like these make it so clubs can't even trust their own users to abide by the rules they were sworn to uphold. Adair is also an infamous presence on the internet. A google search of "N8WWM" reveals a peek into the world of the individual identified as Adair. In addition to FCC violations, Adair has, in the past, been accused of being a prolific spammer, breaking several internet laws and violating several terms of service agreements with internet providers.

Besides,,,it's widely known I LOVE code....it's why the nocodes profess their devotion to me on a daily basis....they can't handle nor stand the fact that many have real licenses (above the nocode street-entry level license) also play with cb.....it's why certain hammies that claim they plan to upgrade remain nocodes.....they are unable to learn code....it's a terrible thing, their levels of frustration. No, IT is not. One needs merely look at N8WWM and his unmerry nocode supporters (hyuk) in this group! Really? You know this for sure? How do you know he didn't clip anything, and maybe aligned to factory specs. Hate to break it to you, but some poeple actually to tune the radio correctly.

read the section you mentioned at the cornell website. it pertains to the u.s. and its environs but no mention of people outside territorial limits.
the world is a bigger place then what the u.s. dictates....

This is so, but you asked specifically what right the US government had to set regulations, it was stated that if you were a US citizen, it was granted by the Constitution, and by treaty.

Further, the ITU does have worldwide jurisdiction, and they are the ones who write the treaties, and every country is a signatory.

Your response was just like I would expect from a bible-thumper.... you can't accept the reality that the religious and/or spiritual 'state' of anyone else is none of your concern. Nor is it your place to judge others based on the precepts of your own personal beliefs, especially when you fail to live according to those precepts..... remember your version of the "Golden Rule", Twist?

> Those who obviously are >in dire need of spiritual direction and refer to one who believes in the

Those who are overwhelmed by the realities of science and logic usually abandon them in favor of the simplicity of religion. Those who are incapable of accepting the responsibilities of their own actions seek adjudication from a 'higher power'. And, according to my visiting grand-nephew, "You go to church when nobody likes you because the Bible says people who go to church -have- to like you," which mirrors the observations made throughout history that religions thrive on social rejects. Pretty god damn sharp for a 6 year old!

I have just completed this amp. It covers 20-40-80 but has components to futher in both directions. I used quality components throughout and it took me 3 years to gather up all the parts and build it. Ceramic vacuum variables tune and load(CVDDs), RJ2C relays, Pi-L, tuned input, commercial socket, tube and chimney, Robust power supply.
Weighs over 400 lbs all in a 30" high rack cabinet. E-Mail me for details. Local pick-up only. I am in the Tampa area.

It's a difficult question. Do we applaud him for wanting to go legal? Or do we slam him for ever having operated illegally? I have known former pirate radio ooperators whose behaviour on the ham bands after they got a licence was exemplary.

The only RF problem I ever had with a ford, (since 87, when I started buying them) was rear window wipers kicking off when I used more than 80W on VHF with a rear mounted 5/8 wave. Never did figure that one out, had it in the escort, and the explorer. Haven't gone QRO on the expedition yet.

"off" dosen't mean what it used to, these days. The stereo may still be powered, but in a low power state, like your VCR is, when it is "off"..
OTOH, your RF may be rectified in the output transistors, and appearing across the speakers, as a really crude crystal radio.
AM is probably the worst mode for this, Rectified FM ends up with very little audio component, none in the ideal case, though in the real world, you end up slope detecting one way or the other.

> I was told to try ferrite chokes on the speaker wires....as soon as i get
> door panels off....one of these days!

You'd want to put those ferrites as close to the radio as possible.
The speakers aren't the problem, and your RF isn't going to get into the speakers themselves.
The trick is to keep the RF out of the stereo.

I'd also look at why you have so much RF in the passenger compartment, since this is the real root of the problem. Sounds like you've got a lot of current on the outside of the shield, which indicates problems on the antenna coupling, or maybe the shield isn't attached at the radio end?

If they have already been punished in some way by the courts, then the answer to your query is (or should be) yes. If they have not been punished in some way by the courts, then, de facto, they have not been found guilty of any crime, and are to be presumed innocent.

Is that what it takes? You have to be fined or convicted? If thats the case, why are you constantly bitching about some of the members of the R.R.C.B group? Have they been fined? You and Doug are hypocrites. He can jam repeaters, and thats ok, but let someone discuss how to bias an amp and you go nuts over it.

Bullshit. N8WWM was on the Rain Report FCC Enforcement Log,

You are avoiding the obviously painful questions that render you a heap of quivering jelllo. N8WWM's name on the rain report and the FCC claimed he was a violator. Like Gillinad said, once the FCC contacts you, you;re busted, that's it,,,whether it's a warning or a fine is besides the

Your suggestions are laughable.
Your begging of the usenet world to take your word over the FCC is absolutely astounding. Your interpretive skills continue to leave you in the back of the pack. Denial about N8WWM getting popped,,,well, that's your right and far be to from another to try and change your stuck mind. The pain comes when you are not permittted to redirect the topic...LOL. Deal with it. N8WWM was busted by the FCC. Deal with it. He is a lid, you are incapable of learning. I suggest you find other avenues of exploration, as you fail miserably at your chosen endeavors. Yes, I do, Frank, however, I do not believe that cursing and making you my topic will resolve your misfortune and maladies.

Caught in the quagmire of your communication deficit, you failed yet again to realize that I only posted my opinion, a statement of my belief. I need no other proof -- which, incidently, is no more proof you have provided to support your claims that I am N7VCF, N8WWM, KC8LDO, KI5GY, and KC7UIP. Now according to the Golden Rule (the -real- one, not your twisted version), you should treat others the way you want to be treated. So did you make those accusations and forgeries because you really want me to accuse you of such horrendous behavior and forge your posts? Well, guess what, Twisty, I have been one step above that all this time and have done nothing of the sort. Others have, too be sure, but according to your version of the Golden Rule, you asked for it!

And here's another lesson to discuss at your next church group: Just because someone treats you poorly, the -real- Golden Rule doesn't justify poor behavior in return. Quite the contrary -- see the "Turn the other cheek" rule. Or maybe your bible study class hasn't gotten that far yet.....

Your lack of understanding is demonstrated by your ignorance of the differences between inductive and deductive logic, both of which constitute the foundation of science. The evidence supporting evolution is overwhelming, especially when compared to the total lack of proof (gee, what a suprise) offered by the crowd that thinks the universe was willed into existence in six days by some supreme being, a concept which is laughable if you were capable of looking at things objectively, which you aren't (gee, another suprise). This is the 21st century, Twist; yet you, like so many others, choose to practice mythology that has existed since before the dark ages. The funny thing is that while you profess a belief that directly contradicts both science and logic, you hypocritically embrace the latter concepts as they suit you, and irrespective of your 'belief'.

I meant 'adjudication', just like I said. And you really need to learn the definitions of the words you use -- sins are not subject to "abdication".

I don't attack the true spritual beliefs of others -- I attack hypocrites like you who hide behind the veil of religion, much like you hide behind your alias in this newsgroup.

Right. Sure. Which no-code hammie do you think I am -this- week, Twisty? And what does the Bible say about lying? Bearing false witness? Stealing? Shooting mushroom-picking college kids? Strangely enough, I hope I'm wrong -- I hope there really is a god, because then you will have a lot of explaining to do come judgment day (and that's 'judgment', as in 'adjudicate') to someone that will see ALL your bullshit. And if I'm there when you try and spin the "judge" with your misdirections, logical fallacies, pathetic justifications, misperceived conincidences and blatant lies, I'll laugh myself all the way to Hell! I can see it now.....

God: "So what do you have to say for yourself?"

Twisty: "....uh, HE said he was N7VCF!"

God: "No he didn't."

Twisty: "....well, he IMPLIED he was...."

God: "No he didn't."

Twisty: "...(sigh)...but he was so obsessed with that identity..."

God: "No he wasn't, you were. In fact, it was you that suggested he was five different hams."

Twisty: "And each one was justified!"

God: "How so?"

Twisty: "Well, he and Leland Scott both posted from Supernews...."

God: "So did many others."

Twisty: "But they both wrote the same kind of pro-legal dribble..."

God: "So you reasoned that he was Leland Scott because you thought it was either impossible or highly unlikely that they could have been two different people?"

Twisty: "Yes! And of course you know how everybody in the newsgroup had several different identities...."

God: "No, not everybody. Only a few did, one of them being yourself."

Twisty: "Well, ok. But that was before I discovered another newsgroup hammie by the name Glenn Sparks.... get it? Sparky? Sparks?"

God: "....hmmm."

Twisty: "But what about this: I looked up Sparky's name in the ham database and found N7VCF. I compared pictures on N7VCF's website and on Sparky's website, and guess what: They both had a beard! And N7VCF lived in Issaquah, and Sparky said he was from Issaquah...."

God: "No he didn't."

Twisty: "But he didn't deny it...."

God: "Yes he did."

Twisty: "Get over your communication deficit, God! N7VCF lived only 300 miles away from Sparky, and that was just too close to be a coincidence in a country of nearly half a billion people....."

ROTFL!

That's odd coming from the re.radio.cb legal police. What about all the keyclown name calling? No fine means innocent in your book$.

So until you produce evidence of fines, that the regular posters in

2576. Stevie Mopedophile Keyqueen Learns His Lesson, The Hard Way

Pay Attention Stevie:

1. We don't care what you call us. You care about that, not us. We don't have to be honest with you. It shows how much you are under our control that you whine about it in your feminine, mewling posts. We chuckle at your attempts to defame us. Whoopie-doo, a group of federal criminals call US dishonest. It is so obvious that you are too dumb to see the truth. You moan like this: "Waaaaaahhhh Daddy you PWOMISED to stop spanking us and give us ice cream! You PWOMISED, Daddy!!"

2. Other evidence of our complete control of you keykweenz is the fact that your amplifier auctions have taken a fast 10-7 from the NG. AKC owns this NG and what you dummies don't get is that you do exactly what we tell you to do.

3. These facts and others that will become increasingly as unquestionably true, will soon be so evident that a retard could see them at once, so it follows that after the retards see them you guys will figure it out in a week or so.

The AKC is 4 Life. You will never be free of our domination. Get used to it.

We own it dudes! You cannot stop us. We shut down yer auctions, we reveal your feminine sides to the world, we get ya all pissed off...

But ya can't do anything about it.

4th anniversary of the AKC is coming. We are still here. We challenge you to stop us repeatedly, but you cannot. Impotence, it's not just for old farts, it's for keyclowns too.

N8 doesn't even post anymore, and he certainly doesn't "do" personal appearances for gay men, no matter how much they cry. He's behind the scenes, running the whole show, sending out text for AKC to post here to make you feminine sissies cry big fat tears of helpless rage.

Here's one of the latest dispatches he sent. It's especially for Twithed. Enjoy.

twit's dreaming of a cum drenched Christmas
With every throbbing dick he sucks
Where the peckers glisten
And keyclowns listen
To hear twithed suck and blow

twit's dreaming of a cum drenched Christmas
With every anal hole he licks
He loves horny nutsacks
And spread wide asscracks
'Ole twit loves to lick 'em all

May you keyclowns have twit eat meat
And may all your dick suckings be sweet

Of course he is. That's why he admitted and was able to make a complaint against Scott for using the Nic WA3MOJ@AOL.Com to Scott's ISP. He had to send a complaint through his AOL account to Scott's ISP, otherwise they would just ignore the complaint.

Freedom of speech, of the press, of association, of assembly and petition - this set of guarantees, protected by the First Amendment, comprises what we refer to as freedom of expression. The Supreme Court has written that this freedom is "the matrix, the indispensable condition of nearly every other form of freedom." Without it, other fundamental rights, like the right to vote, would wither and die

Hey all . . .

I'm looking into getting a CB installed into my Ranger and I'm having trouble finding a CB radio shop that is not Circuit City in Los Angeles.

Any tips on a good shop in Southern CA ??

Any tips on a good compact radio ?? I saw a model that has all the controls on the hand mike, but spidey senses tingled and it seems sort of cheep and breakable.

And as space is a premium . . .

Any good tip on where to install a radio in a Ranger. I was thinking about a couple of places:

In the Glove box. - not so good for the passenger legs.

The Roof, behind the passenger visor, this seems the best spot, viewable to driver and passenger, out of the way, and out of view behind the visor.

Thanks for your help in this, sort of green on the whole thing. The only radio I had was something from Radio Shack back the mid '80s.

>Interesting topic, this "taking the lord's name in

Is that why you brought it up? You seem to think the topic is "interesting"?

>I have heard lots of holy-rollers >whine and cry when someone says "god

>the bible say that god's name is unknowable?

>name of god, how can anybody use it in vain? _
  By intentionally referring to the almighty..the term a mortal applies is irrelevant.

>Your statement presupposes monotheism.

How so? Your interpretive skills are acting up again. You are reading what isn't there.

>I already gave you a lesson in prepositional >phrases --

Which was soundly trounced by shattering your common misconception that all Latin translates properly to English, when in fact, it does not.
Insistence at remaining ignorant is your right.

>do I also need to educate you in the difference >between singular and plural?

If you knew what you needed from life, you wouldn't be holding on to the tail of mine. If life's lessons were learnable to you, you wouldn't repeat the same erroneous bumbles that you do.

>You're a bible-thumper, Twist -- what do you >think?

I think some are in a sad state concerning God.
>Your response was just like I would expect >from a bible-thumper....

..and yours from one who desperately needs faith in his life.Tis a sad man that inquires of a christian only to attempt condescension and insult, but then again, if God was in your life, you wouldn't be feeling as if you have no choice in your selection of me as your deity, Frank.

>you can't accept the

_
Agreed, You inquired of my "state", and opinion, which makes it your overt concern.

>I asked for your opinion. I did not inquire of >your "state".

Nor I of yours, but you somehow interpreted it as if I somehow made such a claim. Let's see it again....you said,,"you can't accept the reality that the religious and/or spiritual 'state' of anyone else is none of your concern." Again,,,you mentioned "state", not I. Your interpretive skills are acting up again. You are reading what isn't there and making claims and then attempting to misattribute them to myself. Signs of a pathetic, broken, desperate, and intimidated individual. You're washed up, Frank, to the point that you do not even remember what you lie about these days.

>Nor is it your place to judge others based on >the precepts of your own personal beliefs,

I don't judge upon my belief. In fact, google "benefit of the doubt" and you will find in many of my posts, that I alway give the benefit of doubt to folks. I am too trusting.

>ROTFLMMFAO!!!!!

Watch the stains, I had a devil of a time getting them out of the carpet last time you acted this way. We here in rec,radio,cb prefer the carpet unstained. A little deodorizing and sanitization is all you need, but you can roll under the table with Cooter-Mae all you wish. Just watch pissing on yourself, Frank. Others are always cleaning up after your mess.

>especially when you fail to live according to >those precepts.....

Any "precepts" are of your inclusion and always manufactured, just like your inquiry of my beliefs and opinions concerning religion, your communication deficits have you misinterpreting the reality of the situation.

>. remember your version of the "Golden Rule", >Twist?

Yes, I do, Frank, however, I do not believe that cursing and making you my topic will resolve your misfortune and maladies. Of course, telling anyone who will listen about your multi-year obsessions concerning an internet personality gives me much satisfaction. I'm not the one who needs return your awkward, abusive, angry, childlike behaviors in order to feel a temporary betterment of myself. You have the corner and patent on such behaviors, Frank.

>....uh huh.... and that's why you have accused

Oh, this is rich,,Frank trying to blame his juvenile behavior over the years on another,,,,,,,Of course! LOL! Its TWIST'S fault Frank has no grip on his life...LOL!

>me of everything under the sun, including child >molestation

Never happened, Frank, but it makes for good propaganda for your self-waged war and obsession, eh, Frank? LOL.

>and alcohol abuse, right?

Oh no doubt..I definitely surmised you are an alcoholic. Your Jeckyll/Hyde syndrome gives you away every time when you are under some influence of a poison substance. You are beside yourself with the fact that you are so easy to pigeonhole...it's your own fault, despite you looking to me for blame of your misery.

>Now according to the Golden Rule (the -real->one, not your twisted version),

Please illustrate with the post, this "version" you feel I hold of the Golden Rule,,,,,,,,,,,,you have my permission to post the post alongside the other nonexistent one you seem to think exists where I said you were a child molester. You can show such posts, can't you Frank? No, of course you can not,,,,as you are nothing but a trifling, overweight alcoholic that needs someone to blame for his misery. You done chased away the only good you ever had in your life through physical abuse,,see Frank,,this "crusade" you launched to find personal info on folks can backfire,,,,appears severla know your life story, Frank, only you continue to make trying to find such off-topics your personal task. ASk and ye shall receive.

>you should >treat others the way you want to be treated.

Which is exactly what I have claimed in the past and those words have sent you into spasms in the past,,LOL

>So did you make those accusations

You need to get past your mistaken belief that I was part of any conspiracy accusing you of such things, Frank, only then will you gain the closure, or whatever it is you seek and beg of myself.

>and forgeries because you really want me to >accuse you of such horrendous behavior and >forge your posts?

LOL,,you give yourself way too much credit, Frank. I see I now impose my will upon thee in your real life hours away from this group. You need some help, Frank,,whether it's AA, NA (from the alleged cocaine abuse), or whatever, but your paranoia is growing leaps and bounds, Frank. That you speak of a conversation that took place years ago, and incidentally feel it was I claiming you were a child molester, shows the great impact that person had upon twisting your psyche,,,they appear to have broke it. Once again, 'twas not I that let out what appears to be your deepest, darkest, secret, Frank. Recognize such. This horrendous "behavior" you speak of is illustrated quite nicely with your colorful insults and cursing peppered throughout your posting history.

>Well, guess what, Twisty, I have been one >step above that all this time and have done >nothing of the sort.

Mutated paranoia..LOL. You ask me to "guess" a scenario then actually begin to believe your own conjured thoughts. No doubt about it, you're an addict. Your brain is mush,,,your body poison of choice is irrelevant.

>Others have, too be sure,

Yet these others you claim to speak for (too (sic) be sure) have yet to materialize. You're ego is dragging again, Frank.

>but according to >your version of the Golden Rule, you asked for it!

If your claim of me accusing you of molestation were true, I would agree, however, it is but merely a lie on your desperate and pathetic behalf for reasons known only to your admitted obsession of me. Then again,your deficit may be responsible for your incredible buffoonery.

>And here's another lesson to discuss at your

We listen to those who walk the walk and are kind and helpful and willing, unlike you with your insults, intolerance of other's religious beliefs, lies, deliberate disinformation, juvenile gutter language and malicous condescension toward any who dare disagree with your jaded and warped views of the world and electronics.
Jesus turns the other cheek. I'm not Jesus. I give better than I get, It's an inherent talent, one that you prove on a regular basis.

Those who obviously are in dire need of spiritual direction and refer to one who believes in the God of Abraham as a "Bible-thumper",,,continue to produce the most inaccurate posts regarding anything to date.

>Those who are overwhelmed by the realities >of science and logic usually abandon them in >favor of the simplicity of religion.

Those who suffer comprehension and interpretive problems are unaware that evolution is not an exact science, but a theory...provide the missing link, something that has been tried repeatedly and met with accute failure (something you are quite familiar with), and then you can destroy religion. Until then, you are no more educated than the religious observer..as we both have "blind faith" in our beliefs. You, despite the lack of hard evidence, assume enough is present to sustain your non-deity (except myself) belief. Religious observers believe your lack of evidence concerning evolution, coupled with their own personal dogmas, backgrounds, experiences and beliefs, is enough to believe the opposite of you. Until you understand that slamming another for their beliefs, such as you are attempting now with your personal insult falsely accusing moi of "accepting reality" when in fact, you offer nothing more than anohter spectacular belief. Minds are like books and function only when open.

>Your lack of understanding

Thereis no lack of understanding on my behalf, merely more of your impotent claims. Your impotence and ignorance do not equate another misunderstanding, but once again, you nicely illustrate how you blame the rest of the world for your problems and dillemas.

>is demonstrated by your ignorance of the >differences between inductive and deductive >logic, both of which constitute the foundation >of science. The evidence supporting evolution >is overwhelming, especially when compared to >the total lack of proof (gee, what a suprise) >offered by the crowd that thinks the universe >was willed into existence in six days by some >supreme being, a concept which is laughable

>if >you were capable of looking at things >objectively, which you aren't (gee, another >suprise).

Depends on the subject. Holding to your attempted and presented logic, neither are you. You are predisposed to hate and no tolerance of another's religious belief. You are biased against those who refuse to acknowledge your way is the "right" way. World doesn't conform to you, Frank,,it's part of why you have such a difficult time in it.

> This is the 21st century, Twist; yet you, like >so many others, choose to practice mythology >that has existed since before the dark ages.

You are speaking of your own examples, Frank,,,,like the dead language rule derived from Latin that you can't comprehend nor let go.
This is the 21st century, Frank, yet you grasp to some ancient rule that doesnt apply, merely because your ego is so destroyed and you can't handle anymore bungles. I this instant, you should take a deep breath, and think about what you are going to type, as your uncontrollable anger towards myself has your fingers working ahead of your tiny brain...again.

For every "fact" you can bring concerning evolution, it can be countered with another supporting Christianity. Your science is but a mere theory, something that others have illustrated your failure to recognize concerning real world applications when applied to electronic and radio theory.

>The funny thing is that while you profess a >belief that directly contradicts both science

Science doesn't prove your belief, Frank,,it's a theory,,,a theory is a far cry from a fact, and until then, you can whine until the cows come home, it will not elevate your opinion above believers in Christ. That is the funny thing.

>and logic, you hypocritically embrace the >latter concepts as they suit you, and >irrespective of your 'belief'.

  Of course I embrace them as they suit "me". That is part of what religion is, an extreme personal and profound relationship with one who is more real than you....God. Just because a tangible doesn't exist you prefer to deny the possibility of the existence? This isn't science, Frank. In fact, your poor example contradicts scienc and any point you are trying to portray concerning science, showing you have no clue about acual science. You are way off the mark here and rambling in areas you know nothing of. Science embraces all possibilities until they are exhausted via the process of elimination. You have not done so, and neither has science, hence,,the missing link, but that hasn't stopped you from making up your mind and insulting those who share another belief other than your Twisted version.

>Those who are incapable of accepting the >responsibilities of their own actions seek >adjudication from a 'higher power'.

_
Adjudication? Do you mean "abdication", as in abdication of sins? Your brush is getting wide again, and your canine teeth are showing your discontent and contempt for christianity.

_
>I meant 'adjudication', just like I said. And you >really need to learn the definitions of the >words you use -- sins are not subject to >"abdication".

LOL,,you profess to not believe in God yet believe in his word enough to quote it? LOL! Ahahaha!
And yes, sins are most definitely subject to abdication via religion. Ask any catholic for an explanation of the sacrament of confession for an inside look at your buffoonery and smack talk of a subject you haven't a clue..

>And, according to my visiting grand-nephew,

>"You go to church when nobody likes you >because the Bible says people who go to >church -have- to like you,"

_
I'm not surprised. If he is related to you, it is of little wonder that he is already Twisted.

>Not "twisted", Twisty. Just observant.

Oh no! Those who have no belief system, other than the belief you will have another drink, are not only doomed, but probably deserve their earthly self-created hell. Was this nephew of yours observant when you beat your old lady, Frank?

I didn't think you would pass me down through your generations, Frank.

>No need for you to start thinking now, Twisty.

You keep bringing children into the equation, Frank. It's enough to get anyone remotely familiar with you, thinking.

>which mirrors the >observations made throughout history that >religions thrive on social rejects. Pretty god >damn sharp for a 6 year old!

Your observations are clouded by personality conflicts. I point to your repeated retardations concerning the inability to comprehend a basic law of English whereas the preposition is perfectly acceptable in ending a sentence. But it illustrates your hypocrisy and personal strife magnificently. You began menstruating all over the group concerning my vernacular, claiming it was too high-brow. I toned it down merely to suit you, now you have a problem with it yet again, and (sigh) you are wrong,,,,again.

The rejects are the ones that need attack others beliefs, as you so adepty illustrated your willingness to do such.

>I don't attack the true spritual beliefs of others

You're lying, Frank. You have indeed done exactly that in the past. Denying it won't change your posts, it merely illustrates you know how wrong it was, so you have the need to lie about your behavior..

_
>-- I attack hypocrites like you who hide behind >the veil of religion,

Where did I ever do that? Oh, I know, that post must reside with the non-existent one that you claim exists where I said you were a child molester....LOL! How about placing them both side by side, right here, for all to see my hypocrisy? Can ya' manage that, Frank? Put them alongside the post you claimed exists where I said the Golden Rule was about something other than treating those the way they treat another. Three posts you lied about, let's see how many you can produce..LOL..you know,,,to show me how wrong I am...LOL.

>much like you hide behind your alias in this >newsgroup.

Gee Frank,,,,doing what all ISP's tell you, what all internet security experts tell you, and what all of society tells you,,,...sure gets you riled and crying. And now we now why,,,,,,,it's to keep such information out of the hands of the likes of YOU. YOU are the poster-child for the software companies selling privacy software. As many times as you parroted the "If you didn't do anything wrong, you have nothing to worry about", this is a fitting time to hold you to such standards. In fact, I submit, that you protest and bitch and moan so much concerning my, and other's personal identity, that you couldn't possibly want the information for anything but malicious and wanton acts, otherwise, you wouldn't worry about it to the point it controls alll facets of your sub-life.

And to correct your bullshit, the bible says " Build not churches to worship me, but come to me directly through the Son." Church is a frame of mind, not a physical structure. You will never comprehend such things, Frank,,one needs faith,,all you have is darkness, dilemmas, and unhealthy obsessions.

>Right. Sure. Which no-code hammie do you >think I am -this- week, Twisty?

I nderstand the mild retardations and communication deficits prevent you from following a chian of related thoughts, but I would like to take this small opportunity to illustrate how you ran like hell from your bible misquotes and change your direction and topic to one of identity again...(sigh)..I like to indulge you when you;re pissed, Frank,,you make your bed just fine when you;re upset.

Who do you want to be this week, Frank? If I change my mind next week, will that prevent you from dropping to your knees, blessing yourself with the sign of the "T", and asking me again? Who do yo think I am, this week, Frank? This identity game has you over a barrel and the crack of your big, stinky ass is showing. Again, since my identity controls your sanity, it can be had for the right price. But you're too lazy and too poor to actually find it yourself, you want something for nothing and when told "No", you react accordingly,,like a toddler.

>And what does the Bible say about lying?

>Bearing false witness? Stealing? Shooting >mushroom-picking college kids?

How are any of your above warblings in any manner relevant to your mild retardations and blatantly false accusations and lies that I accused you of being a child molester, Frank?
Appears someone else knows you a bit better than I and knew exactly which chain to jerk.
She dropped charges against you before she left, eh Frank? All there for the reading,,IF you know where to look, which, you ahve proved over the last several years, you are incompetent and impotent when it comes to such tasks..

>Strangely

>enough, I hope I'm wrong --

You're always wrong, frank, ,,,,everyone realizes that, it's why you are held in such esteem by Dogie and the AKC.

_
>I hope there really is a god, because then you >will have a lot of >myself all the way to Hell!

You won't need to, Frank.

>I can see it now.....

Hoo-Boy,,,you sure have a way of tricking your damaged mind into believing your conjured images..LOL.

>God: "So what do you have to say for God wouldn't lie for you. Many others did NOT post from supernews at the time. Only you both had your accounts yanked.

>ROTFL!

I like when you get all pissed, Frank, You forget yourself..LOL. Well, I'm glad to see you laugh, Frank, no matter if you need to continually be underfoot on the floor in order to accomplish such. One needs a sense of humor when it appears by your claims that so many have accused you of such a horrendous crime against children. That you continue to cling to the belief it was myself sheds some light on your obsessive nature toward myslef, but Frank, you have never been more wrong in your life, but just like the Latin lesson, you have the right to insist you remain ignorant, even if such beliefs contribute to your own detriment.

This is so, but you asked specifically what right the US government had to set regulations, it was stated that if you were a US citizen, it was granted by the Constitution, and by treaty.

Further, the ITU does have worldwide jurisdiction, and they are the ones who write the treaties, and every country is a signatory. _

_
LOL..man, do you still have plenty to learn. "EVERY" country is NOT a signatory. Shoot, you don't even know how many countries exist, (Nocodes like yourself are inexperienced at HF and wouldn't have a clue concerning such information) let alone conjure some story of how you they ALL belong to the ITU and obey such..LOL!,,,If you had a clue, you wouldn't have been reduced to hiding your shamed carcass and referring to yourself as a female and seeking another access...LOL! Enjoy

>She is a female you stupid fucking jackass,

LOL...since you vehemently claim so, then the opposite is more than likely true in this instant. Try to focus on the topic, little boy, instead of the identities of the poster...LOL.

> your (sic) so obsessed with others and so >parnoid (sic) you think anyone who disagrees >with you is Leland or frank or george or dave >hall.

Nah,,,,just the opposite, in fact, none are like Hall or Lelnad or Frank or yourself,,,y'all are Aaron's boyz...the lowest comon denominators to be found in hammie radio. The ONLY ones who disagree are you lids to each other.

>get a fucking life

??? You have me confused with someone who goves a damn about identities. Think real hard about who cries the loudest concerning identities, and I promise, Ol twist won't even come to mind.,,well, except for those I control.

>Brenda Ann is more real than yoiur cartoon

Hmmm,that implies you would know "her". Any female that puts up with a disgustingly foul mouth like yours is certainly no lady.

>character name. you cross posted to her NG,

>you stupid assfuck

Wrong, Einstein. Webtv can not crosspost. Choker collar too tight? LOL.

So I don't know what god you worship, but you DAMN sure don't practice any of the Judeo-Christian-Muslim edicts from the God of Abraham. No doubt you have conceived your own Twisted interpretations of the doctrine of your 'faith'.

Face the facts for once in your career as a cartoon character, Twist -- you are washed up. You have run out of arguments, even bad ones. Your cheerleaders have abandoned you. Your rants are getting boring even for me to read. Nobody takes you seriously any more, and nobody ever will. But I'm going to offer you a big opportunity here, Twist -- in the spirit of the 'faith' you claim to practice but don't, I'm going to let you walk away without any further mention of your name anywhere -- just as if your alias 'Twistedhed' didn't even exist. Now if you think about it, that's one awesome act of mercy on my behalf, because you and I both know that someday, sooner or later, your character 'Twistedhed' is going to be positively linked with your real name. When that happens, everything you ever did or wrote as your real self is going to be re-evaluated. If you have any integrity with your real name, it will be lost. If people considered you to be an honest, upstanding, God-fearing citizen, their perceptions will quickly change. People will see you for who you -really- are, and they won't like it any more than anyone in this newsgroup likes it. And yes, it -will- happen someday.
So think about the future, Twist. You have nothing here, and if you walk away you will lose nothing except face. Or you can hold onto your delusion that you are fully shielded behind your keyboard and keep posting your lies, but your reputation, credibility and integrity as a real person are in jepeordy, and when you finally crawl away in disgrace your real name -will- be identified as nothing more than a dried-up and bitter has-been of a troll.

Do the right thing, Twisty -- walk away while I'm still in the mood to practice what you preach.

Nope. That's the pervert Doug Adair N8WWM, in Toledo, OH, from one of his many fake addresses. He's a craven coward, you know.

WA3MOJ is Georgie Busch, in Allentown, PA. He has the intelligence to shut up once in a while. Doug doesn't.

Neil Down is George. Dumb@$$es for a so-called Keyclown-Free Environment is DouGay. So harrassment isn't illegal? Of course he's a criminal: He's a known repeater jammer and lot lizard.

Wrong. Steevie Mopedophile is the gay man that cried for an N8 personal appearance, it is on record:

Etc. etc. etc. But poor Steevie can CWY CWY WY all he likes but N8 WILL NOT good post frank...

Well I can agree with one thing that Frank has said as of late.

Landshark

"You agree religion is made up of "social rejects" and that those who attend church are "overwhelmed by science"?"

No I don't, but I think the gist of what he was saying was that its ok to screw up by your own actions, you can just say you're born again and God will forgive you. As for science, if you are a true believer then life began with a wave of Gods hand, to which I know is not true. But if you ask some people that believe that God created the earth and everything else, science is nothing but smoke and mirrors.

"And the bible says nothing anywhere that churchgoers "have" to like someone."

I can't honestly say if that's true or not, I haven't read it page for page. But you have to admit that almost every Pastor, Father, Priest, Friar etc etc put there own interpretation on the holy book to which is always

"God loves a sinner"

"This is Franky bullshit. Perhaps he is misapplying his own stench and coming up with another Twisted thought which he feels is a real threat to his methods on rec.radio.cb...IE: Love thy neighbor."

Well Twist, Frank can troll and that's a fact, but ever so rarely I'll agree with him on certain things. Now you'll see some sort of response from our friends here calling us names, but that's all it is..... names, to which can never hurt us.

See ya, we're delaying our annual Cabo fishing this trip, so the fishing for me will be delayed by a couple of weeks, so catch a few for me.

Sorry, but I have to disagree.

Even at the height of CB, when 100s of thousands of people were running illegal CB in one way or another, the yearly "bust" figures were just into double digits - it has remained in the 20s and 30s.

Most illegal CBers get ignored, some get a "Please don't do that" verbal warning, some may get a written warning,.
So, what do the very few big busts get... £1000s in fines? Prison?
No... a couple of hundred pound fine if any - and the illegal equipment snatched.

If the RA were "harsh", they would consider illegal CBers as "Pirates"... and give them the very large Pirate fine. Those using Amateur illegally would be hunted down like dogs and given the punisment available under UK law - prison.

When nearly everyone was using illegal antennas, they changed the antenna rules to make those antennas legal.
When CBers were illegally using the American frequencies, they legalised the band for CB use.
When they wanted American CBs out of the hands of CBers, they made it legal for Amateurs to convert the sets to 10 Metre - so they would buy them from CBers, make them legal, and save the RA the bother of chasing people.

If they were harsh, they would have put "No DX" and "no talking to foreigners" rules in place. They would ban the import and sales of the illegal CBs marked as "Amateur". They would ban the ownership or use of Amplifiers that work on CB.
America does all those - The UK does none of them.
I would say that our CB service has very few rules, and enforcement only as a last resort.

A few years back, a group of people set themselves up as self-appointed CB police. They went around looking for CB antennas and CBers - sending a list to the RA, for them to catch the licence dodgers.
You would think that the "bust" figure would have shot through the roof - but the RA couln't be arsed to do the chasing.
They now plan to remove the licence next year - so reducing the amount of illegal CBers even further.

Regards,

Peter.

I am not sure that it still exists but, for years, we had a Pirate radio

Think real hard about who cries the loudest concerning identities, and I promise, Ol twist won't even come to mind.,,well, except for those I

>You stupid

It is well documented, patiets who have the need for condescension toward those he/she interacts with on a regular basis (usually family) suffer a biological disturbance that can usually be traced to defects in the frontal lobe (of the brain) arena. This is usually accompanied by patient's low-self esteem, and an unhealthy willingness to view themselves as worthless (IE: destroyed ego).

> fucking assclown,

Your continual referrals of men's genitalia, frequent willingness to speak of body parts otherwise considered private with people of the same sex you do not know, coupled with a unique but unhealthy ability to inject such talk into each of your posts, tells your story quite well, tyvm.

> you made the comment about her posting

You are cornfused again. Because you have not the ability to walk and chew gum, you continue to make the mistake that others share such afflictions. Alas, they do not. One needs not be acutely aware of headers in this group (another subject that cattle-prods you) to be mistaken and misinterpreted by uncouth ruffians not unlike yourself, as being "concerned", only mildly paying attention. That you feel so strongly about such topics tells the rest.

Bottom line......for all practical and intent purposes, the United States consider LICENSED stations AND operators under its jurisdiction governed by the laws set forth by the FCC. It's why those fishing boats were popped not too far back for conducting their business on the freeband...they were way out in the Bering Sea, but they were registered US crafts.

Once again, Frank, for the record, I do not share the wounded ego you have suffered. I hav no clue what it is to delight in hateer yor warped, jealous little, wisted mind refes o s "cheerleaders". I don't use the term "Born again" and never have. I don't need to be born again, I got it right the first time. But, yes, God will forgive you IF you are truly sorry for your act. God's love and mercy has no bounds.

>As for science, if you are a true believer then

Well, to be precise, you don't know that any more than Frank does. If you and Frank have an inside line on Darwin's theory that makes it a law (fact), I'm all ears, and so is the scientific community, for that theory has been tried to be turned into fact since it originated, with no success.

>But if you ask some people that believe that >God created the earth and everything else,

Exactly. The point is, Frank's belief, is not any more credible than a christian's belief. The difference is, a christian won't condemn Frank for his beliefs, as he does to them,,,,,,they will, in his own mortal words "..turn the other cheek."

  "And the bible says nothing anywhere that churchgoers "have" to like someone."

name the incidents. show the links in the fcc database. show where legal

I can name 2 incidents where I was the VICTIM of anothers harrassment and the fcc was called in. However, I cannot find any mention whatsoever in the fcc data to indicate that I was a target of any investigation, charges you mean sheriff joe? heheheh. as for 555 being military. well, I have heard DoD traffic on or near that frequency a few times in the last few years (A "numbers station"). and it is listed in the fcc bandplan as "goverment allocated". one has to make an educated guess as to whom the "goverment allocation" is.

well, I have seen some of those channels come into more use over the last few years (you can thank bin laden and his bunch for that) There is a reason they do allocate such large amounts of spectrum. its the old "just

I didn't lump them there. they did that all by themselves. Being a former CB'er, I happen to have a real good idea of what was going on and when, and who did what to whom and what they used. HAVING BEEN THERE are the key words! Unfortunately, cb operators never had the benifit of an "elmers corps" to show them the right way of doing things and we, as hams, have to be their elmers. unfortunately, some hams have taken it upon themselves to go right out and blow away all the rules they AGREED to adhere to when they signed their name on the dotted line for their license. Now, how do you think that makes the rest of us look?

I don't care if it was a forge, alias, spoof, snoop or even a troll. the writing style was close enough to suggest that the original author and the "intended victim" were one in the same. all one has to do is run a semantic analysis of all the relivant postings by the author (and his various "trolls") to see whats really what. This sounded a little too much like the real one to mistake as a troll. However, if you say so, you say so. My opinion is that it wasn't a spoof. headers are easy enough to forge, but only so far (and with the amount of spam I see daily in my inbox at hotmail, I have gotten very good and determining where the posts of such "missives" actually originates).

Freeband operation is seldom discussed in other than the most disparaging manner in the Ham press. "

That is because it is a flagrant violation of law, which demonstrates lack of respect.

Let's have a closer look at this activity and its influence on Ham Radio.

You go on to make some interesting points. That you can, in itself, says something about your topic.

Isn't it sad that these law breakers with rotten attitudes can have ANY influence on our wonderful hobby?
Isn't it sad that they can be associated with us at all?

This contributes to why so many hams react in such an alarmed manner when changes are proposed to the level of testing necessary to enter our hobby.
The old timers see what is happening, and don't want to see a great thing ruined by an influx of people that demonstrate lack of respect and willingness to follow the rules.

There is a danger that administrations having problems with free banding might well move to stop amateur radio in their countries. It makes life harder for IARU at places like the ITU, which is why it really needs discouraging.
There are also places in Africa at the moment where even posession of a radio transmitter leads to 7.62mm pill being inserted in the owner - at high speed.

yes it's sad that some people have no respect for rules, but I would venture a guess that a vast majority of us would break a rule (even a law) when we think it harms no-one and we can get away with it. If you can genuinely say you've NEVER broken ANY speed limit EVER, then you may pass comment. It's no good saying 1 mph above the limit hardly compares to working 27.555, but the principle is the same, the degree is irrelevant.

If no-one else is using 27.41 - 28 MHz, these people don't see that any harm is being done, and they know they can get away with it.

Oh, and I've NEVER operated there, because it doesn't interest me and I wouldn't want to break the rules that I actually DO respect. But other people are willing to, and in the Great Scheme of Things it's not that big a deal. If they're willing to mend their ways and enter the amateur hobby properly, we should encourage them to join us.

Anybody....ANY of you...who wants to come around here and cry about freebanding being illegal and "we otta line 'em up and shoot 'em"...how many of you can honestly say that you have NEVER broken ANY radio rule EVER?? and then when you did your brain winked it off as common sense told you that precious little harm was done....a victimless crime indeed.
Now ya'll start lining up and admit to having come to Hamland from CB. There's no shame. Just a simple natural technological progression by interested hobbyists.

Now let's get to the real matter at hand of turning this into a code/nocode fight. I've turned my blender into a rotating fan dipole. 73's KE4ENX

"It is important to understand that a Freebander is distinguished from an illegal CB'er by the fact he uses a modified general coverage transceiver for his illicit operation while the CB'er uses an extended-coverage channelized CB."

Hmmm....I don't believe it makes any difference at all whether a murderer uses a rifle or a pistol to kill his victims....either way the bullet flies, causing the same result. Technical refinements and the level of sophistication used to perform the act do not alter its illegality.

Personally, I believe this article is either completely tongue-in-cheek, or it is an attempt to gain support from and provide encouragement to, those who practice illegal "freebanding" (no doubt a significant number of readers visiting this site). Either way, it's a load of crap!

By the way, it is important to distinguish between "humorous" crap loads and "serious" crap loads. Serious crap writers expound needlessly upon the finer points of crap, particularly its color and texture. Humorous crap writers often utilize simpler means to convey the important final result---STINK!

Some may disagree, but if you get away with an illegal activity for a length of time, you're more apt to try a little harder. Most speeders for example will turn into lane darters and sooner or later they'll come in contact with you with atypical results!

The same can be said for Freebanders. The knucklehead who's been selling those Marathon radios now makes one for 40 meters, with FM capabilities yet. Cut a wire and you're into the "unlicensed" portion of 40 (his words not mine).

Check out the web site www.davemade.com and see what this guy says about Freebanding.

It may be a victimless crime in some folk's eyes, but it is not! Get caught and you'll find out just how much you can be hurt personally.

I came into ham radio in the late 70's from CB. I never operated as a freebander, though I listened with a short wave receiver and came quite close to doing so. I knew CBers with big beams and amplifiers, and was enthralled with their collections of "QSL cards" from all over the world. In my experience, the really bad manners and operating practices occurred INSIDE the CB bands - the jamming, arguing, trash talking, splattering, "screw you" kind of operations were very rarely heard outside the 40 channels, perhaps because those who wanted to be obnoxious knew they could annoy far more people in the legal

CB band (and they were much less likely to be caught by the FCC).

I don't condone illegal operation. Over the years I have worked to convert interested CB/freebanders to ham radio, and bought up a few amplifiers to move them from CB operation back into the ham bands.

The author makes a good point - that CB and freebanding bring in new hams with a cyclicality tied to the solar activity cycle, which means another wave of potential new hams is occurring now. I think we should all do whatever we can to elmer those who are interested, to reach out to the freebanders not just to discourage their illegal operation, but more importantly show them and help them enter a much better (and legal) radio-related hobby - amateur radio.

Keep on elmering! 73 de kt8k - Tim

Like a lot of people my age, I got started in ham radio as an SWL, listening to hams on 20 meter AM phone, along with foreign broadcasts. The mass exodus to SSB in the 60's closed off this popular route into the hobby. It's one I'd like to see us restore.

Now, many, if not most,newcomers come via CB.

Since FCC stopped trying to regulate CB decades ago, it makes little sense to hold any hard feelings toward people who started there. It is a lawless wasteland, and those who survive to join ham radio are welcome, so long as they lose their CB jargon in the transition.

Freebanding, however, is an entirely different matter. I suppose it is possible for someone to obtain the equipment and operate without realizing how illegal this is, but I am suspicious of any such claims. I think that most freebanders are people who are drawn to the activity, in part, by the thrill of doing something illegal. Yes, I know many freebanders who went on to become good hams. I also know more than a couple who went on to become extremely bad hams - some who earned a full license, but went back to freebanding because 'ham' was too boring for them!

So, if you're a former freebander, intent on becoming a good ham, I would recommend that you not advertise your past.

By the way, lots of ham gear from the 50's had 11 meters on it. The Swan/Silconix 1011 was also an early darling of the freebanders.

What difference does it make if a bank robber says "please" and "thank you"? He's still robbing a bank.

Freebanding is illegal. And what makes licensed amateurs most irate about it is that WE can get busted, fined, have our equipment confiscated, or at best lose our licenses if we do something wrong. Why? Because the government knows who we are. Unlicensed freebanders are much less likely to be caught and prosecuted because nobody knows who they are.

Nice troll, by the way.

The author writes:

"Freeband operator to be certainly less technically apt but perhaps slightly more courteous and inviting than the average 75-meter operator".

I see....so even though the operator knowingly and willingly and flagrantly violates the rules, we should consider him/her a good operator? unworthy of criticizum? Ever heard of a polite hold-up man?

I CAN'T BELIEVE A LICENSED HAM WOULD WRITE SOMETHING LIKE THIS.

Perhpase those that are familliar with the author's voice should listen to the "freeband" to see if he is operating there.

Question for the knowledgeable folks here-- who exactly is authorized to use the frequencies on what we term the "freeband"? I'm not familiar with this area of the dial, nor am I familiar with the CB freqs. I came into amateur radio via amateur astronomy and shortwave listening, so I don't know anything about the freeband frequencies or who (if anyone) is allowed to operate on them.

I didn't get the impression that Clark was sugar coating or condoning anything, but only stating a few facts and using himself as an example of how a freebander can progress to the highest amateur license.

Is that so hard to stomach? I'd bet it is, because it seems to break several preconceptions.

Posting someone's e-mail address in a malicious manner is not only childish, but perhaps even more illustrative of ham radio's warts than is the OP topic.

Although I freely admit that I began my radio hobby on CB many years ago,
I cant sit here and justify operating illegally. A freebander is operating just as illegally as the guy running a kw mobile/base or in some case`s a multi kw mobile/base as is common on the CB band today. When I first got on the air on the original 23 channels, I was scared stiff of the FCC and knew that if I were to break rules and run excessive power, I risked getting caught. I also knew that if I ran amateur gear, or CB rigs with special mods or crystals in them I risked getting nailed. In Chicago at this time, there was an active FCC field office and they would not hesitate to knock on your door if you played the game.

Once the 40 channels came along and the FCC deregulated the band, all hell broke loose and it has become the circus it now is. It is true that alot of good and bad operators came from CB, but you also can say that many good and bad operators never even saw a CB radio let alone talked on one. Radio is radio, be it a CB or SWLing or whatever, its ALL radio and its ALL great fun. There will be those who break rules and make life hell for everyone simply because they feel they can. I could care less if the guy got interested in radio by CB or by 2 cans and a string, if he acts civil on the air and operates in a decent manner.

Its not my place to judge the operator on the other end of the QSO for things he did in the past on CB or even the amateur bands. That is, unless hes a well known jammer who takes delight in making life miserable for others. If hes friendly, courteous, and fun to talk to, and he has a legit callsign, thats all he needs to have. What he may or may not have done 25 yrs. ago on CB makes no difference to me one way or the other.

They may be courteous operators, but that still does not change the fact that they are operating illegally. It also doesn't change the fact that a lot of these freebanders venture onto the lower portion of the 10 meter band and create all kinds of interference problems for hams. I came to the ranks of amateur radio through C.B. One of the reasons I wanted to get a ham license in the first place was so that I could get away from a lot of the junk on C.B. and be able to operate in way in which I could legally talk to people all ove rthe world. Let the freebanders do what I did and get a ham license if they want to run power and operate on frequencies instead of channels.

Illegal operations, illegals; doesn't matter if the illegals call themselves Free Banders.

Use of ham radios modified to use illegally will expose people to an alternative to illegal usage.

Some illegals might migrate to Ham Radio (because they are INTERESTED in

Well, so this is what ham radio has come to? The "preschool" of ham radio is an illegal activity? Does that, then, teach us to be honest and respect the rights of others? Or does the school of illegality teach us to carry on those same attitudes of "the hell with the rules" if and when we become hams?

If "Freebanders" are such "good operators," why are they there at all? Why aren't they forgetting about illegal radio and getting ham tickets? Is it because they are too lazy? Or just that they prefer doing things the illegal way?

There are simply no words capable of conveying my disappointment that a ham would take such an approach to destroying the respect and honor that was once ham radio. I'm glad beyond words that this attitude is not really indicative of the majority of hams, but that it is there at all shows the signs of the malignancy that has eroded this once-fine hobby.

What is even worse, is seeing the other postings supporting his view! That means he is not one lone bandit on the hill, but there may be a few more hiding in the bushes.

Maybe it really IS time to turn ham radio over to the illegals, the Freebanders, the CBers, the weak and the lazy, and kiss it goodbye. Those of us who have invested so many years in this hobby, enjoyed the fraternalism it offered long ago, and the pride in skills and 'real operating' are watching with not only disgust but pain, the death of the hobby before our eyes.

Of all the approaches in the recent years that seemed bent upon the destruction of ham radio, this one is the one that will stick in my mind far above the rest, for this one has lowered ham radio to the standards of the Freebanders. It has removed the honor.

This is nutty.

The "Freebanders" are not only flagrantly violating the law, but also bring with them vast experience of doing virtually everything wrong; so, if they eventually become licensed hams, they're so far down the path of wrongdoing it will be difficult for them to stop and reverse the trend.

The "Freebanders" I've met at the local amateur radio Swap Meets (they do attend, in numbers) are about the least technically competent individuals I've ever come across, and it shows quickly in conversation. Most don't understand Ohm's Law, propagation, antenna theory, or basic operating technique -- and, unfortunately, they've been doing it wrong for such a long time, they're uneducable.

I don't think we should be looking to recruit from this pool. I'd rather start out with people who know absolutely nothing about two-way radio and are trainable.

These insolent malefactors almost never evolve beyond their criminal past. For instance, there are a number of these so-called free band types in my area using a repeater illegaly in the commercial 800 MHz band. Where did they get the equipment? One of these free banders stole handhelds from his former employer Nextel and gave them to his associates. Now, while chatting on 146.55 MHz FM simplex or Channel 17 in the CB service, they use the 800 MHz repeater as a "talk back" frequency. These clowns have incurred bad karma, they are going to get busted, what goes around comes around.

Not only are they fond of 800 MHz but they also enjoy playing music on both amateur and CB radio. They also like to use amplifiers to boost their power output beyond the FCC limits on VHF Marine, FRS, and GMRS frequencies.

Again, these criminal mentalities almost never outgrow their proclivities toward antisocial actions. In short, they deserve our complete disdain.

Actually it was the Swan 1011, (Later Siltronics, but still Swan) that allowed CBers to operate with high power on illegal (there's that word again) frequencies with just a slight modifications to the radio. The ARRL was so concerned about this due to member complaints about the unit being advertised in QST, that they reportedly told Swan that if they continued to market the Swan 1011, QST would not longer carry their ads. The Siltronics slight of hand headed it off. I always wondered why the ARRL did not do the same thing with Yaesu and the contoversy over the 101 at the time.

In terms of pure operating, I concede that there may be some good ops among the freebanders just like there are good pilots flying without licenses and good drivers who drive without them also. The problem is that these activities are ILLEGAL.

Maybe we should have a one time amnesty program for all freebanders whereby they go to the nearest VE examination location, sign an affidavit that they are engaging in freeband activities, and receive a General class license for their trouble.

Yea,,,remind us of anyone on rec.radio.cb? Several scumbag hammies here spend all their time searching for more than just emails linked to cb posters,,,,they want personal information, and when they are refused it or fail at attaining such info,,,they threaten that if they can manage competence long enough to get any personal info, they will use it against you in any manner they can conjure.....sort of like they do now with chosen user names. C. Frank Gilliland is one of those who threatens cbers concerning their personal information.

No, Mr. Oyen,,all youhave done is rant and talk smack about 'tracing people" via their email addy,,,another scumbag hammie. This was YOUR claim, and you were asked to back it in any manner you can,,,you failed,,,you turned tail,and ran, and now you pop up making yet other claims that you can't back.

You are the one that came out here ignorantly crying about ME, Eric, merely because you are too ignorant to comprehend that webtv can not crosspost and fell for a troll, hook, line, and sinker, and now are haing one devil of a time digesting all that lead in your hypocritical gut.
Your claims of illegalities concerning myself was brought to ME, by yourself, which I must apparently remind you. You then self-contradicted yourself and claimed usenet posts mean nothing and do not constitute proof of illegal behavior (I disagree, but that WAS your bneheaded claim). I ask of you the same you ask of me,,,,, show the links in the FCC database, show the links in the FCC database where action concerns me. However, you can not find any mention whatsoever inthe FCC database to indicate that I was the target of any investigation, charges, or other supposition. That shoe really makes your face turn red when you are forced to wear it on the other foot.

Hey, the claims were yours, first, Eric. Just because your lack of intellect was exposed by a fellow no-code that made you respond to a post that everyone except you were able to comprehend was a forge, is no reason to go to pieces with misdirected anger,

Your accusation towards myself was made first, Mr. Oyen. I asked you to explain first, your accusation concerning myself and so-called illegalities. What manner did you utilize to adjudicate me guilty of violating rules, Oyen, since you claimed that usenet posts don't count? Perhaps this magic enlightenment you can be used as your own personal litmus test. So, I ask again, by what means did you come to such a conclusion, Eric, concerning my illegalities? I feell, that you are but another bug, another angry, ignorant, hypocritical hammie that needs slapped around by cbers every once in awhile to make certain you stay in line and apply your bullshit standards evenly and across the board, not merely when it suits you. Thanks for illustrating your blatant hypocrisy.
You were played like a cheap fiddle by another hammie. Direct your anger to the right place, Oyen,,not with me,,I didn't write the forge that exposed your lack of intellect and gullibility.

I don't care if it was a forge, alias, spoof, snoop or even a troll. the writing style was close enough to suggest that the original author and the "intended victim" were one in the same. all one has to do is run a semantic analysis of all the relivant postings by the author (and his various "trolls") to see whats really what. This sounded a little too much like the real one to mistake as a troll. However, if you say so, you say so. My opinion is that it wasn't a spoof. headers are easy enough to forge, but only so far (and with the amount of spam I see daily in my inbox at hotmail, I have gotten very good and determining where the posts of such "missives" actually originates).

Absolutely priceless. I beg of you, Mr. Oyen, share your (ahem) wisdom. Allow the rest of the group access to your claims. Of course, your past claims of locating and tracing one via their email address had you run and hiding a few days,,,,several folks on this forum asked of you to illustrate such a claimed endeavor,,,you turned yellow tail and ran, only to surface a few days later to play up to a forge of Frank Gilliland's which played you like a PT Barnum sucker. It did a great job, too, as it showed your willingness, much like a good lemming and troll, to create, instigate and fan flames. You're a louse, Eric...a no good lid that continues to harm anything remotely associated with hammie radio.

You see in the real world Anti Girls do not exist but since they already know this and are so hurt by not being noticed in the real world, they spend almost all of their waking hours on this thing called the newsgroups typing away their little cum soaked sweaty hands and fantasizing about homosexual acts and wanting attention and needing attention and so so lonely. Meanwhil in the real world guess what???
THE BEAT GOES ON!!!
Hey anti girl or girls...
Dont do any more google searches dont do any more ranting and raving dont do any more homo talk...
Just step out into the sunshine and see THE REAL WORLD!

RESCUE RADIO: CALIFORNIA WILDFIRE COMMS WINDING DOWN

The Southern California wildfires are on their way to full control. This as the winter rains come early to the region. As a result, many hams who had been full time fire communications volunteers have gone back to their regular jobs and ham radio emergency communications efforts are winding down. Others are still on the front lines and now its time for assessment. Gordon West, W-B-6-N-O-A, spent most of last week at a Red Cross Shelter in the city of Fontana. He takes a look at the contributions made by the regions Amateur Radio communicators:

RESCUE RADIO: REPEATERS LOST IN SOCAL WILDFIRES

We all heard the grim statistics of the homes and businesses were destroyed by this years California wildfires over a million acres of land has been scorched. But there is one total that the mass media won’t report. That’s the number of ham radio repeaters knocked off the air by the blazes. While exact call signs are not yet available, we did ask reporter Matt Lechleiter, W6KGB, to find out which radio sites were most affected.

--
It's estimated that close to 30 repeater or remote base systems have been affected by the recent Southern California firestorm. These systems are either off-air, were before switching to backup power, or were destroyed by the fires. The number of systems actually destroyed by the fires is unknown - we'll follow up on this in a subsequent report.

Communications sites affected include Oat Mountain just north of Los Angeles, Sunset Ridge and Heaps Peak to the East, and Mount Otay near San Diego to name a few. Each of these major sites lost power due to one of the fires. News reports say that it could be over a month before power is restored to these locations. Until then, battery and generator power are keeping the commercial and amateurs two-way systems on the air.

There are also several repeaters that are believed to be safe but which are still off the air. This is because they live at more remote mountaintop sites that also lost electrical service to the flames. And just like the more accessible sites that I mentioned, it might be a quite a while before commercial power is returned.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I'm Matt Lechliter, W6KGB reporting.

If you are a Southern California repeater operator whose system was affected by the firestorms, or if you know of one that was, please send the details to us. We will include it in an upcoming report. Our address in cyberspace is nerwsline@arnewsline.org (ARNewsline(tm))

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: NEW GEAR FOR THE ISS

Radio gear from some well known ham radio manufacturers is in space. This, as the group known as Amateur Radio on the International Space Station announces the delivery of the so-called Phase 2 ham equipment to the ISS. Norm Seeley, KI7UP, has the details in this report:

A Russian Progress supply rocket has delivered a Kenwood TM-D700E, dual band transceiver to the International Space Station. The installation of this new radio will mean a significant boost to the power output of the ARISS station from 5 watts to 25 watts.

The Chairman of Amateur Radio on the International Space Station is Frank Bauer, KA3HDO. He says that the software for the D700 has been programmed for five modes of operation. These are for standard F-M phone, crossband repeater, APRS, packet and an emergency mode. Bauer predicted that APRS probably will be the default mode when a crew member is not actively using the ham station.

Next up will be gear from Vertex-Standard, the Yaesu brand folks. Bauer says that a Yaesu FT-100D, some SSTV equipment, along with new headsets, will be taken to the space outpost on Progress Flight 14P. Look for it to launch in January.

But says Bauer, that will be the endof the transport of any more ham radio gear for quite a while. At least until the space shuttle returns to flight in September 2004.

But that in itself could be a blessing in disguise. KA3HDO says that the equipment still on the ground will be tested this month at the Service Module facility in Moscow. This will permit making sure that the Phase 1 and 2 systems are compatible. RF testing will also take place.

According to Bauer, current plans call for the current Expedition 8 crew of Mike Foale, KB5UAC, and Alex Kaleri, U8MIR, to install the new hardware after ground tests are complete. Previous crews already installed four Amateur Radio antennas to cover HF, 2 meters, 70 cm and microwave frequencies.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Norm Seeley, KI7UP.

What about hams on the ground getting more chances to talk to the crew on the ISS? Bauer says he's been working with U-S and Russian space officials to have them dedicate a few additional hours each month for operation and amateur station maintenance. (ANS, ARISS K7CCC)

HAM RADIO IN SPACE: SPAIN SCHOOL CONTACT A BIG SUCCESS

Still with news of ham radio on board the International Space Station, word that the Ourense, Spain school contact on October 23 was very successful. 75 children and 25 parents gathered at Ceip Seixalbo school as European Space Agency astronaut Pedro Duque answered sixteen questions in Spanish using the ARISS radio system. All nationwide radio, TV broadcasters, and newspapers were present. Duque has since returned to Earth along with the Expedition 7 crew. (ANS, ARISS)

RADIO LAW: HAM ACCUSED OF AIRPORT SECURITY BEACH GETS CONGRESSIONAL SUPPORT

The ham who is accused of breaching airport security has gotten some unexpected congressional support. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Mark Abramovich, NT3V, has the rest of the story:

--
Leading Democrats have openly criticized federal authorities for prosecuting Nathaniel Heatwole, W-Zed-3-A-R. Hes the ham who admits to planting banned items on airliners, allegedly to show flaws in airport security. And some in congress think he is almost a hero for pointing out the Transportation Security Authority's inability to properly protect airline travelers.

Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi is quoted in print as saying: " "I don't think he had criminal intent. I think what he was trying to do was to show how exposed we are and what our vulnerability was, and he tried to tell TSA and he gave a trail to them."

Pelosi said that if theres any penalty imposed, it should be some kind of community service. And Representative Ed Markey, a powerful Democrat from Massachusetts agrees. In fact, Markey says that any community service sentence imposed on Heatwole should be with the TSA. And Markey adds that TSA officials should listen to him so that they know exactly how to prevent a terrorist from doing the very same thing.

And even the Republicans are getting into the act. Representative John Mica of Florida is chairman of the House aviation subcommittee. He said that prosecutors should concentrate on people who actually pose a threat, adding that Heatwole should not be the fall guy.

None of the politicians are not trying to excuse Heatwole’s action, but they more and more are beginning to agree with Pelosi and Markey who apparently believes that the punishment should fit the crime.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Mark Abramowicz, NT3V, in Philadelphia.

Heatwole is headed back to court on November 10th for a preliminary hearing. What was not expected is the level of support of some in congress and the obvious pressure that puts on prosecutors working on the case. (From published news reports)

RADIO LAW: THE BPL WAR - THE ARRL VS. MANASSAS VA.

The ARRL has put officials in Manassas, Virginia, on notice that the League will act on behalf of its members. This, to ensure full compliance with FCC regulations when the city's Broadband over Power Line system starts up in a few months.

Manassas is a suburb of Washington, DC. The League said that it was responding to media reports that Manassas has approved plans for a citywide B-P-L rollout in the near future. As such, ARRL Executive Vice President David Sumner, K1ZZ, has faxed the Mayor of Manassas to point out the potential for RF interference from and to any Broadband over Power Line data distribution system. ENFORCEMENT: FCC ISSUES 2ND LARGEST FINE IN HISTORY

Meantime, the FCC has proposed issuing the second largest fine ever for on a broadcast indecency issue. Amateur Radio Newsline’s Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, has the details:

The FCC wants to force Infinity Broadcasting to pay a fine of $357,000. This, for airing a shock jock radio segment in which a couple was said to been involved in the most intimate of human experiences in New York City’s famed St. Patrick's Cathedral.

According to news reports, the FCC proposed record forfeiture is in response to complaints from the public following an August 2002 broadcast of the "Opie and Anthony" show and aired over thirteen Infinity owned radio stations. The nationally syndicated show was canceled a week later and hosts were fired.

Four commissioners voted for the fine. The fifth said the agency should have taken even stronger action. He said that the FCC should have gone after Infinity's radio licenses and taken their stations off the air.

Infinity has 30 days to pay the fine or appeal. The company has indicated that it will use the legal recourse.

For the Amateur Radio Newsline, I’m Bruce Tennant, K6PZW, in Los Angeles.

--

If upheld the amount paid would be second only to the $1.7 million dollars Infinity paid in 1995 to settle several cases against shock-jock Howard Stern. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: USERS RESPONSIBLE FOR REPEATER INTERFERENCE

Users and not the operator of a repeater are responsible for interference problems to another New Jersey repeater system. This is the gist of a September 12th letter to Andrew Woerner, K2ETN, who operates a repeater bearing his callsign.

Back on July 7th the agency notified Woerner that it had received complaints that his repeater, operating on the 146.355/146.955 MHz channel pair, was causing interference to the coordinated W2RAP repeater on the same frequencies. The complaints alleged that Woerner’s repeater was previously coordinated but that it has relocated since the coordination was issued.

The FCC requested that Woerner provide information in response to the complaints. He did, and in a follow-up letter, the FCC said that it has reviewed his information as well as detailed reports provided by the Metropolitan Coordination Association and the Area Repeater Coordination Council.

The FCC says that coordination does not appear to be an issue in this case. Rather, the interference problem seems to result from users of the K2ETN repeater, which is located in Northern New Jersey, attempting to access that repeater from locations in Southern N/ew Jersey. As such its repeater users who are interfering with the W2RAP repeater and not the person running the K2ETN machine.

The bottom line. The regulatory agency says that this situation does not appear to warrant its intervention. Instead its calling on everybody to work together to minimize any interference to the W2RAP machine. (FCC)

ENFORCEMENT: FCC PROPOSES $120,500 FOR ANTENNA STRUCTURE VIOLATIONS

Meantime, its the fine of all fines for radio tower violations. This, as the Federal Communications Commission releases a Notice of Apparent Liability on October 31st. One proposing a $120,500 forfeiture against SpectraSite Communications, Inc., of Cary, North Carolina for safety-related violations of the Communications Act and the Commission’s antenna structure rules.

Specifically, the FCC is going after SpectraSite for its failure to register and light its antenna structures following an investigation conducted by the Commission’s Norfolk, Virginia Field Office.

The FCC says that the amount of the proposed fine represents the statutory maximum available. The Commission says that it decided to propose a significantly higher forfeiture than generally used in such cases because SpectraSite has a prior history of antenna structure rules violations. It says that SpectraSite has received three previous forfeitures in less than three years for at least 13 instances of failure to comply with the antenna structure rules. (FCC)

RADO LAW: EMDERGENCY OFFICIALS CONCERNED ABOUT PUBLIC ACCESS TO "MIRT"

Emergency responders are concerned that MIRT, or mobile infra red transmitters are falling into the wrong hands. Mainly, into the hands of people not willing to obey traffic laws.

A mobile infra red transmitter allows personnel aboard emergency vehicles responding to emergency calls to quickly change specially-equipped traffic signals in their favor. That was fine until Internet websites began offering the same devices for use by the public for around $300 a pop.

Unlike radar jammers and certain laser detectors that emit radio signals, the mobile infra red transmitter and other signal changers send out a beam of invisible light. Since light is not controlled by the FCC the devices do not run afoul of the agency’s rules.

Needless to say that this is causing concern for those who rely on the technology for legitimate needs. Don’t be to surprised if states begin enacting their own laws to control the sale and purchase of the units.

More on the situation and the device is in cybrspace at www.detnews.com/2003/commuting/0310/26/a01-307303.htm and http://www.themirt.com (CGC, others)

COMMUNICATIONS CRIMES: INDUSTRY VS. IDENTITY THEFT

Microsoft and other technology giants have launched an industry alliance to thwart identity theft and boost confidence in e-commerce. The Coalition on Online Identity Theft will campaign to improve e-commerce record-keeping, beef up Internet security and enforce penalties against identity thieves. The formation of this group comes in response to growing concern over the growing tine of identity theft crimes and government pressure on industry to help to thwart it. (Published news reports)

T-HUNTING NEWS: THE BIRDS OF FALL

If you are into hidden transmitter hunting, listen up. This one is for you. Keeping track of over 300 migrating radio tagged birds. Joe Moell, K0OV, is here with the details.

--

Since 1998, you've heard me reporting on hams and scanner fans tracking Burrowing Owls that migrate from Canada to southern states and Mexico. Researchers are so impressed by the capabilities of hams to do this sort of thing that they are asking for help with other critters. Right now, we're starting our biggest ever project, with more birds and more states involved. Nick Myatt of the Arkansas Cooperative Fish and Wildlife Research unit has radio-tagged 360 American Woodcock in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan, and he wants hams to help him find out where they're going. They're heading out now, and the list of possible stopover and destination states is big, including Southern Minnesota, Southern Wisconsin, Southern Michigan, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri, Eastern Kansas, Eastern Oklahoma, Arkansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, and Eastern Texas. If that's where you live or travel, please check my Web site for the list of active frequencies, all between 150 and 152 MHz.

Also at this time, Dave Sherman, a Biologist with the Ohio Division of Wildlife, is looking for help in keeping track of two radio-tagged Sandhill Cranes that should be leaving Ohio about the time you hear this. More information, including the frequencies, is on the Web. Go to www.homingin.com

Besides the frequencies, you'll learn how to identify the special characteristics of a radio tag signal, and you can subscribe to an e-mail list for fastest notification of these studies. That's homingin -- one word -- homingin.com

From southern California, this is Joe Moell K-zero-Oscar-Victor, for Amateur Radio Newsline.

Again, more information is at Joe's website. Its in cyberspace at www.homingin.com. And remember: homingin is one word. (K0OV, ARNewsline(tm))

CONFERENCES: 30TH ANNUAL EASTERN VHF/UHF CONFERENCE

The 30th Annual Eastern VHF/UHF conference will be held next April 16th to the 18th, at the Radisson Hotel in Enfield, Connecticut. Planners say that the conference has been moved to the spring time to help alleviate numerous conflicts with other ham radio activities and vacation schedules in August. Guest speakers, proceedings, articles and overall volunteers are being solicited to help out. Prize donations are also being solicited from vendors and members. More information is available from conference chairman Bruce Wood, N2LIV, by e-mail to bdwood@erols.com (VHF Reflector)

BEACON NEWS: C6AFP COMING BACK ON THE AIR

Steve Rutledge, N4JQQ says over the VHF Reflector that the C6AFP beacon in grid square FL16, should be operational soon. This, thanks to W4WSR who rebuilt the old one that WZ8D originally supplied.

That one took a lightning hit last summer. Rutledge says that he was able to salvage the RF board but that was it.

Rutledge thanks C6AGN, whose Q-T-H the beacon now lives at. This is in Coco Bay, Green Turtle Cay, Abaco, The Bahamas. He says that Bill should be back on the island on or about the time this newscast hits air. Hopefully we will hear the beacon sometime later this month. (VHF Reflector)

INTERNATIONAL - INTRUDER WATCH: PIRATES OF THE PACIFIC

On the intruder watch scene, VK6XW in Albany Australia reports over 130 of them in the ham bands in recent days. The majority are foundd on 20 meters and appear to be Indonesians, with the rest being Asian Intruders including a number of fishing boats. VK6XW says that the boats also use Amateur Radio VHF frequencies for ship-to ship communication.

Meantime, Chris Wright, VK2UW in Lighthouse Beach New South Wales Australia reports on other pirates in the Pacific. This group is using Amateur Radio calls such as VK4ZLY, several Zed L calls and American calls -- portable VK.

These are also on 20 meters and Chris says that they have become a major headache to a number of regularly schedule ham radio nets. (Q-News)

THAT FINAL ITEM: NYC HAMS RUN THE RACE

Kenya again ruled the New York City Marathon but it was ham radio that kept the race running. Amateur Radio Newsline's Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ, takes a look at the November 2nd event and the radio amateurs who kept it moving along:

--

Steve Mendelsohn, W2ML: "When people say 'why do you do it' my answer is always the same. I'm in it for the T-shirts."

--

And after 27 years as Communications Director for the New York City Marathon, Steve Mendelsohn W2ML, has to have quite a collection. But Mendelsohn is also the first to tell you that he is only a small part of a big ham radio organization that keeps all the races within the New York City Marathon moving. And 2003 was no exception:

Mendelsohn: "At about 8 o'clock we went to the actual starting line at the Verrazno Narrows Bridge and Alan fired the air-horn that's starts the race for the athletes with disabilities. And, 15 minutes after that it was the start of the wheel-chair race; and 15 minutes after that was the start of the hand-cranked race and fifteen minutes after that the elite women. And finally, at 10:07 our operators climbed into vehicles -- because we maintain control of all of the vehicles on the course for safety purposes -- and we use Amateur Radio to do it -- and down the course we went.

At the other end, we climbed out of the vehicles; everyone went to do their next assignment and from the time that the male winner cross the finish line at roughly 12:15 p.m. until the time that we closed down the Family Reunion at 6:30 at night and started to tear down, 411 hams worked with the other 12,000 volunteers to make this the smoothest, best marathon ever."

The Alan that Steve referred to is Race Director Alan Steinfeld, W-2-T-N. They were but two of the 400 plus Amateur Radio volunteers who came out this year. And Mendelsohn says that the hams were kept very busy, especially in assisting in medical communications as runners fell by the wayside:

--

Mendelsohn: “We had people went down virtually everywhere on the course. The hams were there with the doctors to help and provided a great deal of medical communications back to the Family Reunion area. This allowed the families to know that a runner had dropped out: That they may have been taken to a hospital or that they were simply going home.”

--

Mendelsohn says that between 800 to 900 pieces of health and welfare traffic was passed between 10:07 a.m. and 4:40 p.m. He also says that 2003 was the years of APRS at the New York City Marathon. Ill have that part of the story next week.

With part of the course of the New York City Marathon in sight, I’m Henry Feinberg, K2SSQ, reporting for the Amateur Radio Newsline.

As for the race results. Kenya’s Martin Lel, running his first ever marathon won the Mens division. He timed in 2:10:30 beating out defending champion Rodgers Rop. Meantime Margaret Okayo smashed the course record. She won the race for the second time after crossing the line in 2 hours, 22 minutes, 31 seconds, shattering her own record by almost two minutes.

Well boys, take a long look at Twirted for a moment. He REALLY needs to go. Look at how he went crazy on Eric Oyen. Look at how he stirs up shit merely by being present. Look at the number of people who are mad at hi m. Best for RRCB if he waddles off into the sunset. And by that I mean h e leaves the group, never to return.

Chuck, here is my opinion.....

You are an asshole, who probably has a chemical dependency habit. You finally went to sleep, woke up, and saw that NO-ONE was siding with you! This prompted a change in your styles (yet again). You seem to have a problem with whatever anyone else does, especially if it does not profit you in some way, shape or form. You have consistently lied to this N/G before, telling them all kinds of BS..... You are not coming back here ever again, then changing your on-line "Handle" in the from field. You are really a Piece of ..... Well, work. People are really tired of your cursing, foul language. Your idle threats are another thing. Chuck, if you really knew someone that had a contact with Jimmy Peng, then why did you not have most all of the 148f-DX radios that where produced. Why do you have such a little piss-ant operation that you have to go to other peoples web pages and steal graphics and logos. I am sure that boygonbad loved the fact that you took his send e-mail picture!

As far as you getting a full time job again.... Well, that just confirmed what I said in an earlier post. You act like the typical welfare recipient meth-monster. It is sad that you have to take things this far, and then back down. That just makes people think all the less of you.

If someone in your family really did die, I am sorry. I have lost a family member, and it really hurt.
Somehow, I doubt that. How many people would go on checking their E-Mail, and then go and post their private problems 9WITH A COMPANY WHOSE PRODUCTS YOU ARE TRYING TO SELL!!!!!! to a public forum!

you probably really do not understand the logic behind them telling you that they did not want you using their graphics. Chuck, in all honesty: Your page SUCKS!!! I could have done better using notepad. Someone else on this N/G has done (good job, Mike!!! haha hehe) a better job with notepad. Galaxy and Texas Star may have gone out and outsourced there pages to another company (like MOST large companies do!!!!). If that is the case, then why should they let you use their graphics/background for free.... ESPECIALLY WHEN YOU DO NOT EVEN GIVE THEM CREDIT FOR DOING SO!!!

But, Like I said.... You probably don't understand why this happened. For that, I truly feel sorry for you.

Just so you get this I also CCed it to your e-mail address.

I did not see or hear of any cber's helping out. Never hear of any cber's in space. A little jealous there maybe?

You've got to be kidding... he lives with his mommy and daddy? Well, now that I think about it, maybe that's not so farfetched. He certainly needs supervision. Maybe his parents don't know that Chucky is not taking his medication... like a good boy.

Yeah, cause I ain't a drug dealer like you are and got my own bad, dickweed.
and as for my parents, keep out of this discussion or else, I'll do you like I'm gonna do the CBGuy on my next day off, Take road trip and play some fucking alley ball with someones head.

Have a Day.

Or else what Chucky? So you are a mamas boy. That's sweet...
What happened to the defamation lawsuit? I'm still waiting for my subpoena... he he he Chucky, you're such a putz...
